What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE REGENT
"West Point of the Air" Romance and Thrills Blend in Stirring Film

Wallace Beery, who, in the past three years has been established as the pinnacle of box-office popularity, is to be seen in the most stirring dramatic role of his career in "West Point of the Air", coming to the Belle tomorrow (Thursday) and Friday, matinee and evening.

Beery's sensational success in "The Champ" was followed by "Tugboat Annie" "Viva Villa!" for which he won the International award for acting from Italy; and recently "Treasure Island". Robert Louis Stevenson's immortal classic. Each picture established him more firmly as one of the world's favorite character stars.

The Romantic Leads

In "West Point of the Air" his notable supporting cast includes Maureen O'Sullivan, as the youthful romantic lead; Robert Young as Beery's son; Lewis Stone, James Gleason, Russell Hardie, Robert Taylor, young handsome screen "find" recently seen at the Belle in "Times Square Lady", Russell Hardie, Henry Wadsworth, Robert Livingston and Frank Conroy.

As famous Randolph Field, Texas, the $10,000,000 Army aviation school, Beery's son played by Robert Young, finds romance with Miss O'Sullivan, the General's daughter. She offers encouragement to the student while he goes through the rigors of testing, flying instruction, solo flights, and finally, spectacular aerial maneuvers and training reviews with hundreds of planes.

Hundreds of Thrills

Thrills never before photographed for an air picture to be seen in the film include "power dives" from an elevation of ten thousand feet to the ground a "group parachute jump" from one hundred planes in the air at once peace time bombing manoeuvres of training planes over 2000 ground troops and other breath-taking aerial scenes.

Comedy Highlights

Hilarious comedy highlights are added by Jimmy Gleason as Joe Bags, an aviation mechanic who is content to sit on the ground while others fly and read his book on astrology, Henry Wadsworth, Robert Taylor and Robert Livingston add comedy and pathos as young flying students who are either killed or "washed out" while trying to learn to fly.

"Tit for Tat" is the title of one of the funniest Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy comedies ever seen here. A clever and very funny Mickey Mouse Kartune will be exhibited on the same program.

"The Thin Man" Tonight

If you enjoy sitting on the edge of your chairs, and if you enjoy being left completely in the dark while trying to solve a most baffling murder mystery, don't fail to see "The Thin Man" co-starring William Powell and Myrna Loy, to be presented at the Belle Tonight for three last times.

Next of Detective Tales

Alexander Woolcott declared "The Thin Man" to be the best detective story ever written.

AT THE CAPITOL
"Flying Down To Rio" Greatest of Revival Features Is Melody Extravaganza

Beautiful motion-picture shorties have been insured for their faces, their figures and their limbs and hands but those who appear in this musical extravaganza, "Flying Down to Rio," set a new precedent by having to be insured for their wings.

The production, which for the first time in talking picture history unites air thrills and musical comedy drama, is climaxed by the complete staging of a girl show in midair, the performers enacting their roles and their dances on the wings of planes soaring aloft over Rio de Janeiro.

Other beauties do pull-offs from the ships and perform on thin air while waited to earth via parachute. The story, dealing with the adventures of an American jazz band leader in Brazil and his romance with a beautiful native girl is enacted by Gene Raymond as "the boy," Dolores Del Rio, "the girl," Raul Roulien, the South American rival, along with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers as the comedy relief.

"The Best Man Wins"

"The Best Man Wins," a spectacular, thrilling film starring Edmund Lowe and Jack Holt with Bela Lugosi and Florence Rice in support, will head the new program at the Capitol Theatre commencing tomorrow. Based on a story by Ben G. Kohn, adapted to the screen by Ethel Hill and Bruce Manning. "The Best Man Wins" tells the exciting tale of two deep-sea divers, and their adventurous careers on opposite sides of the law. One become a diver for a smuggling ring and the other an officer for the waterfront police. Their meeting underwater in the final sequence is said to be one of the most breathtaking scenes in recent pictures.

Interpolated in the dramatic theme is the romantic rivalry between Lowe and Holt for Miss Rice's favor. Miss Rice, daughter of sports writer Grantland Rice, has been in pictures for only a brief spell, but has progressed remarkably since her debut.

"Maybe It's Love"

"Maybe It's Love," based on the rollicking comedy drama by the famous playwright, Maxwell Anderson, is scheduled as the second feature attraction at the Capitol Theatre commencing tomorrow.

With May Robson and Preston Foster featured, "Strangers All", the second feature attraction on the same program, is A-1 entertainment that can be guaranteed perfect for the whole family to see. Based on one of the grandest of all the May Robson vehicles. The last complete show commences at 8.30 p.m.

The story is an unusual romance of young love and lovers torn by doubts and jealousies, as well as financial difficulties and family interference.

The theme is so human and modern every young couple will recognize in it some of their own problems. There is an all star cast, headed by the beautiful Gloria Stuart and Ross Alexander, who has recently come to films from a series of Broadway successes.

Miss Stuart has the role of a pert and pretty stenographer, very much in love with a vivacious youth employed in an importing house, a part portrayed by Alexander. He is quite as much in love with her but doesn't propose. The boss' son begins to pay attention to her, and tries to get his rival out of the way by having his father appoint him as their Havana manager.

The thought of separation brings matters to a crisis and the young love birds get married. The entire family camps on their doorstep and the peeved husband takes up his old job as a diversion and gets into financial difficulties. They finally separate and the boss' son renews his attentions to the young wife which results in a rousing and most unusual climax.

Helen Lowell plays the role of Miss Stuart's mother. Henry Travers is her father, while Ruth Donnelly and Frank McHugh supply no end of comedy as the elder sister and brother-in-law, who think they know just how to run the young couple's affairs for them.

Joseph Cawthorn is the quaint old Dane importing dandy while Phillip Reed as his son, Dorothy Dare is the office vamp who makes a futile play for Gloria's husband. Others in the cast include J. Farrell MacDonald as a cop, and Maude Eburne as a suspicious landlady.

Captain Wen Reed will be shown at each performance. Complete shows commence at 2.30; 7.00; 9.10.

FORD ANNOUNCES SIX DOLLAR DAY

Minimum Wage Rule Affects 7,700 Employees in Canada

East Windsor, Ont., May 22 — (CP)—Wilson Campbell, president of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., in announcing today restoration of the $6 minimum wage, paralleling action of the Ford Company in Michigan, said 7,700 employees in Canada would benefit.

There are 6,500 of this total in the Border Cities plant and 1,200 in branches in Toronto, Montreal, Saint John, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Vancouver.

Mr. Campbell said the company's action was a "voluntary measure" and it was hoped to "improve purchasing power and thus to increase industrial production generally by stabilizing labor employment and thereby re-establishing labor income."

A minimum wage of $5 a day was set in the East Windsor plant in 1929. This was raised to $6 in 1930, to $7 in 1929 "to stem the tide of depression by increasing purchasing power." In 1931 there was a reduction to $6 and in 1932 another decrease to $5. The $5 rate was restored in March, 1934.

Reichsfuehrer Admits Britain's Need of Great Navy

Copyright 1935

By The Havas News Agency

Berlin, May 22—(CP-Havas)—The third Reich today threw its army program into high gear as the chancelleries of Europe weighed Chancellor Adolf Hitler's new historic 13-point program of foreign policy stressing his government's will to peace, while defending Germany's re-armament and forecasting treaty revision.

While the country re-echoed the applause with which 600 Nazi Reichstag deputies received their leader's address, the government promulgated the law re-establishing compulsory military service in the Reich and providing for an army of at least 500,000 men.

A navy 35 per cent of the British fleet in size or 15 per cent below the French fleet will be constructed.

At the same time Gen. Werner von Blomberg, Reichswehr Minister was named Minister of War, re-establishing a ministry, that has been non-existent since 1918.

With vigorous but adroit strokes, Chancellor Hitler, supreme head of the army under the new law, pointed the Nazi "weltanschauung" (world outlook) in the present European crisis before the brownclad Reichstag members.

Willing to Join

He announced the Nazi government's willingness to join in European peace efforts with definite conditions regarding any concessions Germany might make and defence of her re-armament.

He vehemently rejected t he League of Nations' condemnation of Germany's re-armament and justified the Reich's military move by charging other countries refused to follow her lead after the war in scrapping arms.

In Hitler's "war of conquest" he pledged German adherence to the Locarno Treaty and his government's willingness to sign non-aggression pacts with all its neighbors, with the exception of Lithuania.

This exception was made, he said because of the treatment accorded to Germans in the former Memel territory. He added however, this exception 'can be made non-existent at any moment" by the guarantor nations to the Memel statute.

The Nazi chieftain blamed Woodrow Wilson for having "paved the death sentence on international collaboration" with the Versailles treaty, France he blamed for disarmament failure despite projects offered by Great Britain and Germany.

The Reich was placed on record once more as "diametrically opposed" to Bolshevism because industrial socialism lays stress on the German people, while the Soviet mission is "international".

He said Germany is ready to sign an international air-interference pact "if non-interference is defined" and that Germany would not answer alarums.

Treaty Revisions Necessary

Germany, he said, welcomed collective security but considered treaty revision necessary by peaceful means. She would sign the "air locarno" but demanded parity with France, strongest air force.

All territorial clauses of the peace treaties would be respected by Germany, he went on, promising her participation in all efforts for forceful arms limitation but said the figure for Germany's new army will not be recognized.

The Reich's opposition to mutual assistance clauses in treaties was reiterated.

"I believe it is incompatible with my responsibility as chief of the state and Chancellor of the Reich to express the slightest doubt as to the possibility of maintaining peace. The peoples want peace," said Hitler.

"It must be possible for the governments to maintain peace. Whoever breaks peace in Europe the incendiary torch of war can only want chaos. For our part we firmly believe our time will not see the death of the west, but a resurrection. Germany makes its imperishable contribution to that work! That is our proud hope and our steadfast faith!"

The Men and Firms Who Helped to Make Zellers Belleville Store a Vision of Beauty and a Model of Efficiency.

Great Transformation

Zellers Limited, newest acquisition, to the city's mercantile and business life, makes its initial bow to the shopping public of Belleville and district tomorrow morning.

The new store, under the management of J. E. Klemanjo, with its various sections offering a complete line of ladies' wear and everyday household requirements at specially attractive prices, opens its doors at nine o'clock in the morning, and the management extends a cordial invitation to the general public to attend.

While the general policy of the new concern is to offer quality merchandise at popular prices at all times, the opening day is to witness the offering of exceptional bargains, it is announced.

Before being taken over by Zellers Limited recently, the premises had stood empty and deserted, creating an oppressive looking gap in one of the most advantageous sections of the city's entire shopping districts.

A Transformation

With the bulk of the work being undertaken by local labour and the general contract in the able hands of E. F. Rutherford, the transformation is now complete.

Hardiadbs surrounding the store during the course of alterations have been removed, revealing one of the most attractive and up-to-date store fronts in the city. The interior of the store is no less pleasing.

Executed by the Consolidated Plate Glass Company, Toronto, the front of the store is finished with an artistic vitrolite base, while the heavy plate glass is set into aluminite frames. Signs and awnings were supplied by J. J. Turner and Sons Limited; the signs being finished in green and gold.

Throughout the store, the electrical installation was carried out by the Finkle Electric. Especially brilliant lighting effects have been obtained for the show windows and for the interior of the store by the use of English holophane fixtures which, it is claimed, have the effect of transforming darkness pas into virtual daylight, without undue glare.

Large Stock Room

While business is being confined to the ground floor, the basement is occupied by Zellers Limited as a stock room, while offices are located on the mezzanine floor. In common with the rest of the premises the basement has been decorated with the same meticulous care which has been expended on the store itself, and shelving has been installed to accommodate the large stock of merchandise which this progressive organization carries.

In the store the walls are half-panelled in gumwood with walnut finish, the remainder of the walls and the ceiling being finished in spotless white, creating a pleasing contrast. Each of the numerous pillars in the store is similarly finished and in addition is panelled with mirrors.

All the various lines of wearing apparel and household goods are on open display, placed on tray-like counters divided into sections and in accordance with the firm's merchandising policy, inter-related merchandise may be found in sections grouped near each other. This plan saves the hurried shopper needless retracing of steps and assists the sales staff in giving maximum service.

Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Section

A section at the rear of the store, covering an area of 40 by 50 feet, the boundaries of which are marked off by a thick pile carpet, is set aside as the Ladies' ready-to-wear division, where dresses, coats, millinery and shoes may be obtained. This division includes special fitting rooms where the customer is assured of privacy.

Men's and boys' wear also finds a prominent place and children's things have been assembled in great variety.

Thomas Ritchie, construction manager for Zellers Limited, expressed gratification at the manner in which the local contractors and employees had executed the alterations, stating that the firm's policy of contracting for the work locally worked out entirely satisfactorily.

All-Canadian Organization

Zellers Limited is an all-Canadian enterprise, headed by Waller P. Zeller, President; with Herbert A. Hills, vice-president, who also occupies the position of Operating Manager and who is a director of the Company.

After the decision to open in business here, Zellers engaged J. Arnold Thomson as architect, and awarded the general contract to E. F. Rutherford. The general contractor's staff, all local men, did the masonry, carpentry, lathing, plastering and painting—and set up the store fixtures.

The contract for steel went to the Disher Steel Company, Toronto.

The Houston Company of Belleville supplied the lumber and building material.

Isaac Stephenson & Son, of Belleville did the painting and decorating of the new store.

Gold leaf and glass signs were executed by A-1 Sign Studio, of Belleville.

It was announced this morning that the new store would be officially opened by Mayor Tice at nine o'clock tomorrow morning.

EMPIRE DAY MOVEMENT

In his Empire Day message, a copy of which has been received by Col. W. N. Ponton, Admiral of the Fleet Earl Jellicoe President of the Empire Day Movement, which is non-partisan, non-sectarian and non-racial, refers to the recent Jubilee of the Accession of Their Majesties and to the fact of the realization that the "different portions of our Empire, scattered all the world over and comprising many races, are bound together in the persons of Their Majesties and the Royal Family, so many members of which have visited all parts of the Empire during the last twenty-five years and have been welcomed everywhere with enthusiastic loyalty." Earl Jellicoe points out the courageous manner in which the Empire has faced the most difficult years of the depression, which gives reason for pride and satisfaction. He foresees a closer knitting of Empire, a strengthened unity and a keener sense of comradeship. He prays that the Empire may be kept that outstanding influence for peace and security that it has been in the past.

With these sentiments and hopes all Canadians agree.

LAWRENCE IS GONE

Col. Lawrence, who made a name which will be sung about Arab campfires in tales like those of the Arabian Nights, and like those glories which were brought back by the Crusaders from the Holy Land, when the Great War is a long past episode in the grand march of human events, is no more. The scholar who became soldier when time called, became a figure in the world of strategy and knowledge and as the great unknown race of men then sank into a position of almost retirement from public life and finally faded out in a death which had all the elements of mystery. His fatal injury, his death, the rumors surrounding the last few days of his life, all fitted the disappointment to the earthly scene of one who was destined to flash across the theatre of the world's imagination for a brief space because of a great work. His end seemed as mysterious as his sudden rise to prominence and it is as he would have chosen.

His name will no doubt gather legend upon legend about it in the desert places. Out of such came the great Arabian civilization and religion which gave the world the ancient prophets in their home in Palestine, by the Jordan. Many stories about the great leader will be told. In him Arabia had an apt interpreter and he would appear to have absorbed some of the better qualities of the Arabian people. Great things have occurred in the desert of Arabia; out of it came Mohammed and the Moslem religion. On its stage Lawrence played his part and won a legendary name.

Col. Lawrence, the greatest figure of this age, will be laid to rest according to the wishes he often expressed to his brother, with quiet ceremony in a quiet country place. A grave in Westminster Abbey would have been his had he wished it, but it is typical of the man that he should desire to repose his world-weary limbs and body and soul in the earth or mould of the English countryside, where he could find surcease of worry and trouble after his meteoric career and marvellous public life.

CHAIN LETTERS

Chain letters have intrigued a number of Belleville persons who see visions of hundreds of dollars pouring in, finding their eyes to the fact that if one gets money somebody gives it away. The whole scheme is based on counting all the one can while the getting is good and allowing others to pay.

That's not high principle. Neil Smith, outstanding figure in United States public life, naturally was remembered by a thousand or two letter writers, but it showed sense which many other persons do not show—he pitched the lot into the wastepaper baskets after which the epistles found their way to the furnace.

Only as fool and as a means of increasing sale of paper and stamps can these modern methods of gambling be looked upon as of any value. The man who sends money to the writer of such a letter is gambling that he will get money out of the pot (unless he does it in mere venture and sport to see how many fools there be) before the rest of the world gets wary of the chain.

A few links of such a letter chain would take in every inhabitant of the earth (if there were not billions of stupid persons including the savages and even cannibals (if there are many of them left) and even those backward peoples who would not know a dollar bill or a ten cent piece if they saw them. The chain would take in the inhabitants of the moon and the planets and stars if there are any dwellers in these places. The magnifying power of this fad or frenzy is only equalled or surpassed by the magnification of the human eye of greed which wants to get something for nothing from somebody else on a bet that he gets there first.

THREE

Tonight the wind blows in from sea,
The moon peers down, which makes us three;
Wind, moon and I, good company!

The sea-wind tells of ports far out
As fairy lands we read about,
With names as startling as a shout.

Shanghai, Port Said and Singapore,
Strange men, strange gods and stranger lore;
The wind brings tales from every shore!

The white moon comes, cloud-riding, she
Who looks beyond Earth's boundary,
Beyond the land, beyond the sea.

She knows the paths between the stars,
Aldebaran's far torch, red Mars,
Sun after sun with golden spars.

And I? I am the listening one
Who hears what wind and moon have done;
For me their cosmic tales are spun.

—Aline Michaelis.!

FUNDAMENTALLY, the youth of today are just as idealistic, just as courageous, just as loyal as they ever were. What they need, though they are not always aware of that fact, is wise leadership, and one of the main causes for their unrest is that upon looking around the world they do not find enough of that type of leadership. If we of the older generation are wise we will not waste time in deploring youth's spirit of adventure and change; we will sympathize with it, co-operate with it, and seek to guide it.—Walter D. Head in the Rotarian Magazine.

FLORIDA, in the course of the past season, has entertained more visitors than there are permanent residents in the State. The official estimate is 4,750,000 tourists. This would be more than a quarter million higher than the population of the State in the last census, says the New York Times.

Smaller pleasure regions will, of course, show a higher ratio of strangers. The annual visitors in Atlantic City or Bermuda will be many times the number of natives. Even among the big play areas of the world only Switzerland would be in a class with Florida. The great European holiday ground draws about 2,000,000 visitors in a year. Its population when branched in Y-shape at the end.

The Saskatchewan Valley Authority resembled bird tracks, Dr. Caster explained. The hind feet had traveled into five-toed tracks, while the front ones remained little more than fins. The animal, sometimes of a cross between a salamander and a fish in appearance, apparently was not much at home on land, as there were indications that he had difficulty lifting his body from the ground. One specimen showed the mark of a tail dragging between the tracks.

Still the fossilized footprints found by the expedition led in the same direction, which raised in Dr. Caster's mind the question of whether his party had stumbled on a trail 200 ft. long ago. Had the animal followed by the paraspinibus begun to dry up, forcing him into a difficult migration?

Dr. Caster said he will seek immediately a complete skeleton in the same area that yielded up the footprints.

KNIGHTS DISCOVER GRAVEYARD GONE

In Full Regalia K.C.M.G's Demand Explanation From London

Knights, in full regalia or panoply, seated beneath the silken banners of their order, in the chapel of the Knights of St. Michael and St. George at St. Paul's demanded that their robed and bewigged counsel discover from the Chancellor of London (P. H. L. Errington), who presided with full-bottomed wig and scarlet silken gown, what had become of their graveyard.

The rector and churchwardens of the united benefice of St. Edmund the King and Martyr with St. Nicholas-Acons in the City of London were the petitioners to the court concerning certain rights of light and air over the churchyard of this united benefice.

Early in the proceedings it was revealed that the churchyard was missing.

"I tried to find the churchyard a day or two ago," said the Chancellor, "but a low surgery which is practically no churchyard, because, unless somebody—I don't know what — the churchyard has been almost entirely excavated for the purpose of building."

Counsel for the petitioners, H. D. Vahey, K.C., said that he was not surprised to hear that; it was a matter on which he was not instructed.

He went on to explain that a bank was constructing premises on the site of 19 and 20 Birchin Lane. They desired to establish rights of ancient light over the churchyard and a provisional agreement between the church and the bank had been prepared. Petitioners desired the sanction of the court to the agreement.

The Chancellor: "It is very extraordinary that this churchyard has been built up."

He said he would allow the petition to stand over for a few days while to get some explanation of what had become of the churchyard, and to get the documents in order.

FOSSILS FOUND IN OLD QUARRY

Cornell Scientists Study Prints Half Billion Years Old

ITHACA, N.Y., —A thousand fossilized footprints found in a quarry near Susquehanna, Pa., are being studied by Cornell scientists in the search for new data on the paramphibus, believed to have lived in this part of the world, 500,000,000 years ago.

The fossils were obtained by an expedition headed by Dr. Nelson G. E. Caster, the second important scientific find made by himself and students in a week.

The land-and-water animal was pictured as a large, four-footed different type forefoot than previously described. Those had five toes like flippers and had three fin-rays between the five slitherto assigned. Scrapings along the surface on one end has been mud also indicated that the fin-rays continued

GROUP WILL DIG IN OLD TEMPLE

Ruins of Shrine of Goddess in Sinai Peninsula

Cambridge, England.—The ruins of the ancient temple of the Egyptian goddess Hathor on the desolate mountain of Serabit el Khadim in the Sinai Peninsula, three days' journey by camel from the Egyptian port on the Gulf of Suez, are being cleared from the debris of previous excavations by an expedition from Harvard University with the permission of the Egyptian Government. According to word received here tonight the work is in progress.

Many questions connected with the temple have not been answered by the expeditions. The floor is covered by large pieces of broken columns and walls, which the native workmen are able to move easily with their tackle to make way for the excavating.

The temple was built and maintained by the ancient Egyptians solely in connection with the turquoise mines there, from about 3000 B.C. to 1500 B.C.

The mines were exploited from the twelfth to the eighteenth dynasties, and probably were also worked intermittently by the local tribes. The Egyptians dug out only bulk temples at mines. But when the Pharaohs first sent their workmen to Serabit in search of the turquoise they found a shrine there and one even before the natives had worshipped.

Besides the censers, the remains of sacrifices, have been found in the ruins.

Executives of Zellers Limited

Walter P. Zeller

President of Zellers Limited

Walter P. Zeller, president of Zellers Limited, who was in this city several days ago, briefly outlined the policies of the Company in an interview with the press, laying particular emphasis on the fact that every effort will be made to cater to local conditions and to the preferences of the shopping public of Belleville and surrounding districts.

Referring to the business policies under which Zellers Limited operates, the President of the Company said: "Primarily our aim is to get wanted merchandise at prices low enough to meet the demands of thrifty men and women; one of the factors making it possible for us to merchandise along these lines being, that we sell exclusively for cash. On our own we confine ourselves as much as is possible to the Canadian market, with imports from other countries or the British Empire. Over 95% of the merchandise at present in our stores, as a matter of fact, has been purchased within the Empire.

"Our second aim is to give customers complete satisfaction in the selling of merchandise and in the rendering of service. Every sale is backed with a guarantee of satisfaction and every member of our staff is selected for his or her ability to serve customers efficiently and courteously. With consistent adherence to these principles, we believe that Zellers will become an asset to the community of Belleville and that the store's staff will at all times endeavour to meet the preferences of the city's shoppers."

Mr. Zeller further commented on the definite trend towards business betterment which has been apparent during the past year, remarking that it has been well reflected in the expansion of Zellers Limited. He expressed pleasure at the fact that Belleville has permitted the opening of a store in Belleville, adding that the thriving and progressive business district or this city greatly influenced the decision to locate here.

Mr. Zeller is himself a native of Kitchener, Ontario, and is well-acquainted with practically every city and town in this province. He has a noteworthy record of 23 years' successful merchandising and executive experience which he has acquired throughout the Dominion.

Herbert A. Hills

Vice-President of Zellers Limited

Herbert A. Hills, prominent executive of Zellers Limited, who is in this city today to make a last survey of the store and its merchandise before opening, expressed gratification at the excellent job done by local supply houses and construction men in converting the premises at 238-240 Front Street into a modern, equipped attractive shopping centre.

Before contracts were placed for the building of the new store, executives of the company came to this city for the express purpose of giving the work to local men and to see that building materials were bought here. A number of those employed in the building of the store at one time, on a good-sized payroll.

The opening of a Zellers unit in Belleville is considered an important event in the expansion of the company. Mr. Hills advised the press in an interview, stating that Zellers' modernistic store had put forth every effort to assemble values of unusual appeal for tomorrow's opening. He said the opening sale might be of impressive magnificence to take as well as to Zellers.

With this connection, the Vice-President of the Company made several comments of general interest to shoppers. "Some of the merchandise advertised for the Opening," he remarked, "has been taken from our standard assortments and will be sold at less than our customary moderate prices.

"Other merchandise has been specially purchased for the Opening Sale, providing values which we believe to be very outstanding.

"We trust these Specials will be received by the shopping public in the same spirit in which they are presented, namely, as uncommonly appealing bargains selected to commemorate an unusual occasion.

"As customers become better acquainted with Zellers they will find the store consistently measuring up to its slogan 'Zellers to Thrifty Canadians'; and I feel sure that the day-in and day-out merchandising of this arrival will meet with the approval of thrifty Belleville shoppers."

Herbert A. Hills, Vice-president of Zellers Limited, has been appointing Manager and a Director of the Company. He was born in London, England and was educated at St. Dunstan's College, London.

William F. Ryan

Stores' Superintendent of Zellers Limited

William F. Ryan, superintendent of Zellers, has spent considerable time in this city, supervising merchandise displays in the new store which will be opened tomorrow.

"The comfort of shoppers is important," is Mr. Ryan's opinion, "and one of the first aims of modern display work is to place merchandise so that it will be easily accessible to customers. The location of one type of merchandise to another is carefully considered, so that a customer may purchase related items within a small area, and thus avoid the fatigue which generally results from shopping around over large distances of floor space.

"In our efforts to make shopping in Zellers thoroughly enjoyable and pleasant, we have aimed in every detail to consider the comfort of shoppers."

Mr. Ryan, who has been here for several days has been greatly impressed with the city's natural beauty as well as with its splendid scope for successful business.

J. E. Kienapple

Manager of Zellers in Belleville

The shopping public are looking forward with considerable anticipation to the opening of Zellers store tomorrow. Located on Front Street, the new store will add materially to the prestige of the city's shopping section.

Only a few finishing touches remain to be done before tomorrow, says J. E. Kienapple, Store Manager, after which the store will be in shiptshape for the attention of the public.

The new store has been designed for character and personality and is equipped with fixtures and show windows which are distinctively modern in treatment. All materials used in the construction and decoration of the store have been chosen from the standpoint of beauty and service; and Zellers will be one of the most attractive shopping centres in this city.

Among the outstanding divisions of the Fashion Sections, devoted to dresses, coats, millinery, shoes and accessories. Convenient, tiling rooms have been provided for the guesters of the fashion sections.

Of special interest are divisions devoted to everyday household needs, which include such items as glassware, towels, sheets, blankets and smallwares items. Men's and Boys' wear, a floor convenient place; and children's things have been assembled in great variety.

Mr. Kienapple, who recently arrived here from London, Ont., stated he was looking forward with pleasure to not only efficiently serving the shopping public in his capacity as Store Manager of Zellers, but to becoming an active participant in the civic and community life of Belleville.

20 YEARS AGO

MAY 22ND, 1915

On May 24th, there will be large crowds in Belleville. The 49th Battalion stationed here will hold a big parade, the last before leaving here en route for overseas. The city cadets will take part in the parade.

Mr. T. H. Thompson of Madoc was a visitor in the city today.

Mr. W. E. Tummon, Reeve of Huntingdon Township, was in the city today.

We are pleased to learn that the degree of Doctor of Philosophy has been conferred upon Belleville boy in the person of Mr. Norman Bertram Collip, M.A. of Toronto University.

Miss Marie Blanchard, Church Street, has been successful in passing the primary examinations at the University of Toronto.

Members of Oxford and Lyddord lodges, Sons of England, also the juvenile members, will attend service at Christ Church Sunday morning. The rector, the Rev. R. C. Blagrave, will officiate.

The moon changes on May 24th and we expect cooler, less warm and for until then.

Mr. V. Dorland, M.D., who was at one time a prominent resident of Belleville, died at Kingston recently at the age of 84 years. Dr. Dorland was a skilful physician and had a large practice here for some years. He erected several dwellings, terrace and business blocks in this city when at the height of his prosperity, but these were lost in financial council. When the depression set in about 1875 Dr. Dorland moved to Kingston.

At the organization meeting of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. held on Tuesday the following officers were elected: President, Rev. Canon Bogert; Secretary-Treasurer, Carl W. Roos; Captain, J. A. McPeet; executive committee, Messrs. Frank Doyle, H. Demill and W. Hall.

Mr. Allan Huffman of this city is spending a short time in Peterboro.

The steamer Varuna will run an excursion on Victoria Day to Alexandria Bay.

A despatch from Battleford, N. W. T. dated May 21st, states that Poundmaker's son is a flag of truce to-night, along with the agent Mackenzie, two women and a priest, to ask upon what terms he would be allowed to surrender. It is learned that Chief Poundmaker was badly broken up on hearing of Riel's surrender. The Indians were terribly frightened and piled their rifles in a tepee and hoisted an old British flag which they captured somewhere. They then held a big council and decided to ask for terms of surrender. There is great rejoicing over Poundmakers collapse.

Five Canadians Win 2nd Round Matches in Golf

St. Anne's on Sea, May 21.—(CP Cable)—The seven Canadians out of an original entry of ten from the Dominion scored all along the line as the British amateur golf championship progressed today, five of them winning their second round matches and two others winning belated first round encounters.

Going into the third round tomorrow will be Phil Farley of Toronto, Edward Innes of Montreal, Bud Donovan of Winnipeg, and Ken Black and Dick Moore of Vancouver. Black and Farley scored 5 and 4 margins.

Meantime the U.S. contingent heading for the Little Jug, St. San Francisco, defending champion, was whittled down from 11 to 7, the latter including two entrants, who have not been called to play until the third round tomorrow.

In a sharp form reversal, contrasting yesterday's floundering exhibition, Little gave a spectacular performance in eliminating Eric Martin-Smith, former title holder, in the second round. Little won 4 and 3

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Noranda advanced 1c and before encountering offerings which pushed it back to around $42.25 where it closed holding a gain of 55 cents. Sherritt Gordon closed with a small advance while gains were registered for Mining Corporation, Sudbury Basin, Rio Missouri, Pend Oreille and Coast Copper. Closing prices for the all-vers, including Eldorado, Bear, Premier, Peterson-Cobalt and Bear were slightly higher.

Little Long Lac gold registered a loss of about 25 cents. Hollinger weakened slightly and Wright Hargreaves sold down 25 cents to $4.50.

Base Metal stocks of the Toronto mining list firmed up on good volume today but slipped a little when the market slowed down to a crawl. Wall Street's interpretation of the veto proceedings at Washington, a sharp advance in-the quotation on bar silver found prices for the silver stocks temperarily but the gains were lost before noon after which the list remained sleepy on small turnover.

Senior golds boarded few and unimportant changes. Little Long Lac pushed up to $6.05 and then dropped to $5.50 while prices were steady for Bradian, Sylvanite and Pickle Crow and lower for Macassa and Gunnar.

Noranda was a morning feature. It touched $43.00, a new high for the year but half the gain was lost under profit-taking.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Consolidated Smelters responded to the advance for silver by moving ahead about four points to its high mark in more than a year. Nickel registered a fractional advance and Brazilian chafed up a net gain of about ¼. Ford "A" recovered a morning sag and the liquor shares finished the day with fractional losses.

Imperial Oil's advance of ¼ encouraged the rest of the group and narrow gains were boosted for International Petroleum, Superior Interprovincial Pipeline, Supertest Common and McColl Common. Higher prices ruled for Steel of Canada and Consumers Cas.

Firm to higher prices were registered in the steels for the Steel of Canada issue, United Steel and Page Hersey.

Following a little opening action, the industrial share section slowed down to await the financial district reaction to President Roosevelt's veto of the Patman Bonus Bill. While things were moving the oils held the volume leadership as small price gains and strength was also in evidence in the metal, food and miscellaneous groups.

Smelters and Nickel held narrowly to the up side, the liquor shares weakened slightly. Ford "A" was down while an active demand sprang up for Brazilian, stimulated by the announcement of another increase of earnings and the price advanced ¼.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 22—(AP)— The stock market digested the president's message with speed to congress today and apparently found little alarming in the gold-inflationary context.

Gains of fractions to around a point were recorded by Liggett & Myers "B", Du Pont, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Curtiss-Wright, Warehouse, U. S. Smelting, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Amerada and Standard Oils of New Jersey and California. Profit taking brought declines of 1 to 2 points in Columbia Pictures, American Can and Allied Chemical. Late in the day selling in Transfers approximated 1,150,000 shares.

May be Benched Before the Third

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—There was a whisper around the Legislative Buildings today that Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn has gone into training for his 1935 baseball debut.

The Premier will not remain in his office until Monday and in the meantime has a triple-header pitching ordeal on Victoria Day. He will heave the first pitches in games at St. Thomas, Aylmer and Sparta in his home district. Present plans call for three innes in each game, if he isn't benched before the third.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Opening feeling on the Toronto Livestock Market today was easy as calves and sheep sold steady, and very steady and hogs and lambs, as usual, were unsettled. Holdover from yesterday was 800 cattle.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture were 170; calves, 360; hogs, 410; sheep and lambs, 200.

With cattle trade dull, a few lots of choice butcher cattle sold at $6.90 to $6.50. A few medium to good quality steers went at $6.75 to $6.50.

Calves were firm at $6.50 to $7.00 for choice vealers with a few tops at $7.50. Common to medium grades sold mostly at $3.50 to $5.50.

Hogs were unchanged with packers bidding $9.00 off trucks for bacon. There was no early sale on this grade.

Spring lambs were easier at $8.00 to $7.00 each for the majority. Top feed-lot lambs were offered. Sheep were steady, selling at $3.50 to $3.50 cwt. for good ewes.

HOGS

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Bacon-hog prices showed an upward movement at reporting market points today. Barrie and London prices were up 15 cents. Kitchener showed a 25-cent gain, Brantford rose 20 cents and Peterborough 10 cents. Chatham, Stratford and Hull hog prices were unchanged. Today's prices:

Barrie, $8.65; Brantford, $8.85; Chatham, $8.25; Hull, $8.75; London, $8.65; Peterborough, $8.50; Stratford, $8.50; Kitchener, $8.75.

LOCAL GOLFER SCORES AN 82

Carrying the colors of the Bay of Quinte Country Club, Albert Faulkner today tallied a net score of 82 strokes as he started play in the annual Hiram Walker Invitation Golf Tournament at Lakeview. He had a handicap of twelve.

In a stretch for the ball are Willie Ahlin and George Cummings, both of Patrick Thistles and both members of the Scottish All-star football team which will play in United States and Canada. This bit of action was snapped as they worked out in New York before taking on Philadelphia Germans in their first North American match. Cummings, right, doesn't seem to enjoy the jolting much.

Three Newcomers Will be Introduced For First Time

JUNIORS UP

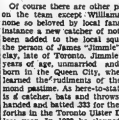
"Play Ball!"

King Baseball will officially be ushered in before Belleville and district fans on the morning of May 24th, when the Kingston Ponies, Belleville's ancient sport enemies, will provide the opposition for the opening of the C.O.B.L. season in Belleville. All of the opening day flourishes will precede the actual game, but what the fans most dearly want to hear is that long drawn out cry of the umpire—"the batteries for today's game, etc."



"Batter up"

The local diamond has been completely groomed and everything is in readiness for the most gala opening day ceremony, that has been witnessed in Belleville since Hector was a pup. Last season the Belleville ball club made every creditable showing in the C.O.B.L., but with new surroundings, more prolific results are being looked for by the fans in 1935. New faces have been added to the team, a complete new battery will adorn under local colors, while in general the club has undergone the most strenuous pre-season training period in many years. A new era in baseball circles is looked for by many, but the crowning climax of all will be when the umpire announces the pitcher for Friday morning's game — Jack "Chief" Williams—after which the fans will settle down to witness their first game of the season.

"One Out"

Williams Well Liked

Of course there are other players on the team except Williams, but none so beloved by local fans. For instance a new catcher of note has been added to the local squad in the person of James "Jimmie" Barclay, late of Toronto. Jimmie is 25 years of age, unmarried and was born in the Queen City, where he learned the rudiments of the diamond pastime. As here-to-stated he is d catcher, bats and throws right handed and batted .333 for the Danforths in the Toronto Ulster League last year. In 1933 he slapped the spheroid at the .290 clip, while catching at Kirkland Lake in the Northern League, while in 1932 he rattled the pellett at the rate of .310 in the Windsor League. In Toronto, the year previous batting .325 for the Native Sons team in the Greenwood Park League. Barclay is a likable lad with plenty of baseball experience and should score win his way into the hearts of local fans.

"Strike"

As for the hurling corps no introduction of Jack "Chief" Williams is necessary to local baseball enthusiasts. Williams has many a day left-handed his way into the hearts of the Belleville fans and will always be their idol on the hilltop. Then there is elongated Ernie Smith, who came into his own in senior baseball circles last season by hurling numerous masterful games for the old Nationals on the road. Smith is expected to be a consistent winner for the Stewart-Warners early but sharp breaking curve ball in 1935. Ernie has pitched all of his baseball in Belleville, being a product of our own junior teams and will doubtlessly get the opening pitching assignment in Kingston today. The new addition to the Radio's hurling staff is Arthur "Art" Calhoun, late of the Toronto G. & W. Grads, the team to eliminate Peterboro in the O.B.A.A. play-downs last fall. Mrr. Calhoun's little boy is noo married yet. He is 22 years of age and competed five games for the formidable "Grads" last year, winning four and losing one. In 1933 he hurled for the Danforths in the Ulster Stadium League where he won 13 and lost two, while the year previous he had a most successful season, while playing junior baseball with the old Hillcrest juniors in the T.A.B.A. Art Calhoun is a right hander boasting of plenty of speed and a drop, that bewilders the better class of batsmen.

"Three Out"

Another newcomer to the local baseball club is Oscar "Oscie" McElroy, also a Toronto lad, who has played all of his baseball in the Queen City and consistantly been a hard hitting performer. Oscie is a third baseman par excellence and has impressed the fans with his work during the pre-season training period. He was born in Toronto 24 years ago and both bats and throws right handed. For instance he bit at the .320 clip for the Rotol Eaton club in the Western City League last year, but his most successful season was in 1933, when he lined up with the Vermonts of the same league and hit .340, the Vermonts advancing to the senior finals versus St. Thomas. He also saw service in the Viaduct League and hit .385 for the Columbias. McElroy has a good batting eye and an excellent throwing arm. Another new-comer to start with the Radios will be Earl "Soxy" Gray, who graduated from the local junior ranks and is considered one of the best junior fly-chasers since the time of "Wicky" Ross. Gray is a natural outfielder and is fast learning the rudiments of batting in senior company.

"A Double Killing"

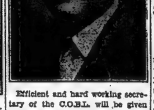
The remainder of the Radio squad are all seasoned and veteran ball players insofar as local fans are concerned. For instance Roy Smith of Trenton will hold down the initial sack, Roy leading the team in the matter of runs batted in during 1933 and 1934. At the keystone sack Earl "Sonny" Green, leading hitter of the Nationals last year, will again hold forth. "Sonny" has proven himself the most versatile player on the local club for many seasons, always to be counted on to fill in at any pos when need most. He has proven himself a most valuable player in the ranks of baseball in Belleville in years past. He was a member of the Nationals when they won the O.B.A.A. senior title in 1928. Dean Ford, who starred for the locals last year, will be back at shortstop making sensational plays, it is hoped. Ford covered himself with glory his first year in the C.O.B.L., by leading all short-stops in the C.O.B.L. In the outfield, Alex Weir will again lead the squad of fly chasers, being the veteran players of the team, now that "Peeney" Mills has retired to the bench. Peeney Kerr is a natural ball-hawk and covers more than the usual amount of ground. The trio of Weir, Kerr and Gray will go to make up one of the most fleet-footed outfields ever to grace local uniforms.

The alternates will be Earl Darrah outfield, Mel Little and "Nicky" Bero, two juniors stepping up as infielders.

Although "Peeney" Mills and Manager Young have a young fighting team at their disposal, while the B.A.B.A. is endeavoring to elevate baseball locally and need only the whole-hearted support of the fans to once again bring baseball honors to the Quinte City. The grandstand should see its largest crowd in years, when the curtain cry "Play Ball" on the morning of May 24th to open the C.O.B.L. season.

W. E. ROWESOME

President of the Belleville Amateur Baseball Association, and General Manager of the Stewart-Warner Alemite Company in Canada will be behind the plate to receive the opening pitch from the Mayor.



JACK WILLIAMS

Southpaw ace of Stewart-Warners, who will likely draw the assignment from Coach Mills to pitch the opening game of the season on Friday.

"New generations are coming on and science and new inventions and the advance in human intelligence will solve many problems that now seem insurmountable."—Andrew W. Mellon.

NEWTON THOMPSON

Efficient and hard working secretary of the C.O.B.L. will be given a shiny new bat to propel, the first pitch of the season to a distant corner of the diamond.

W. J. 'PEENEY' MILLS

Coach of the Stewart-Warners and who is quite optimistic about the chances of the team in the coming C.O.B.L. race. "Peeney" will be on the sidelines at the opening, directing the team from the bench instead of behind the catcher's mask.

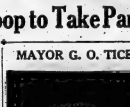
Opening Ceremonies Arranged Mayor, Prexy of Association Secretary of Loop to Take Part

Game of Friday Will Have All Frills of Opening

CALLED AT 10.15 A.M.

Support of Fans is Requested by The Management

Under new management, under a new name, the Stewart-Warners will parade at the Fair Grounds on Friday morning and shortly after the official ceremonies are completed, the team will race to their positions, in flashy new uniforms, the umpire will call "Play ball" and the 1935 season for the C.O.B.L. will be underway. Opening day has a certain attraction, that no other baseball day in the year has and this year will be no exception.



During the winter and early spring plans were laid by men prominent in sport for years in this city to have a real ball park and from this idea the Belleville Amateur Baseball Association was formed. There was one moving idea behind the whole scheme, that being the advancement of baseball among the younger element of this city. The boys of teen age will be the ball players of tomorrow and the B.A.B.A., are on the right track. Besides the senior team there will be operated in this city an intermediate franchise and also a junior league in which four teams will perform. The surface has only been scratched and next year it is expected more spade work will be done. Too much credit cannot be given members and directors of the B.A.B.A., for their efforts and the citizens generally are behind their effort.

Opening Ceremonies

But the fans are concerned with opening day ceremonial and the B.A.B.A., have provided a short but snappy opening. The pennants won by the senior team in years gone by will be pulled to the top of the flag pole, the band will play a popular air, finishing with the National Anthem. The teams, Belleville and Kingston, with dignitaries in baseball will be grouped about and one short address will be given. The umpire will then take charge and then will follow a little scene as to how not to pitch, bat or catch. This little stunt will be put on by Mayor George O. Tice, who will do the hurling, Ernie Rowesome, who will be the receiver, and Newton Thompson, who will be the batsman. With this ceremony over the Stewart-Warners will settle down and proceed to take Kingston Ponies into camp.

Baseball followers and they are legion in this district will have a team worth cheering for this year. The players have been carefully selected for the several positions, and they are faithfully carried out a strenuous training season and are ready for the issue. The team should be supported throughout the season and instead of knocking use a boru. The directors are always open to constructive criticism for the good of the team and welcome suggestions for the betterment of ball in this city There are a number of new players with the team this year and it is up to the fans to give them a real Belleville welcome. The newcomers are a fine gentlemanly type of youth and will no doubt strive to uphold the reputation, that Belleville teams have on foreign fields.

MAYOR G. O. TICE

An ardent supporter of baseball in this city for many years, Mayor Tice has been given the honor to throw the first ball at the opening of the season on May 24th.

Yesterday we ran into Norman ax" Walsh of Kingston who in-orms us he will not be able to um-ire in the O.H.A. this year owing business connections. Walsh was ected by the Ponies as one of their athletic for the coming season. Frank Corrigan and George Baker of Gananoque. Walsh was slated to officiate the opening O.H.A. game in Belleville on the 24th along with H. G. "Twigg" Crooks, but Walsh has relinquished his umpiring endeavors for the season, he says. Doubtlessly Woodley and Corrigan will officiate when the Kingston and reverse their positions on Victoria Day morning when the "Radios" make their initial bow before the home crowd in a morning struggle with the Punks.

Following last night's final pre-season work-out at the Fair Grounds the members of the Stewart-Warner ball team were issued their uniforms all newly and nicely lettered while new two-tone windbreakers were also presented to the players. The windbreakers carry Stewart-Warner colors and are made of two different shades of blue, the body being a dark blue while the sleeves are of a lighter blue in shade. They are real nifty. The "Radios" left by motor for the Limestone City at 5 p.m. today and Coach Mills announced that either Ernie Smith or Art Calhoun would be given the pitching assignment, depending on the atmospheric conditions. Regardless of the outcome of today's game in Kingston the fans can almost be sure of seeing Jack "Chief" Wilkins in action versus the Ponies on Friday morning when the locals open before the home crowd.

Officially the golf season will be opened on Victoria Day with a men's sweepstake in the morning and a mixed two ball foursome in the afternoon. Golfers of the Bay of Quinte Country Club special golfing events are also being planned to usher in the season. Incidentally Jock Mitchell, the pro out at the Belleville Golf Course, is out all our greens at the Belleville Golf course will be available while new flags have been erected at each green.

Elsewhere in today's issue are the new racing rules recently drafted by the B.R.A.C. point racing committee. These rules will be strictly adhered to during each sailing race this season and should be thoroughly understood by the various competitors before the season opens on Friday.

In order to accommodate the overflow crowd that is expected to be on hand at Thursday night's wrestling bouts the arena management was forced to procure an added number of ringside seats. "Not since we started staging the wrestling bouts in the arena has there been such a pre-match demand for ringside tickets as there has been during the past twenty-four hours," stated one of the members of the Kiwanis Club today. It seems that last week's main bout just about said the grappling game in this town with the result that the largest crowd of the season is expected at the arena tomorrow evening. Another added feature for the return bout between Al Dunlop and Johnnie Gyroffy is the announcement that the Parnell-Petroff match would be staged over the one hour limit, but both bouts will be two falls. Incidentally the winner of this Parnell-Petroff bout will be given a crack at the winner of the Dunlop-Gyroffy match. Judging by what is still talking about last week's donnybrook, bet we find the fans split in two factions for the who really is the better man, Dunlop or Gyroffy. Although the fans do not like Dunlop's pugnacious and unorthodox methods of wrestling some of them readily agree he is one tough customer. Thursday night's result will tell the tale, however.

To officially open the lawn bowling season, the annual President versus Vice-President's match of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club will be held on Friday afternoon. Incidentally the Belleville lawn bowlers enjoy the largest membership since their moving to their new greens at the Fair Grounds. President C. A. Peck and his able body of executive workers have laboured long but at last have the organization on a substantial basis. At present the club has a paid up membership of 300 lawn bowlers, 65 of which are lady members. The club hopes to add one hundred more members next season and also erect two or maybe three new greens. In the meantime however, no more new members will be accepted for the year 1935. "Congratulations Belleville lawn bowlers".

It was announced today that three Cobourg and two Campbellford lacrosse players would be added to the roster of the Aajmaa Club for their exhibition lacrosse game at the arena on Friday night. The local squad is bringing the fast Scarboro "Grads" to town to officially open the season.

BOONE BOOMED HOMER TO WIN GAME FOR LEAFS

Trailing Rochester by 2 Runs When Hit Came in Ninth

BEARS DROP

Now Two Games Behind Owing to Defeat by Syracuse

Thanks to a timely home run by Manager Ira Boone and the fine pitching of Bob Coombs, Toronto Maple Leafs today held a two-game advantage over Newark Bears in the battle for the International League pennant.

With two mates on base and the Leafs trailing Rochester Red Wings by two runs yesterday, Boone parked the ball over the fence to give the league leaders a 6-5 triumph. Earlier in the game the Toronto boss had cracked out a triple and a single.

Coombs' part in the advance of the Leafs came in Syracuse Chiefs' game with the Bears at Newark. The lanky right-hander was touched for nine hits but kept the Bears away from the plate until the ninth as the Chiefs thumped out a 7-4 victory.

The Bears skidded dangerously close to third place as Buffalo Indians defeated Montreal Royals 12-10 to leave only a half-game separating the two teams.

Although Gus Dugas, Montreal outfielder, slugged out two home runs, the Blanks took advantage of two costly errors in the first two innings to pile up a six-run lead and never were headed.

Albany Senators won the first night game of the International League season when they bombarded four Baltimore pitchers to win 11-6 despite home runs by George Puccinelli and Woody Abernathy. Frank Peters hit a home run for the Senators in the fifth inning which saw the upstate team score six times.

"Turtle Darby" Has Contestants All Heated Up

Baltimore, May 22 (AP)—While officials predicted the attendance record of 3,000 would go by the boards, 50 contestants in the Johns Hopkins University Hospital's 6th annual "turtle derby" meandered aimlessly about their paddock today, apparently oblivious pastime for the epic 35-foot run was fast approaching.

Staff doctors groomed their charges for a wholesale assault on the record time of 32 2-5 seconds for the distance, set last year by Major Leaf, Canadian entry.

Dr. R. Carmichael Tilghman reported the contestants, while not exactly ill-humored, were "certainly of high-strung temperament."

"Daffy" Dean Charged With Hurling "Bean Ball" and Riot is Narrowly Averted

"Good Old Days" Are Returning to National Loop

SWEEP FOR EAST

Chicago White Sox Lengthen Lead in American Race

By HERBERT W. BARKER

The grayhaws who sit close to the fireside and mutter about the "good old days" had better start reading the sports pages. Here the ushering in season is only five weeks old and already two near-riots have enlivened—or marred, depending upon the point of view—proceedings in the National League where young Ford Frick is serving his first term as president.

Pittsburg Pirates and the Chicago Cubs were the combatants the first time; now it's the Phillies and the St. Louis Cardinals, with Jerome "Daisy" Dean occupying the spotlight as usual.

The Phillies won a 7-6 victory over the Cardinals yesterday, but only after two hours and 44 minutes of furious scrapping that finally subsided when the last player was ejected.

The disturbance began in the first when Bill Delancey, Card catcher, was chased off the bench for making "unpleasant remarks" while Dean was seated in the fourth when Hans Lobert, Phillies coach, charged Paul "Daffy" Dean with throwing a beanball at Lou Chiozza.

Paul dropped his glove and sprawled off and brother Jerome rushed from the bench to join him. Before any damages could be done, however, the umpires intervened.

"Bean Ball" Charged.

Ill-feeling cropped out again in the fifth when Al Todd, Philadelphia catcher, was hit by a pitched ball. Todd dropped his bat and started for the pitcher's box. Again Dizzy, perhaps remembering his encounter with Todd in his last National League a few years ago when the catcher floored him, leaped out of the dugout. A few punches were exchanged but the fracas ended when Dizzy was escorted from the premises by police. Before the sixth inning was over, Lobert had been ejected for a too vehement protest.

Otherwise the National League program saw New York Giants, the Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Braves make a clean sweep against the rival west. The Giants, leading the league, scored seven runs in the sixth to swallop the Pirates 9-4 and the second place Dodgers scored seven in the first to trounce Cincinnati 9-1. Boston, aided by Babe Ruth's third home run and fine pitching by Fred Frankhouse, downed Chicago 4-1.

Sailing Rules For Punt Races During Season

The sailing committee of the South End Aquatic Club race announced their sailing rules for the current season that is to officially open on Victoria Day. The largest entry of sailing punts, in every class, ever to grace local waters are in evidence these days. Many new craft having been constructed during the off winter months. Frank Smith, President Callaghan and Secretary Jeffs conducted the meeting.

The rules are:

All races will be started at 2.30, not later than 2.45 p.m.

A warning whistle will be sounded five minutes ahead of start.

A class start on second gun; B class start on third gun; D class start on fourth gun. Ships class start on fifth gun; C class start on sixth gun.

All boats must be moored to shore until the warning gun for the class starts.

A boat is lapped when the stem of the overtaken boat is lapped by the bow of the overtaking boat at any time.

In risk of collision a boat must give warning of intention to luff.

On a luff and run or shoot, a boat can luff except when lapped and cannot pull down off her course to blanket the other boat.

Two boats sailing free wind, the one will be keen on port side, has the right of way.

Boats running free must keep clear of boats close hauled.

Protests must be made verbally to committee at finishing line and in writing within 24 hours.

A, B, D and Snipe classes to sail the big course from harbour to Cow Island, to Rossmore Dock, to buoy off Government Dock to port three times.

Season's competitions open May 24 and then every Wednesday and public holidays.

The Roy Hay Cup for boys under 18 will be run on Saturday afternoons.

BREAK RECORDS IN SWIM MEET

Phyllis Dewar Nearly Breaks World's Mark

Winnipeg, May 22 (CP)—Three new Canadian marks were set and one equalled championship crowned after the cream of Canada's 1935 swimming and diving corps completed their opening assault at the three-day Provincial Swimming Association meet held under the auspices of the Manitoba section.

One world's record entered on the brink of submersion when Phyllis Dewar, Toronto, threshed through the limpid water to a new mark of 2.33 1-5 for the women's 440-yards Canadian free-style championship, one second slower than Helene Madison's mark. So far eclipsing Irene Pirie's old Canadian record of 2.45 3-10.

Miss Dewar gave the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club another Canadian record to place alongside of Miss Dewar's by cracking the junior boys' 100-yards breast stroke event at 1:26, lowering it to 1:26.

Phyllis Dewar took the 440 women's free-style, and Robert Pirie, Central "Y" tanker from Toronto, showed the way to a select field in the 440 yards men's free-style.

Noel Ozenbury gave Vancouver another Canadian title when the lithe coast girl showed a clean margin of superiority over winsome Shirley Stewart of Winnipeg in the 100-yards junior girls' Canadian free-style championship.

University of Minnesota's crack relay team made good their boast of taking home a Canadian title by trouncing Toronto's famed Central "Y" tankers and Winnipeg's "Y" tankers in a spirited race. The old record of 3:43 for the Murray Hannah Trophy race withstood the Minnesota's team bid of 3:43 2-5.

"What is it that every person gives, some ask for, but none seem to accept? Just 'advice', that's all." The following negotiations do not really come under the heading of advice, but could well do so. In a recent issue of the St. Louis Sporting News, an all baseball publication, an editorial appeared in reference to the umpiring standards in the Texas League and under two heads. J. Alvin Gardner of the Corpus Christi Times, one of the institutions issued by President Gardner when he went to work instituting in C.O.B.J., even on the eve of launching upon a new season. Of course, it is impossible for any league head to cover every situation, but must necessarily depend upon the umpires themselves—but the following effusion could well be the guidance of the indicator wielders in the matter of routine instructions.

1. Commence all games on time, regardless as to requests to the contrary for either clubs.

2. Umpires should exercise discretion in removing players from the game. The public pay to see a full strength team on the field. Hustling ball players will fight for every point. But do not jeopardize their future careers in this manner.

3. Hustle players in and out between innings. Fans like snappy ball. Three innings are necessary in reading the rule book occasionally, but complicated plays are bound to come up no one can be too profound.

5. All tag plays should be covered on top of the plays and do not render decisions too quickly, nor take the eye off the play until completed.

In conclusion, however, it should be remembered that the umpiring should always be the most dignified activity on the diamond.

Yesterday we ran into Norman "Pat" Walsh of Kingston who informs us he will not be able to umpire in the C.O.B.L. this year owing to business commitments. Walsh was named by the Fonies as one of their athletes from the arena along with Frank Corrigan and George Baker of Gananoque. Walsh was named as officiate the opening C.O.B.L. game in Belleville on the 24th along with Bill "Twigs" Hamilton but Walsh has relinquished his umpiring endeavors for the season. Doubtlessly Woodley and Corrigan will officiate today in Kingston and reverse their performance of Empire Day morning when the "Radios" make their initial bow before the home crowd in a morning struggle with the Fonies.

Following last night's final preseason work-out at the Park Grounds the members of the Shwart-Warner ball team were issued their uniforms all newly and nicely lettered while new hip-length windbreakers were also presented to the players. The windbreakers carry Shwart-Warner colors and are made of two different shades of blue, the body being of dark blue while the sleeves are of a lighter blue in shade. They are real nifty. The "Radios" left by motor for the Limestone City at 2 p.m. today and Coach Mills announced that either Enzie Smith or Art Calheun would be given the pitching assignment, depending on the atmospheric conditions. Regardless of the outcome of today's game in Kingston the fans can almost be sure of seeing Jack "Chief" Wellman in action versus the Fonies on Friday morning when the locals open before the home crowd.

Officially the golf season will be opened on Victoria Day with a men's competition in the morning and a mixed two ball foursome in the afternoon. Out at the Bay of Quinte Country Club special golfing events are also being planned by the latter in the season. Incidentally Jock Mitchell, the pro out at the Belleville Golf, informs us that all new greens at the Belleville Golf course will be available while new flags have been erected at each green.

Elsewhere in today's issue are the new racing rules recently drafted by the B.A.C. road racing committee. These rules will be strictly adhered to during each sailing race this season and should be thoroughly understood by the various contestants before the season opens on Friday.

In order to accommodate the overflow crowd that is expected to be on hand at Thursday night's wrestling bouts the arena management was forced to procure an added number of ringside seats. "Not since we started staging the wrestling bouts in the arena has there been such a pre-match demand for ringside tickets as there has been during the past twenty-four hours," stated one of the members of the Rivalis Club today. It seems that last week's main bout had about sold the grappling game in this town with the result that the largest crowd of the season packed at the arena tomorrow evening. Another added feature of the prize ring fare between Al Dunlop and Johnnie Gyroffy is the announcement that the Parnell-Petroff match would be staged over the one hour limit, the bout being over one fall. Incidentally the winner of this Parnell-Petroff bout would undoubtedly lead a crack at the winner of the Dunlop-Gyroffy bout. Local wrestling fans are still talking about last week's donnybrook, but we find the fans split in their opinion as to who really is the better man. Dunlop or Gyroffy? Both local fans do not like Dunlop's pugnacious and unorthodox methods of wrestling but on the other hand agree he is one tough customer. Thursday night's result will tell the tale, however.

To officially open the lawn bowling season, the annual President Queen Victoria Cup match of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club will be held on Victoria Day. Incidentally the Belleville lawn bowlers enjoyed the largest membership since their moving to the present site on the Fair Grounds. President G. A. Reid and his able body of executive workers have laboured long but at last the club has succeeded on a substantial basis. At present the club has a paid up membership of 200 lawn bowlers, all of which are lady members. The club hopes to add one hundred more members next season and also erect two or maybe three new greens. The committee however, no more new members will be accepted for the year 1935, "Consolidation" being the club's motto.

It was announced today that three Cobourg and two Campbellford lacrosse players will be added to the roster of the Aajmas Club for their exhibition box lacrosse game at the arena on Friday night. The game is arranged to bring the fast Scarboro team to town to officially open the season.

RACE DRIVERS KILLED

Indianapolis, May 22.—(AP)—A gaping hole in a concrete wall, the break in a wire fence, today marked the race track where speed cost lives of a veteran driver and two newcomers.

W. H. (Stubby) Stubblefield, veteran of the Motor Speedway course; Joe mechanic, Leo Whittaker, and Johnny Stewart, modern driving sensation, rode their racers over the walls to death yesterday.

BOONE BOOMED HOMER TO WIN GAME FOR LEAFS

Trailing Rochester by 2 Runs When Hit Came in Ninth

BEARS DROP

Now Two Games Behind Owing to Defeat by Syracuse

Thanks to a timely home run by Manager Ira Boone and the fine pitching of Bob Cruthis, Toronto Maple Leafs today had a two-game advantage over Newark Bears in the battle for the International League pennant.

With two games on base and the Leafs trailing Rochester Red Wings by two runs yesterday, Boone parked the ball over the fence to give his league leaders a 6-5 triumph. Earlier in the game the Toronto boss had reached out a triple and a single.

Cruthis' part in the advance of the Leafs' cause in Syracuse's night game with the Bears at Newark. The thirty-game pitcher was lucky for nine hits but kept the Bears away from the plate until the ninth as the Chiefs thumped out a 7-4 victory.

The Bears skidded dangerously close to third place as Buffalo Bisons defeated Montreal Royals 12-10 to deny a half-game advantage to the two teams.

Although Gus Dugas, Montreal outfielder, slugged out two home runs, the Bisons took advantage of two costly errors in the final two innings to pile up a six-run lead and never were headed.

Albany Senators won the first night game of the International League season when they bombarded four Baltimore pitchers to win 6-3 decision at home on Johnny Puccinelli and Woody Abernathy. Russ Peters also hit a home run for the Senators in the fifth inning which saw the upstate team score six times.

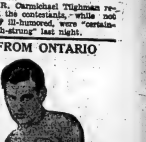
"Turtle Darby" Has Contestants All Heated Up



Baltimore, May 22 (AP)—While officials predicted the attendance record of 2,000 would go by the board, 90 contestants in the Johns Hopkins University Hospital's 4th annual "turtle derby" meandered aimlessly about their paddock today, apparently oblivious postime for the 2pm 36-foot run was fast approaching.

Staff doctors groomed their charges for a wholesale assault on the record time of 32 2-5 seconds for the distance, set last year by Maple Leaf, Canadian entry.

Maple Leaf, the lagging behind in the odds at the 3.30 p.m. post-time neared. With 'Art' and 'Arf, English threat, favored to sweep the field comprised (allegedly) of the fastest terrapins ever to escape a hotel chef.

Dr. R. Carmichael Tighman repported the contestants, while not exactly ill-humored, were "certainly high-strung" at mid-night.

H. V. HOOVER GUEST SPEAKER

Mount Pleasant Young People Enjoy Address

Hayden, May 22—Mr. John Coggins opened Mount Pleasant Young People's Society, Friday evening with "More Like Jesus I Would Ever Grow," and Mrs. Coggins Adam read the Bible lesson. Mr. H. V. Hoover of Wellington was the guest speaker and delivered a splendid address on the economic situation basing his talk on "World Conditions." He touched on the unemployment situation, the cost of production to the farmer, and the liquor question, and gave several points worth pondering over. One outstanding question was, are we as members of a Christian church responsible in any way for the condition facing Canada today?

Mr. Harry McAdam, convener of Christian Citizenship then presided using "O Canada" and Mrs. Allan Bailey offered prayer. Miss Frances McKenzie read the Bible lesson. Rev. F. G. Joblin rendered a solo "The Glory Song."

Mrs. Morris Rose outlined the topic on the subject "Why Nations go to War?" and quoted from "Cry Havoc". Among her various points she said Canada eliminated the marines to view the horrors of war are so taken up by the glory and glamour of the men and music that they soon forget the horrors, that war means. It seems far easier for individuals to forgive each other than nations. Rev. F. G. Joblin led in a helpful discussion.

Mrs. Frank Smith read a story of one of Moody's converts who later became an evangelist. Misses Marie Sharp and Winnie Phillips rendered a duet.

This helpful meeting closed with the National Anthem and a "Stamp" berdeer.

Mrs. Ted Osbourne and son Rossel of Niagara Falls were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Cooney.

Mr. Arthur Wilson was a dinner guest on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen.

On Sunday, May 19th Mr. Arthur Wilson of West Huntingdon, took charge of the services on Rawdon circuit, while Rev. F. G. Joblin took anniversary services at Newtonville.

In the morning at Mount Pleasant he opened with one of Bill Cowper's hymns "There is a Fountain Filled With Blood" and told the story of why the hymn was written. After the children's story, all joined in "Once in Royal David's City."

Mr. Wilson chose as his subject "The Greatest Coming Event" basing his thoughts on John 14-3, and I will come again and receive you unto myself. He divided his subject under three distinct headings, "Why Christ Came to the World." (2) "When Christ Finished His Redemptive work He Returned to Heaven" (3) "Why Stand Gazing?" this same Christ which went away is coming back.

The speaker aptly pictured every daily newspaper as a stirring testimonial to the second coming of Christ and pointed out that if Christ were here on earth in these modern times He would use the telephone, radio, and automobile to carry on His work.

Today people are spiritually dead and it is hard to arouse them and many are asleep in supporting God's cause, especially along missionary lines.

He narrated many true stories to prove God's answering ways in answering prayer and in closing he quoted a few sentences containing much food for thought.

Mr. John Coggins sang a solo "Have You Been to Jesus for the Cleansing Power."

Mrs. and Miss Bailey entertained Carmel Women's Association at her home with a large attendance. Mrs. Ira Bird presided over the business and programme, and all enjoyed the delicious lunch served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Sharp of Mount Pleasant, Mrs. Jack Brown and family of Hoard's, Mrs. Hugh Morton and Jean, Mr. and Mrs. F. Armstrong and family of Stirling visited their parents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Snarr, Wellman's, last recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hagerman spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Parker in Seymour.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cooney, Mr. and Mrs. Morley Richardson and Mr. Ross Richardson attended the interment service of Mr. Gilbert Richardson at Norwood on Wednesday of last week.

Miss Muriel Milligan attended the teacher's meeting on Friday evening at the Ninth line school where Mr. Hurst Middeljohn, is teacher in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Montgomery and Mark spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen.

Mr. J. Bateman of Newburgh, spent a couple of days last week with his sister, Mrs. George McMaster.

Mrs. E. Webb is holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Webb.

The annual meeting of Wellman's Women's Institute was held in the church on Thursday, May 16th with a large attendance. The meeting opened with the singing of the Institute Ode and the Lord's prayer in unison.

The secretary Mrs. Percy Jackman gave the minutes of the last regular and the last annual meeting and read the financial statement of the year's work. The book were later audited by Mrs. Reid and Mrs. Beckett and found correct.

It was decided to donate ten dollars to the county fund. A letter was read regarding the district annual convention to be held in Marmora on June 6th.

The president Mrs. Fred Thain spoke regarding the year's work and expressed appreciation and thanks to all who had co-operated in supporting the various branches of office.

Mrs. Snarr then presided over the election of officers which were as follows:

President—Lindsay Pollock.

1st Vice President—Mrs. Wanda Reid.

2nd, Vice President—Mrs. R. McGee.

Secretary Treasurer—Miss A. Hoover.

Pianist—Miss Lucille Dracup.

Assistant—Mrs. Carl Clancy.

District Director—Mrs. Fred Thain.

Directors—Mrs. Fred Thain, Mrs. Paul Sharp, Mrs. John Hoover and Mrs. T. M. Reid.

Press Reporter — Miss Emma Rainnie.

Auditors—Mrs. Percy Jackman, and Mrs. Ed. Todd.

Representatives to District Annual—Mrs. T. Reid, Mrs. Charles Dunham, Mrs. Et. Todd, Mrs. Carl Clancy.

On Friday evening Mr. Grant Mickeljohn teacher at S. S. No. 12, Ninth line Rawdon entertained twelve Rawdon teachers and one visiting teacher Miss Cora Bailey at his school. While various topics were discussed the chief study was on composition. Each teacher brought compositions on various subjects written by their pupils and these were read and discussed, at the close a delicious lunch of sandwiches, cake and tea was served, and the guests voted Grant an ideal host.

Mrs. Palmatier and sons and Miss M. Marsh of Toronto, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Southworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop, Mr. and Mrs. William Reid and daughter of Toronto and Mrs. O. Reid enjoyed a holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reid and Mrs. Bubble.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cranston of Toronto, recently visited Mr. and Mrs. Warren Reid.

HUNTS THRU LAWS SUIT IS ENTERED

French Miller Asks Damages For Water Not Going Over Mill

LILLE, France (AP)—A miller has brought a suit against the French Government for the water that hasn't gone over his mill. M. Dewey, at Denain, has been looking for twenty-six years for laws on which he could base such a suit. He found them recently in the legal codes of the mines.

The original cause of complaint was that the French Government in 1909 "reduced the Sensee Canal, diverting most of the water from the stream which supplied the Doby mill. At the time the present owner's father lodged a complaint, while his son began his search for legal backing.

The law firm presented certificates and documents proving the mill occupied its present site before 1566, when the firm "Price of Mills" was drawn up, giving the millers the "right to use the water of the stream where the mill is built."

When for twenty-six years, during the course of which his father died and left the mill to him, M. Doby spent his spare time in libraries of Lille, Cambrai, and Valenciennes reading carefully through old law books, seeking a law issued after the "Price of Mills" on which he could base his claim.

Recently he found it at the Valenciennes library—a law dated Aug. 30, 1784, including a reference to a charter granted in 827 to the Canonesses of Denain, giving her rights to the buildings and the mills of Denain.

When he had unearthed other references to the ancient charter Doby found that the abbess of Denain cited the Latin text of Charles the Bald, "who restored to St. Hendyre, first abbess of Denain the mill and chapel destroyed and ravaged by enemy troops."

M. Doby promptly renewed his suit before the Council of the Prefecture of Lille, asking just damages for all the water that has not gone through his mill since 1906 as well as reconstruction of the stream as it was.

BRIDE WELCOMED TO THURLOW DISTRICT

On Friday evening May 17th, a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Phillips, 9th of Thurlow to spend a social evening with them and to extend a welcome to the bride.

Mr. Lee Ketcheson was master of ceremonies and asked the young couple to come forward while Mrs. Sam Marshall read the following address:

Dear Mabel and Wellington:

Our sincere felicitations please accept on this the most happy time of your career and we would add: "Blest be the Tie that Binds you, with all clouds well behind you." You Mabel we are welcoming to our community and we assure you that as far as it is in our power we will endeavour to take the place of the friends you have left.

"Duke" you have lived among us most of your life and we are glad to know you intend to spend the rest of your life among us.

As you both travel along on life highway of life, may you find it a friendly road, and each to the other say:

"Joggin' along with you
Level or hilly roads
Sharing the joys we meet,
Helping with heavy loads;
Whether the clouds are gray—
Whether the skies are blue
Life is a lot of fun
Joggin' along with you."

As a token of our esteem we are asking you to accept these gifts, and may love grow brighter beside your old fire and fill thirty years together with new splendors.

Signed on behalf of Bethel community and friends: Earl H. Reyers and Sam Marshall.

The young couple were then presented with a beautiful China cabinet and wicker rocker. Both gratefully thanked their friends for the lovely gifts and extended a hearty invitation to all to visit them again in their new home.

Lunch was served and the remainder of the evening spent in games and dancing.

THIS MUST STOP!

In Ontario, during 1934, there were nearly 10,000 automobile accidents.

512 people were killed
8,990 people were injured

. . . a considerable increase over 1933. It must be evident to all thinking people that this must stop.

IMAGINE HOW YOU'D FEEL IF YOU HAD BEEN RESPONSIBLE!

UNNECESSARY, selfish, foolish haste causes nine out of ten automobile accidents. Haste in going around bad curves . . . passing cars on hills . . . ignoring stop streets . . . cutting in . . . snarching seconds at lights . . . driving too fast at night.

Senseless speed is a form of crime. It can lead you nowhere but to cancellation of your driver's license . . . to a cell . . . to bodily injury or death. Make safe driving a habit! They say the "courtesy of the road" is gone. Help bring it back!

Life of Christ Told in Films

Before a large audience motion pictures of the Life of Christ were shown with music accompaniment in Bridge Street United Church on Tuesday evening. The scenes covered a large number of the Biblical Episodes told in the Gospels from the time of the Birth to the Ascension of Jesus after His Resurrection. The setting was Oriental in large measure, as scenes were filmed in Europe, the Holy Land and Egypt, while the story itself was patterned after the style of the Passion plays. The film was shown under the auspices of the National Bureau for Religious and Education Films, Rev. E. A. Lambert being manager.

In the afternoon a similarly large audience made up of scholars and students attended the showing, to musical accompaniment based on the opera by Rossini of "William Tell", the story of life, romance and liberty, as adapted from Schiller's play of that name

ROOSEVELT VICTORY IN 1936 IS PREDICTED

Babson Survey Reports President is Holding His Popularity

Wellesley, Mass., May 22.—(AP)—The Roger W. Babson Statistical Organization announced today the results of a survey which indicated that President Roosevelt would be re-elected in 1936.

The survey, described as "the first pre-1936 political survey" completed by the organization, showed that President Roosevelt continues to hold his strong personal popularity among the electorate. At the same time, however, the New Deal has suffered further losses in confidence in the last year.

"While many believe a third party ticket will be in the field," the announcement read, "the big majority have no fear of its influence on 1936 results.

"The investigation indicated that the majority of the people are not yet worried about inflation. In regard to business—53.7 per cent felt that recovery was proceeding in a reasuring manner, while 46.3 per cent. either did not see an improvement or felt that recovery was artificial.

"In spite the business recovery been because of or in spite of the President's program?' was another question asked. 51.3 per cent. said 'because of' and 47.8 per cent said 'in spite of'.

"According to the investigation Franklin D. Roosevelt stands to be re-elected in 1936 by a vote of at least 363 out of a total of 531 votes in the Electoral College.

LIBERALS WANT VOTE

Tunnel Project For Toronto Passes Committee

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)—A challenge to an immediate general election was before the government today as Liberal members of the House of Commons continued their opposition to the public works bill. The measure calls for expenditure of some $25,000,000 on government works and railway equipment with a view to giving employment.

No sooner had a long battle over a vote of $1,000,000 for the harbor ended yesterday with its passage through committee stage than the oppositionists concentrated their fire on a vote of $2,500,000 for harbors and rivers generally. They demanded precise information from Hon. H. A. Stewart, Minister of Public Works, as to how the money would be spent.

Mr. Stewart's answer was he could not give the information wanted. He said the vote was the customary one. It was proposed to make improvements where they were most needed and where men were in need of work. He could not specify works in advance and they had never been done in the past.

The challenge was thrown across the floor by William Duff (Lib. Antigonish-Guysborough). After Hon. Dr. J. Marcil, Minister of Railways, had accused Liberals of blocking the bill which could not work to unemployed, Mr. Duff said Mr. Bennett should go to Prime Minister R. B. Bennett at once and get him to dissolve parliament and bring on the election in June on the issue of the public works bill.

"The only reason I have voted against that tunnel is because it is for Tory Toronto," said Mr. Duff in a parting shot before the House adjourned.

Questions Asked

Prime Minister Bennett was confronted with a number of questions when the House met in the afternoon.

A question about the Vancouver relief camp strikers drew from him the declaration the government and always been and was now ready to discuss with the British Columbia government any matter connected with the strike and to provide any assistance the province needed in maintaining order. If conditions worsened, he added, and disorder it would be because the province had not asked assistance.

When he was in London last fall, Mr. Bennett said the government brokers considered the time was ripe for a conversion loan. But, he added, the Canadian people in Canada was inlured to some extent by London by Vancouver incident, so-called, but whatever was it was completely destroyed by the action of the Ontario legislature.

"We were prepared to carry out the conversion of the $26,000,000 which will mature in an early date but in consequence of the passing of that particular legislation the matter had to be abandoned. Anyone who has an opportunity of visiting the city of London will find the condition which now prevails there with respect to our credit and will realize how serious is extremely difficult.

"The loss incurred in the Dominion of Canada through the necessity of abandoning the conversion which had been practically will amount to $700,000 per annum for the next 20 years."

BERLIN CHEERED BY HITLER WORDS

Germans Find No Conflict in Address And Conscription

(By A. D. Stefferud)

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

Berlin, May 22.—While enthusiastic Nazis acclaimed the declaration of Foreign Policy contained in Reichstadtsher Hitler's Reichstag address some skepticism foreign envoys today saw in it the promise of "an unprecedented armaments race."

Germans found no conflict between der Fuehrer's declaration, to the Reichstag that the country "needs and wills peace" and the promulgation a few hours later of a conscription program making possible the largest peacetime army in the nation's history.

In diplomatic and other circles, the opinion was heard "Hitler has offered nothing tangible toward the International peace quest," except an attempt to justify his course.

The purpose of trying to allay foreign apprehension to gain sufficient time for fulfilling his arms plans was viewed by some observers as one of the motives Hitler had in view.

1,500 PLANES IN TWO YEARS

British Stand Confirmed

In one respect Hitler's speech had a direct bearing on the spot specially before the House—that of air defence, said Mr. Baldwin. Hitler had declared Germany intended to limit her air force to parity with individual western powers.

"That," commented Mr. Baldwin, "is the confirmation of the basis on which our airplanes are founded. Hitler went on to point out that upon a ratio of parity as distinct from an arithmetic total without regard to what others do, it would be possible by agreement between the powers specially concerned not only to fix but to reduce the limit.

"That is a very important reflection. It is the one we have had in mind throughout."

Hitler had also said that Germany would be prepared to discuss an air pact supplementing the Locarno treaty, and Hitler's declarations in this regard were now important, Mr. Baldwin went on, because he had indicated that negotiations for such a pact could be accompanied by limitation.

Protection of Civilians

Another matter the British Government regarded as of the greatest importance was the indication from Hitler the air pact might be bound up with an effort to safeguard the civilian population against indiscriminate attack from the air.

"We attach very important consideration," said Mr. Baldwin.

"We propose to make our contribution in the matter as helping to that general settlement which was the object of the Anglo-French declaration of London."

Consideration had been given to co-ordinating all the three defence services under one minister, but on that the Government had not decision to announce as yet.

The defence requirements were of hand on two grounds: National Defence, and the ability of Britain to fulfil her obligations under the League of Nations covenant. Mr. Baldwin continued:

Rigid Armaments Never Used

"I say that when the House supports the Government in the present time, it is reinforcing not only national security but collective security, because we all know that our armaments will never be used except in self-defence. My opinion it is my earnest hope that they will never have to be used. But if collective security had to be invoked, it would be little comfort to people an insurgent party our country will."

He referred to the estimate of Germany's air strength he submitted to the House last November. He had no reason to believe the figure he then submitted was wrong at the time. But he frankly admitted he was unable to estimate what the future. In that he was "completely at sea" and added that the House had no idea of the rate at which production of aircraft in Germany could be speeded up and actually was speeded up in the subsequent six months.

RETRACTS WORDS SAID AT HEARING IN JARVIS CASE

Hayden.

"That case the evidence of Pepall was essential," he contended.

Sedgewick agreed Pepall's evidence was material and that Mr. Hackett said he could "see nothing else".

He weren't concerned with what Peter Smith did," said Hayden' "We had confidence in him and didn't call him to give evidence." Peter Smith, Provincial Treasurer, in the Drury Government was convicted with Jarvis.

Sedgewick said the defence "had an edge" on the Crown in estimating what Pepall would explain.

"There isn't a line of protest on the Jarvis trial until after Pepall was acquitted," said Sedgewick.

Hayden insisted the trial Judge had "no business" to wash his hands and Sedgwick replied the defence made no protest against the absence.

PLANNING WALKOUT

Toronto, May 22.—(CP)—Reports in suburban New Toronto today said 100 nurses at the Queensway Hospital there are planning a walkout in protest against "conditions as they exist."

The dissatisfaction is said to have been occasioned by a cut in pay of months, ranging from' working hours of 8 to 12 hours, and cut last April. Sleeping quarters for the nurses also were criticized.

FEES QUESTION DELAYS INQUIRY

Miss Macphail Asks Government to Supply Counsel

Ottawa, May 22—(CP)—Inquiry into charges made by Miss Agnes Macphail, Canada's woman member of the House of Commons, against Inspector J. D. Dawson of Kingston Penitentiary was opened today by Judge E. J. Daly.

Miss Macphail charged in a conversation with a convict at the penitentiary, Dawson called her "Aggie made a fool of herself in the House of Commons, when we are finished with her she will never be able to lift up her head in the House again."

On several occasions Miss Macphail brought the matter before the House but his allegations were strenuously denied by Minister of Justice Hugh Guthrie. However, in compliance with Miss Macphail's requests Judge Daly was appointed commissioner to probe the complaint. R. H. Greer of Toronto acted as counsel for the commission.

Miss Macphail appointed her own counsel and asked to be paid by the government. This Mr. Guthrie refused.

Private Members

Miss Macphail argued the whole case boiled down to one of a private member of the House of Commons against the Department of Justice, whose chief, Mr. Guthrie, stood behind the denial of Dawson. Citing several precedents she contended being paid by the government, she asked her own counsel be appointed from the public treasury. The "attack" was against her as a public servant, she said, and not as a private citizen.

Answering Miss Macphail, Judge Daly declared the Minister of Justice had already refused to appoint counsel for her and he (the commissioner) was limited in his duties by the terms of reference.

Mr. Greer said it was not Miss Macphail, who was on trial but Dawson. There was no need for Miss Macphail to have counsel since his own appointment required him to bring out all the evidence and not merely "ex-parte" statements.

Time To Make Appeal

G. A. Hall, the man who made the affidavit on Dawson's alleged remark entered a similar request. He denied the statements made by Mr. Guthrie in the House of Commons about seven weeks ago, characterizing them as a "tirade, without precedent and one of the most disgraceful in the history of our country".

"You'd better be careful of your language, Mr. Hall," commented Judge Daly.

He had no funds, said Hall, having been recently released from the penitentiary. If the commissioner was unable to recommend appointment of counsel, then the inquiry should be postponed, Hall declared. In order to allow him to make a public appeal for funds wherewith to prosecute the inquiry. He would have ten or twelve witnesses.

"Was this conversation open to the public?" asked His Honor.

"I understand the inquiry hinges on the truth or falsity of the affidavit," replied Hall.

Short Adjournment

Considerable interchange ensued as to the scope of the commissioner's duties. Mr. Greer, however, contended the whole point at issue was whether Dawson made "improper and discourteous remarks about Miss Macphail," and no more.

"Well, are we going to take evidence today?" asked the Judge.

"No—not until I have counsel," replied Miss Macphail.

"I am in the same position," Hall declared.

"I understood from the minister and the deputy you were not to have counsel at public expense," Judge Daly said.

He would not accede to Hall's request for a long adjournment to enable him to raise funds "by public subscription".

"There is no guarantee you would get any money for that purpose," said the judge.

Mr. Greer informed Hall if he would present himself at the Inspector's chambers Saturday he would give him a cheque covering his expenses as a witness.

Inquiry then adjourned until May 30 at 10.30 a.m.

READY FOR READING

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)—With numerous amendments approved at more than a dozen sittings, the unemployment insurance bill emerged today from the Senate Banking and Commerce Committee. It will be reported later today in the Upper House when the measure remains to go through third reading, concurrence of the Commons also must be given to the bill before it is ready for royal assent.

Chief clause at the hands of the committee was to take employees of banks and financial institutions out of the excepted class and place them under the general plane.

EXPLORERS MADE BIG 1934 GAINS IN MANY FIELDS

Admiral Byrd Has Large Slice of Territory to Credit

SEA AND SKY PROBED

Dr. Beebe Sank Lowest Prof. Piccard Rose Highest

Frozen areas of the Antarctic and the Far North, the sun-bathed but frigid stratosphere, the dark depths of the ocean; massive waterways near the tip of South America, and previously unscaled mountains—these furnished the major fields in which American explorers made new discoveries and set up new records in 1934, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. The bulletin also lists outstanding explorations by foreign expeditions.

"The only exploration of 1934 that may result in the addition of a large area of land to the United States was made by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd in the Antarctic," continued the bulletin. "On Nov. 19 he flew over previously unseen portions of Marie Byrd Land, made a landing and claimed for the United States an ice-covered territory estimated to be almost as large as Texas.

"The flight disclosed that an inundation, which had been thought to be one end of a channel cutting Marie Byrd Land from the Antarctic Continent, extended inland only a short distance, and that beyond it was a plateau extending on southward, presumably to the South Pole.

"Within a period of twenty days last Summer American explorers rose into the stratosphere eleven and three-quarter miles above sea level and descended more than half a mile below the surface of the sea—the highest and lowest points reached during the year. The stratosphere flight was made July 28, over South Dakota and Nebraska by Major William E. Kepner, Captain Albert W. Stevens and Captain Orvil A. Anderson, on an expedition under the joint auspices of the National Geographic Society and the United States Army Air Corps.

Dr. Beebe Plumbed Depths

"Deep dives into the sea were made Aug. 11 and 15, by Dr. William Beebe and Otis Barton, in a steel ball, the Bathysphere, near the shores of Bermuda. The dives, described by the National Geographic Society and the New York Zoological Society, reached depths of 2,510 and 3,028 feet, respectively, both world records.

"A second American stratosphere flight made by Professor Jean Piccard and Mrs. Piccard, from Detroit, Mich., October 23, reached an altitude of nearly eleven miles, "Max Conrad and M. Meres ran der Rist, in the only other stratosphere flight of the year, to Jackson, rose from Belgium, August 18, and reached an altitude slightly greater than ten miles.

"All three stratosphere expeditions obtained new and additional data in regard to cosmic ray intensities at high altitudes. The National Geographic Society-Army Air Corps flight obtained the highest photographic record of the surface of the earth.

"Lars Christensen, Norwegian explorer, sailed to new areas of the seas off the coast of Antarctica. He announced the non-existence of the Douglas Islands, supposed to exist near the sixty-fourth meridian east of Greenwich and just south of the Antarctic Circle. In January, from a point near 87 degrees east longitude, and 66 degrees south latitude, he sent a plane aloft. Beyond the ice barrier to the south, the Ellen Lieutenant Commander Nils Larsen, sighting land which was named Princess Astrid Land.

New Crater in Alaska

"A hitherto unknown, inactive volcanic crater, partly eroded, but with an original circumference estimated at thirty miles, was discovered in July by Father Bernard R. Hubbard, near the tip of the Alaska Peninsula. Father Hubbard's party, which carried on its work in explorations with the National Geographic Society, also scaled for the first time the Agathon Pinnacles, lofty peaks near the crater.

"A fresh-water lake, two miles long by one mile wide, heretofore known only to Indians, was discovered in Costa Rica in September, it was first located from an airplane. The lake is near the Nicaraguan border.

"The Greenland ice cap was crossed by dog sledge, from Disco Bay on the West Coast to Scoresby Sound on the East coast by a British expedition led by Martin Lindsay, after which the party pushed southward parallel with the coast for nearly 400 miles traversing previously unexplored territory, between Scoresby Sound and Angmagssalik.

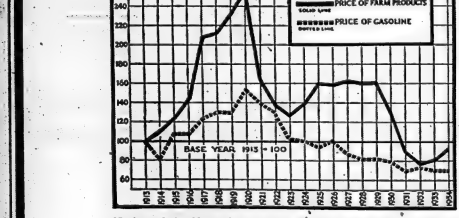
"The maze of water passages and adjoining islands in the Tierra del Fuego, near the southern tip of South America, was explored in a 36-foot boat by Amos Burg on an expedition sent out by the National Geographic Society. Burg also rounded Cape Horn in his small craft.

"An expedition of the California Institute of Technology rediscovered a chasm in a mountainous section of Chihuahua, Mexico, comparable in size and grandeur to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. It was known only to Indians and a few miners.

Viking Twin Peaks to Visit

"The 17,000-foot twin peaks of Mount Foraker in McKinley National Park, Alaska, were scaled for the first time August 6, by Charles Houston, T. Graham Brown and Chrybele Waterston.

"Monte Crillon, previously unconquered peak near the Alaskan coast a hundred miles northwest of Juneau was climbed in July by Bradford Washburn and his Harvard-Dartmouth Expedition. The mountain is 13,727 feet high.



"In March Polish explorers, led by M. K. Markiewicz-Jodko, found a new route to the top of 23,000-foot Aconcagua in the Andes, highest mountain in the Western Hemisphere.

"In the Himalayas, F. E. Shipton and companions made the first exploration by Westerners of the Valley of Panda Devi, marking out possible routes for a future attack on the peak itself.

"One of the most spectacular archaeological discoveries of the year came in March when two French aviators, Captain Edouard Charlton-Mollinier and Andre Malraux flew into the interior of Arabia northeast of Yemen and sighted and photographed from the air the ruins of a great city previously unknown to the West.

"The remains of seven Mayan cities, one surrounded by a moat, were discovered in Northern Guatemala by expeditions of the Carnegie Institution of Washington."

The depressed price of farm products is a problem with which everyone is familiar, but on the 1913 basis farm product prices have never been as low as gasoline. Between 1913 and 1920 gasoline did not rise in price, nor to fall to the farm products, but since 1920 its price has almost continuously declined. The data for the above graphs are based on figures published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

A FAIR DEAL POLICY

In the fifty-four years of its existence, Imperial Oil Limited has always welcomed legislation in the interests of labor and the basic industries. It has never had a labor dispute. It has always paid fair wages. To the greatest extent possible it has provided continuous employment and it has given its workers increasing leisure so as to expand employment. It has sickness and death benefits and old age pensions because it believes that the worker and his dependents are entitled to such protection.

Imperial Oil has always tried to deal fairly with collateral industry and with its competitors. Its success in this connection is indicated by the fact that it has never had a major lawsuit. It has always recognized the principle that the only satisfactory business transaction is the one which affords a fair profit to all parties concerned. It has fulfilled all its undertakings. It has enforced no onerous claims on others.

Imperial Oil has always tried to deal fairly with the consumer. It has continuously improved the quality and steadily reduced the prices of its products. It has invested millions to make those products always available wherever they may be needed.

In 1934 Imperial Oil earned $3,023,400.12 from its Canadian manufacturing and marketing operations. This, you may say, is a lot of money, but to earn that amount Imperial Oil had to make and market goods to a value of $82,841,311.15. The storekeeper who in the course of a year sold $6,280 worth of goods and made a profit of $300 would not be regarded as enjoying an undue measure of prosperity. But his ratio of profit to the total volume of his business would be the same as Imperial Oil's.

It has been Imperial Oil's practice to "make wisely, measure truly, trade justly" for this it believes to be the secret of success.

France's Champion Sheuier

Paris (AP)—Pierre Leville makes a good living because he has the loudest voice in France. He does his yelling daily as a trader on the Bourse curb market, which is in the open air on the Bourse steps, where a trader must compete with 200 other first class shouters as well as the wind, rain and Paris traffic. M. Leville admitted that given a favorable wind, his voice can be heard by the traffic police-man in front of the opera. There is an autobon terminal in front of the opera and blocks of heavy traffic between the Bourse and the Opera. "I trained this voice naturally," he explained in a whisper that sent the pigeons flying out from the roof of the Bourse.

FINAL MEETING OF YEAR HELD

Miss L. Johnson And Fred L. Elgie Direct Program

Stirling (Special)—The last regular meeting of St. Paul's Y.P.S. was held on Monday evening in the church parlors with a very large attendance. This meeting being the final one until the re-opening next Fall, took the form of a social evening and a fine program was provided under the direction of Miss L. Johnson, and Mr. Fred Elgie.

The opening exercises and the devotional period were in charge of the President, Mr. H. Hall, and consisted of a song service and prayer by the pastor. Following this Mr. Hollin called on Mr. Harry Lovelond, chairman of the programming committee for his report. Mr. Lovelond stated that excellent programs were being made in selecting the executive for the incoming year and that a complete report would be submitted within the next few days. Rev. R. W. Rowland at this time spoke a few words of comment on the fine work of the retiring president, Mr. Hollin, who had served the organization in this capacity for twenty-five years which was a record which should be itself. The program which followed was one that will long be remembered by all those who were present.

The first number was a vocal duet by Misses Jean and Olive Munro, "Just a Little Street Where Old Friends Meet," Mr. Alex Part then gave a very humorous reading, "The Irish Philosopher" in his usual style. Miss Mildred White sang an interesting candy guessing contest at this time, in which the members of the audience were allowed to guess the number of candies contained in a large jar. Mrs. Alex Mosher succeeded in gaining the prize; by good fortune this same night also saw the end of the month. Mr. Ted Hilderand then favoured the gathering with a vocal solo, "O Dry Those Tears," and Mr. Rowland with "O Ruby Let Me" with Mrs. Rowland at the piano.

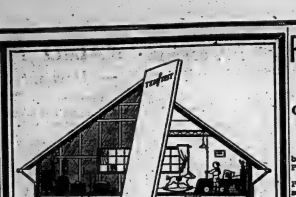
Friendship

Miss Helen Smith of Anson, who was the next speaker on the occasion was then introduced by the president. Miss Smith gave a splendid address on the subject of "Friendship". This was something that should occupy a prominent place in the minds of all young people and because of that fact, she considered a very worthy topic for discussion at gathering such as that she was addressing. The influence of true friends play a very important part throughout our entire life, its value can never be estimated. When things go well with us it is so nice to feel that we have about us a wide circle of friends, but the real test of friendship is when things go wrong, when we need a sympathetic word of encouragement from those we love best. True friendship is being able to see all of one's failings and shortcomings and still loving them. "We are about to disband for the summer months," stated the speaker. "During our holidays it is possible that we will widen our circle of friends. In doing we will increase our responsibility in life and also our happiness and when we return may we all bring back some contribution to our society that will be constructive to the future that the incoming year will go forward with even greater success than the closing year." This was a very carefully prepared topic and carried with it a helpful message.

Miss Fanny Lansing then offered a very pleasing soprano solo, "Sing With You" accompanied at the piano by Miss Mae Curtis. Mr. Parks gave another reading, "Taking the Pledge" after which Mr. Ted Hilderand favoured us with a vocal solo, "The Stranger of Galilee." Mrs. Robt. Patterson then conducted an interesting group contest in which the Blue and White division shared equal honors.

After some splendid community singing under the leadership of Rev. Rowland, a very dainty lunch was served by the ladies of the Society and the meeting brought to a close with the singing of "Blest Be The Tie that Binds" and Mr. Mahn motored to Fort Hope to visit Mrs. Wilson's daughter, Mrs. Arthur Dixon who is a patient in the Fort Hope Hospital. After spending Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. Wilson continued her trip to Toronto, where she will remain a few days. While there she will attend the graduation exercises at the Toronto General Hospital where her granddaughter, Miss Mildred Hunt is just completing her training.

Mr. Lorne Wilson and Mr. Geo. Mumm were in Picton on Monday, May 20th, on business.



Mrs. R. W. Mckinnon left on Tuesday for Kingston to undergo medical treatment, Mrs. Mae Nolan accompanied her.

The ladies of group No. 3 of the St. Paul's ladies' association, headed by Mrs. C. P. Linn, sponsored a very successful sale of home cooking on Saturday afternoon in the store of Mr. Ray Duffin. The fine display of cakes, tarts, etc. was very attractively arranged in the spacious window.

The appearance of the old steel bridge crossing Rawdon creek on the Belleville road has been greatly improved in the last few days, receiving a new coat of paint, making it look like a new bridge.

Add an Extra Room at Small Cost

In homes of every size and type—for modernizing, renovizing, alterations and additions —a definite need exists for TEN/TEST. The TEN/TEST way is the quick, easy way to convert unsightly attics into extra living space, and transform a dingy basement into an attractive playroom or den. Such improvement pays for itself quickly in added comfort and reduced fuel consumption. Furthermore, the extra room adds to the resale value or alternatively increases revenue through renting the additional space.

PERSIA CHANGES NAME TO IRAN

Country is Cradle of Great Aryan Race

New York's Day for Persians, brought the ancient kingdom of Persia a new name—"Iran."

"Persia" was derived from the Province of Pers, or Parsa, the seed from which the modern nation sprang. "Iran" is the ancient name for the entire geographical region, which includes parts of Afghanistan and Baluchistan. In recent times, however, "Iran" has been used as a secondary title for the Persian political unit.

"Persians have always called their country Iran—'Land of the Aryans' —and themselves 'Irani,'" says a National Geographic Society bulletin. "But at the same time they have looked upon Pars (the modern name for Pers) as the most typical Persian province, and even as the cradle of the Aryan race.

"The official change in name turns attention to the country as a whole, and emphasizes Iran's 2,000 years of strong nationalism. Its people have demonstrated again and again their ability to revive from major catastrophes.

"At different periods in its development Iran has been overrun and even subjugated by Greek, Arab, Turk, and Mongol conquerors, but the Iranis have clung tenaciously to their national characteristics and culture. Iran's great poets, Firdausi and Omar Khayyam helped to preserve the Persian language and national spirit through many troubled years. Firdausi's 50,000 verse work, "Shah-Nameh," is one of the world's epics; and Edward Fitzgerald's translation of the "Rubaiyat" focused the attention of Europe on the culture of Iran.

Railroads to Knit Country

"Iran, a land a half times the area of Texas, is covered by a network of modern highways, by varying degrees of excellence, following ancient trade routes. Until 1931 Iran was without railroads, with the exception of a few extremely short stretches of narrow-gauge line. But now railway construction is progressing, both in the north and in the south, and by the end of the summer of these tracks within the next few years, so that the fertile provinces bordering the Caspian Sea in the north will be linked with the Persian Gulf.

"Tehran, the beautiful capital city, is connected by motor-bus, motor-car or camel caravan, but before long it will be included on the trans-Iranian railroad. The capital has a population of 220,000. Its wide boulevards along which traffic is directed by helmeted policemen, lend an outward air of modernity in the city; but the lumbering caravans of camels and donkeys soon dispel the modern appearance of the main thoroughfares.

"Former capitals of Iran, including Isfahan, Shiraz and Kazvin, are still important in the economic life of the nation and combine ancient culture with modern industry. Tabriz in Northwest Iran, is on the great trunk route between Persia and Central Europe. Bushire is the principal port on the Persian Gulf. Pahlevi (Enzeli) leads all other Persian ports on the Caspian Sea.

Constitution Dates From 1906

"Until 1906 Iran was an absolute monarchy. In that year the reigning Shah was forced to grant a constitution, under which the National Consultative Assembly, or Majlis was established. In October, 1925, this assembly voted to depose the young Shahan Khan Khan Pahlevi, then Prime Minister, was appointed to head a provisional government. In December of the same year he ascended the throne as Shah.

"Under the present constitution Iran's government somewhat resembles that of Great Britain. The Prime Minister is the constitutional executive and head of the Cabinet and all executive action is subject to the approval and support of the Majlis.

"Iran is modeling its educational system after that of England. The Valiahd (Crown Prince) is attending a school in Switzerland, organized very much on the plan of an English public school. A large number of government students, women as well as men, have been sent abroad to schools. A university has been founded, in addition to a number of secondary and technical and secondary schools.

"The education of Cyrus consisted in the time of Cyrus consisted of learning to ride, to shoot and to tell the truth. And this is in living again in the National Society for Physical Education, formed recently under the patronage of the Crown Prince. The Persians have always been fond of outdoor games. Polo was first played on the Iranian Plateau."

TIENTSIN, CHINA MEETING PLACE

Japanese Military Leaders Want Suitable Degree of Peace

Tokyo, May 22 (AP)—Japanese military leaders in Northern China were reported in dispatches today to the Nanking (Chinese) capital to be meeting at Tientsin to consider measures for the maintenance of what the Japanese regard as a suitable degree of peace and security in the demilitarized zone south of the Great Wall.

These reports followed upon the earlier advices Japanese troops were moving upon the great wall with the intention of entering Northern China on an "anti-bandit-expedition". The war office asserted that there was no intention of occupying Chinese territory and the troops would be withdrawn to Manchoukuo as soon as the "bandits had been punished and dispersed".

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks gruk, don't swallow a lot of pills, salts, mineral waters or harsh cathartics to get relief and expect them to make you suddenly smile with happiness. Just get at the cause.

For they may do it. They should. A mere bowel movement doesn't relieve you unless the bile your liver should pour into your bowels is flowing freely. If bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays in the bowels. It doesn't digest. It poisons. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You belch. Your head aches. Your breath is foul. Your skin sometimes breaks out in blotches. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel down and sunk. Your whole system is upset.

It takes those BILE-aid CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get this bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". They gently but surely help Nature get your liver working. Don't be satisfied with less than a full flow of bile—when it comes to making the bile flow freely, don't let anybody sell you substitutes. Insist on Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red package. Only 25c at druggists. Read drug stores. © 1935 C. M. Co.

Sanantonia, Texas, May 21—Kivanians in their international convention here were told today war is the world's greatest menace" and that "the communistic movement is spreading" particularly in United States.

The Canadian public affairs group decided the aim of Kivanians and all people should be to bring proof war is the world's greatest menace and urged greater support of the League of Nations.

Dr. Benjamin W. Black of Oakland, Calif., chairman of the United States' Committee of Public Affairs, said, "Uprisings which today harass the industrial community in the nation are not, in a majority cases, strikes at all. They are planned Communistic revolutions, directed by radicals in the name of labor and working men within the unions," he said. "The Communistic movement is spreading continually gaining a stronger foothold."

SHORT STORIES BY POPULAR WRITERS

Old Love's Allure

By N. Florence Leech

CAROL GRAY stood absently, fidgeting the soft folds of a heavy burgundy velvet curtain. "Dreaming of Mr. King?" one of the salesgirls asked, partly, and Carol started.

"No," she answered sharply, and with nervous fingers began rearranging the graceful draperies displayed on Jean Dorothy. The girls envied her, she knew; but though she had much to be thankful for, she was strangely dissatisfied and restless.

Not every country girl who begins as clerk in a great department store, and then weds a rich husband besides. Hard work and intelligence in her dead-grown beauty, were the explanation. But now that she was practically engaged to Dewey King, she must cease to think of him. He was stout; he was used to having his own way; the future Mrs. Dewey King, accepted without a test find life a bed of roses. There had been some spats of late.

Carol shook them stored in surprise at a tall, broad-shouldered man who was approaching down the narrow aisle.

"Ronnie Trigg!" she cried. "What are you doing here?"

He shook her hand cordially.

"I want to buy some house-furnishings," he said, in his booming voice, "and I remembered you were in Mason's store. You might as well get the commission as any one."

"Ah—always the 'best of you,' she stammered, and flushed with surprise and anger, for she had supposed he came home to be married to see her. Moreover, she wasn't a saleswoman; she was a buyer. For Ronnie to think she was a mere clerk—her flush deepened.

"What sort of draperies do you wish?" she asked, coldly.

"All kinds," he answered, cheerfully, "for Dad's room, for Mrs. Greeley Hill, Carol, and I'm furnishing it."

"Oh," she exclaimed, "on Greeley Hill!"

"The house has Colonial pillars," he added, proudly.

She began pulling bolts of soft, rich material from the shelves. "This pattern is very smart for a living room," she assured him.

For an hour Ronnie poked about, interrupting the prospective customers, and as he selected curtains for every room in the house, he talked.

"Mustard and silver color chart now," he told Carol, "so I had a good house built, with sunrooms, and bedrooms, and the plans for the one dream house; remember?"

"Yes," she answered, through dry lips, and hoped that no one noticed the misery she was feeling. She did not want Ronnie for herself; but she resented it as much as any other woman living in her dream house.

For Carol and Ronnie had been engaged once at a time, and he had planned to build her a home with Colonial pillars on Greeley Hill. Together they had drawn the plans of the home. Then she decided to go to the city instead of getting married.

"I'd die of boredom in this town," she declared, meaning that Ronnie did not thrill her as he hoped some time to be thrilled by a man. "I'll come back in a year," she promised; but she did not return. Instead, she had concentrated all her energy on her work, and caught, because she had achieved an office on the sixth floor of Mason's that she was a success. Bad always, to the back of her mind, was the thought that Ronnie I would be waiting if ever she returned to Piney Ridge.

Ronnie had not waited, however; he had found himself another girl, and built their dream home for her.

"That finishes the list," he was saying. "I appreciate your helping me, Carol."

"I'm sure your home will be beautiful," she answered. "When are you going back, Ronnie?"

"Tomorrow," he answered, and waited with obvious expectancy.

"I'll be at home this evening," she said, impulsively, for she felt that she must know more of his plans. "Come to dinner at six."

"Thank you, I'll be there." He gave her hand a quick squeeze and turned away.

After he had gone she called herself a fool. She was going to marry Dewey King, and have a home in Palm Beach and travel abroad. Why should she care when Ronnie married? But all day she was feverishly excited, alternately happy at the thought of seeing Ronnie again, and miserable remembering the dream home on the hill. At the first opportunity she telephoned her parents and at home she always called on in an emergency.

"It must be the best dinner possible," she instructed.

Dewey was waiting to drive her home. "I have [illegible] tickets," he told her, as he helped her into the limousine car. "We'll have dinner then go to the show."

"I'm sorry, but a friend from out of town is coming to dinner," she answered. "It was very unexpected," she added, apologetically.

Dewey frowned, and she felt guilty. "I'm sorry," she repeated.

"That's all right," he remarked. "I'll give away the tickets, and go to the club."

Carol was excited and expectant as she greeted in her new brocaded blue frock. She anxiously examined the tremulous-eyed girl in the mirror, noting the perfectly waved hair, the thick, beautifully pencilled eyebrows, the smooth, flushed cheeks.

"I don't look a day older than I did five years ago," she told herself, and the thought brought no comfort.

Dinner was well-cooked and well-served, but it was tasteless as ashes in her mouth. She was conscious only of this new, surprising Ronnie who sat across the table from her. She had thought of him always as an ordinary small-town lawyer, but he was handsome, perfectly tailored, and he talked better than any man she knew.

"He's not only kept up with me, but he has passed me," she thought, resentful jealousy of the unknown rival made her cheeks crimson and her eyes bright.

"Miss—Gardner; they had discussed the present-day heroine in crime; the actress in television; the future of women's business; but he had not mentioned what was uppermost in her mind. He finally rose to go.

"I hope you may be very happy in the house on the hill," she said, and was amazed when her breath caught on a sob.

Ronnie looked at her intently, and there was a strange light in his eyes. "That," said he, "depends on you."

Mutely she looked at him.

"I built the house for you," he admitted. "It is waiting—and I am waiting."

She began to cry, tears of bewilderment, surprise, and relief. "Why—didn't you say so?" she pleaded.

He put his arms around her. "I was afraid you would refuse me again," he said, humbly.

In a flash Carol understood many things. Ronnie had found out about Dewey, and that he had left although the door for himself. And he had changed his tactics; he wasn't a clever lawyer for nothing. He had made her realize she wanted him by letting her think she had lost him. He was no fool, he knew him; she had loved him all the time.

"I'll be glad to have Ridge Crest," she told herself cryptically. "I want to get—home."

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

THE young man who had just driven up in the smart red and tan roadster stepped briskly into the office of the filling station waiting room and wiped his forehead with a white silk handkerchief.

"Grease it up, buddy," he called to the attendant, "and dump in about ten of gas. Check the oil, too."

The attendant nodded, and the young man still gracefully into a wicker chair.

"Hot weather for driving," he remarked casually to the middle-aged man who sat in the chair opposite. The middle-aged man, neatly dressed and well groomed, drew his mind of driving gloves, produced his own handkerchief and nodded in concurred fashion. "Comin' through to-day, his tone that of one fellow traveler who recognizes a like veteran of the open road.

"Quite a way," the youth answered. "Old ben out there sure eats up the miles. How far is it to Bolton from here?"

"Bout a hundred miles. I just came up that way. You ought to make it by dark."

The young man smiled in good-natured indignation. "By dark! Say, I could be there before six. How are the roads? Pretty good?"

"Fair. Nothing like the roads they have up in York state, though."

"Those that I come over today aren't anything to brag about," the youth agreed. "I sometimes wish folks around here could see the highways in our mid-western states. Make them blush for shame."

"Right you are there, brother. Ride for miles in the middle-west and never see a hill or a curve."

Gayly and unconscious though, somehow, after all they were not at ease. After a day or two of it you're glad to get into the mountains. I'll never forget the hard trip I made across the continent. Boy, it seemed good to see a hill for a change."

"I know how you feel," the middle-aged man agreed. "I guess everyone that's driven out to the coast has had the same experience. How'd you go, northern or central route?"

"Northern going and southern coming back. Say, there's a country for you! Texas! Boy, I like that climate. Makes one's so good, but the climate makes up for it."

"Been years since I've been there. Next to, I've been thinking of taking a trip down that way for some time. Can't do it for a month or two, though. Got to get back to work right now. Expect to do the whole country this summer."

"Make your time by the youth advised. "Canada covers a lot of territory. Ought to plan on two summers."

The middle-aged man looked doubtful. "Well, that's funny. A man I met a few days ago the other day urged to see all there is to see in about six weeks."

"Who's been there, has he?"

"No. Fact is he got all his information out of catalogues put out by various companies."

"Those things are the bunk. I wouldn't depend on them for a trip into the next county. Your last bet, friend, is to talk to someone who's actually done Canada and done it right."

"Been there have you?"

The youth smiled, slightly patronizingly, slightly indignantly.

"Just came from there, friend. Left Montreal this morning . . . . expect to reach Bolton by six tonight and drive through to New York before midnight."

"You don't say! That's some driving. Believe me I like to do it slower, see more country."

"Sure enough, but when you've seen all the country once or twice before there isn't much new to look at."

The youth stood up, restored his handkerchief to his pocket, glanced out into the yard and turned to the middle-aged man with a congenial smile.

"Glad to have met you, friend. It's good to meet and talk with a fellow tourist occasionally. Broadens one's outlook somehow. Maybe we'll run across each other again sometime."

"Hope we do." The middle-aged man stood up and offered his hand. "I've certainly enjoyed our little talk. Don't remember when I've enjoyed it more."

They shook hands and the youth stepped out into the sun. He slid behind the wheel of the roadster, waved to friendly Bolton and then, headed out into the traffic.

The middle-aged man stood in the doorway and watched him go.

"That youngster's traveled a good deal for a kid," he said, addressing the attendant. . . . "Been around a lot. Knows his way around by instinct, I guess, by—York. . . . Around town. . . . That's no sub around as he'll get."

The middle-aged man looked bewildered. "What do you mean 'around town'?"

"I mean he's never been outside of town to my knowledge. He's a clerk at the drug store. That's the boss' car he brought up here to get grease on."

The middle-aged man's face suddenly broke into a smile. The smile developed into uproarious laughter.

"That," he said, "is a good one. It's too bad. Him, you can't appreciate a joke."

"It certainly is," agreed the attendant sarcastically. "How'd you know my name was Jim?"

"Because," said the middle-aged man," they told me at Bolton to call you Jim."

"Humph—you're the new assistant they were sending up?"

"I save am. Just came in on the noon train." The middle-aged man stared off toward the drug store and smiled again. "I wonder, he said to himself, "what that kid will think the next time he brings his car up to be greased and I tell him I've never owned an automobile in my life?"

Just a Heart Fantasy

By Rowena M. Devine

IT lay under the copper letter-opener on his desk. Carefully cut from last evening's newspaper was Sarah Stone's Heart Talk column. She picked it up curiously and read:

Dear Sarah Stone:

What am I to do? Married, fifty, and in love with a woman much younger than myself. Is it fair to continue this marriage farce when it means suffering. My wife knows nothing of this.

—Troubled Husband

Mary Fallon barely glanced at the answer. It was the customary stuff—"Be considerate," "Consult your wife," and a strong reproof to "Troubled Husband."

She sank breathing, into the nearest chair, the clipping held tight between cold fingers. So this was what it had come to. And yet, why be surprised? When Helen Deacon's charming cousin had come from the East for a visit every wife in Colton had tightened the domestic reins. Beautiful, blond, helping her 28 years, Lora King had captured the attention of every man in the community. There had been many ardent little flirtations—John Fallon had his share in them; but gradually, the older men had realized what fools they were making of themselves and had dropped from the race, leaving the chase to the younger men.

Not so, John. Mary Fallon's fingers tightened round the clipping. Evidently Sam had caused his interest to increase instead of wane. And now—she glanced at the clipping again. Type written before her eyes. So this was to be the end of twenty-five years of married life. Not

TANGLED LIVES

By ANN FORESTER

"But what has the poor fellow done to you that you should run one of your arms to kick him!" Kitty's host bristled a trifle.

"Why dear lady — the doctor's arm was weighted with enforced patience as he fixed his glasses at her, "for don't understand. There is a mystery about this fellow . . . Of course, you understand that I'm speaking strictly confidentially, but there is a scandal in his past. He was in the British navy—and he was mixed up in some disgraceful affair about a woman—there was a shooting scrape over cards—it was just the punishment of his family put him off. His father was Sir Lionel Keith's. There was a curl to the doctor's upper lip, "we call this fellow the Honourable Jim!"

Behind his back, I'll bet they do it, then!" said Kitty afterward with flashing eyes as she and Joyce were dressing for dinner in the cabin they shared. "That woman Hilda mocking! Just eaten with jealousy, he is!"

For some reason Joyce found her own cheeks burning as she passed the powder puff over her face.

"A woman . . . he got into a mess like a woman . . . I don't know a thing about it of course, but he's the type the average woman would make a fool of herself over—"

A little pause, as though she stopped to draw the picture of the average woman flinging herself in Jim Keith's arms. Then, with unnecessary heat, she said: "I could like him, anyway! That—that sort of cold little laugh he gets in his eyes . . . He fancies himself!"

"Ay, poor kid . . . he doesn't mean anything by that high manner of his. He's only whistlin' in the dark, . . ."

It was apparent that not everyone shared Mrs. McAlnay' prejudice against the Neptune's first officer. At the ship's dance that night, Mrs. Calhoun, the determined widow, had much feminine competition.

Watching over her escort's shoulder, Joyce noticed that Jim Keith danced perfectly, without effort—literally do, she told herself, with a little curl of the lip, even cashiered ones!

Joyce felt a hot contempt for the women who frankly sought Keith, yes when she saw him evade them and fall into conversation with some man she was unmercifully irritated.

"I can't stand him!" she told Kitty emphatically, "there is a high and mighty manner of his is unbearable!"

Which was unjust, for at that moment Jim Keith was smiling most unaffectedly at some salty of a sybaritic little brunette.

Such undercurrents as these in her tone such an unwonted high color in her cheeks, that Kitty looked at the girl in surprise. She saw Joyce's eyes go wide. Saw her catch her breath as an involuntary little gasp.

Mercifully unaware that he was the subject of their conversation, Jim Keith was walking over to them.

SNUBBED

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

An odd lenseness about Jim Keith as he walked across the salon, as though he were drawn against his will. Dark eyes grave, lips unsmiling he spoke.

Kitty's amazing glance saw that Joyce had gone colorless. Her eyes were dilated, as thought she smoldered with some inner excitement. Her voice sounded muffled.

"Thank you, no." Then, at the sudden red which flamed in the man's face she added stiffly, "I'm not dancing any more tonight."

A tense moment when that strange antagonism played between them. Then Jim Keith, the rest of the room had melted away. There was only this slender, imperious figure with the proud, shining head and the unfriendly eyes. His anger swept him. What, a fool he had been to lay himself open to this. He inclined his head out and grasp her slender bare shoulders—to shake her as one would shake a bad tempered child.

"Oh here you are, bad things! I wanted to tell you that the orchestra is going to play a foxtrot and I just adore foxtrots."

The widow, in all her brazen glory was sweeping down on the tense little group.

Kitty saw the muscles stiffen around Jim Keith's mouth, and her warm heart rose in defense. She placed a capable hand on Keith's uniformed sleeve.

"You're just too late, Mrs' Calhoun, Mr. Keith and I are going to have this dance."

"Oh . . . !" The widow's mouth opened a trifle blankly. "Oh . . . !"

Jim Keith and Kitty moved away, leaving the disappointed lady standing beside that silent, proud figure. By the time they had swung onto the dance floor, Keith had recovered his poise.

"What a good sport you are to do that—" his grateful smile flashed down into Kitty's face. "And I anticipated my own wish. I was about to ask you—"

"Oh, sure!" Every honest square inch of Kitty's body quivered with the lie. "I was just dying to dance with you!"

"Hum-m-m!" sniffed Kitty.

Long after Kitty was asleep, Joyce stood at the open door of the cabin looking out on the moon flooded sea. . . .

The moon of the tropics . . . such a lavish outpouring of light. Hot, silver . . . the water looked like a wrinkled stretch of melted lead. Silvery the night mists enmeshed. thought the girl, and her eyes were deep and troubled. It made one long for beautiful and satisfying things . . . . Made one long with a terrible hunger. Sweet, sharp pinches she had known in that long ago time when Norman had kissed her on moonlit nights . . .

Not that she walled Norman here — the very thought of him was instinctively unreal. Besides, her life belonged to Roger — good, kind Roger, who had lifted her out of grey poverty into this splendid world.

She was through with love and all of that . . . After all—she had everything she wanted . . . .

Joyce closed her eyes and lifted her face to the night breeze. And though she received the moon's kiss.

Poignantly lovely . . . The man who watched from the shadows listened with eager his breath. He forgot he had struck a match and cupped it to light a cigar or a cigarette. Only when it blazed to the nails did he shake it out. Then he recalled to himself.

Jim Keith swore under his breath and strode off on his own quarters.

KITTY'S NEW FRIEND

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

Days of gold and ultramarine—black and silver nights. Colne—old Roger was pursuing his hands deep into it these days.

Stretched out on a deck chair, the old, white haired man felt a pleasant warmth, more often than not, the centre of an interested little group. In the shelter of one of the lifeboats, after years of taciturn silence, Roger was finding himself a human companionship sweet.

Very different, this Roger Cameron, from the lonely figure of the Neptune. But the thought of Riverston was far away from this flashing blue and silver sea . . . from the sun lying warm on the white deck. Joyce's face—the face of a beautiful wife—as she sat beside his steamer chair. \

Roger's only connection with Riverston ever were the letters he received from time to time from his agent, and which he had tipped letters of his sister-in-law.

They caught up with him in his wanderings. Cora Cameron's letters bringing to him a vision of the smug brick house on The Crescent—the pleasant, ordered life in prison for a life-time. The old man would dutifully ask he read them, and his eyes would light with malicious satisfaction as he thought of the way he had outwitted her by his impulsive marriage.

He thought of many things, when he pretended to be asleep in the steamer chair, his face covered with a silk handkerchief . . . Thought of the strange countries he was seeing after a lifetime spent in a sleepy inland town. . . Thought of the color and beauty which filled these last years . . . Thought of the shadow in his wife's lovely eyes.

Joyce was with him almost constantly these days. Other people noticed her devotion, and spoke of it —the women with suspicion, the men with amusement. Incredible, that she would prefer to remain with this grey old man when a world of youth and pleasure beckoned.

But, for Joyce, there was comfort and rest in the presence of old Roger. He was like some shaggy, faithful dog whose very kindliness was a protection.

Perhaps by some delicate intenuse of the soul she felt some critic in her life approaching and instinctively clung to the comforting image of Roger.

Yet, as she sat there on the deck, slender body and delicately vivid face incongruous with the rest of the elderly group which formed around the old man, Joyce was keenly aware each time Jim Keith passed.

As the moon draws the tide, so Joyce felt the tide of her blood rise to the mere presence of this man . . . hot—turbulent—strange, the spell he could cast upon her, this dark, moody man! Was it love or hate? . . . She did not know herself.

At the table in the dining salon they were coldly polite, yet Joyce felt restlessness at her presence.

Kitty frankly liking him. They had struck up a real friendship, those two. Rosy, good natured Kitty was the one woman on the ship with whom Jim Keith unbent in conversation when he was free from his work.

A strange, cold little feeling in Joyce's heart, which she did not recognize as jealousy. . . . One time asked Kitty, what they spoke about, asked it in a casually, scornfully amused tone, and avoided her own eyes in the mirror as she did so. "He's quite interesting, isn't he?" Joy—and jade and things like that. He was "quite" no time about it. Chinese cloisonne he got on his last trip. He'd heard that this old Britisher had a . . . he'd never showed visitors.

And Kitty was off on a tale of adventure which flushed her cheeks and made her eyes snap blue fire. Kitty—plain, matter-of-fact Kitty —oddly enough, had a secret passion for beauty. Perhaps it was this hidden trait which had drawn her to Joyce in the first place. She knew nothing of the exquisite art of enameling, and Jim Keith by a casual word had opened a whole new world of beauty to her dazzled eyes.

Kitty was Jim's bulwark against a flood of unwanted feminine attentions. For this she had received the undying enmity of the very blonde one. "20 diamond-studded . . . ."

This conversation took place on the sunny promenade deck, when Mrs. Calhoun had dropped into the steamer chair beside Joyce.

"I wonder what they can find to talk about —" the widow's sharp voice overlooked one important thing, Mrs. Calhoun," Joyce turned smoothly, "Miss Dawson is not merely a nurse. She happens to be my valued friend."

"Just what I meant—" murmured the blonde one. "20 diamond-studded . . . ."

"I can't tell you, Mr. Cameron, how I admire your spirit of democracy," purred the widow to Joyce. "So few women in your position would permit their nurse to sit at the same table . . . ."

With the tremendous facilities at our disposal, A&P Food stores are particularly well fitted to take the lead in a special effort of this kind.

Manufacturers, whose merchandise we will feel loyal before, are co-operating fully. More purchasing from the farmer and more and better values to you, the consumer, is the result of this co-operation.

Build your pantry stock on these foods this week. Remember every dollar spent in buying "Produced in Ontario" goods plays its part in keeping a factory worker at his place and giving the farmer more cash for his crops.

AS A CEREAL OR IN COOKING

it's FINE either way!

It's so handy to have a package of Kellogg's All-Bran in the kitchen. Serve it as a cereal. Use it also as a wholesome ingredient in your muffins, breads, omelets, waffles, etc.

Kellogg's All-Bran supplies "bulk" to aid regular habits. All-Bran is also rich in vitamin B as well as iron, an element of the blood.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct common constipation, due to insufficient bulk in the diet. In severe cases, with each meal. If not relieved in this way, see your doctor.

The "bulk" of All-Bran does not break down during digestion as does that of leafy vegetables, and is therefore more effective for furnishing the needed "bulk." It is a delicious tasative food . . . far better than patent medicines.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

and most women would make fools of themselves with him. Well, Mary's one who won't!"

"Doesn't seem to me you've had the chance!" said Kitty with what was, for her, unusual asperity.

"Don't be catty, Kitty!" Joyce's head was bent, but Kitty saw the hand which held the letter tremble and with a rush she crossed the room and forced the girl's face up to meet her gaze.

The other twisted her head away, but not before Kitty had seen the tears standing on the lashes.

"Joyce —darlin', tell Kitty what is it?"

The girl's voice came smothered on Kitty's kind shoulder. "I don't know, Kitty. Nothing, and yet—and I don't know why I'm so rude. I suppose—that look on his face when we first met—his—he called me 'Miss Cameron' . . . he thinks I'm common and gold digger who married Roger for his money. . . And—the funny part of it is, Kitty, that I'm not care what he thinks! I dislike him! Oh, — intensely! I don't see why I ever waste breath upon him! I—I won't waste another thought on him. . . ."

SUMMER MODES CHARM AUDIENCE

Gowns by Nellie Smith, Hats by Mrs. Harman in Fashion Revue

Sponsored by Mrs. Payne's group of St. Thomas' Women's Guild, a fascinating Style Show was presented in the Parish Home last evening by the Nellie Smith Dress Shop, and Mrs. Harman, millinery, before a large audience. The stunning fashions introduced by the mannequins created a sensation among the onlookers.

The stage setting was most effective, sprays of apple blossoms in large baskets and the deep maroon velvet hangings made a perfect background for the parade of fashions. Music throughout the evening was supplied by St. Thomas' Orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Ross Hunter.

With Mrs. A. Seymour, Mrs. J. Kerr, Mrs. C. Ashley and Miss Gladys Emmerson as mannequins, the fashion revue opened with a showing of imported Lanzea knitted suits, which are being sold exclusively by Nellie Smith. In the palest of pastel tones, these suits immediately solved any problem the sportswoman might have regarding correct play attire. Sports frocks for the participant and for the spectator proved equally intriguing and would probably put any opponent off their game. Flax tweed linen, simple cottons, which achieved a decidedly dangerous air in their new gulas, seersucker, and crepes featuring the "Jantzen" crepe fashioned as gay an assortment of afternoon and sports frocks as one could imagine. The swagger polo coats and sports coats were very smart indeed. All pastel tones were represented and the classic white lost none of its appeal. For evening, madame has a wide choice of materials, linen, cottons, nets, chiffons, crepe intrigue (pure silk) and the ever charming printed chiffon. Combined with lace or with beautiful quilted evening jackets, the gowns for evening possessed unusual loveliness and the summer dance floors will blossom forth in an interesting manner.

For every daytime frock there was a chic hat from Mrs. Harman's delightful fashion picture, to complete the fashion picture. Pastel felts in a variety of new treatments with flattering brims and folded crowns exactly matched the sports dresses with which they were worn. White hats in every style were perfect examples of the milliner's art.

One of the outstanding costumes of the show was the picturesque evening gown of Miss Parnell's stiffened net with tiered skirt and cape bordered with cut-back petals with flowers at the neck. This gown worn to advantage by Mrs. Ashley was one of the hits of the Fortnight. Miss Gladys Emmerson wore a graceful gown in Prism orange chiffon, featuring the new smooth hip and full-skirted silhouette. The full sleeves of the bodice were gathered into a narrow cuff. This also was a "Vogue First."

Mrs. A. Seymour introduced a spectator sports ensemble, the dress of native pure silk self-checked shantung, with short sleeves and tailored jabot. The swagger jacket was of printed linen in contrasting tones. Mrs. J. Kerr wore a clever formal evening gown of Hemstitched shantung linen, daringly cut, with short jacket.

In behalf of the Guild group responsible for, the show, Rev. A. Beaumont Payne expressed appreciation to Nellie Smith and Mac clation to Nellie Smith and Miss Storey-Bunnett and to Mrs. Harman for their generous efforts in arranging the show. He also thanked the management, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hunter and the orchestra for contributing to the success of the evening.

Proceeds for the benefit of the Bellevue Presbyterian Church, were realized.

Dairy; and the Ideal Store, Mr. Payne expressed thanks for the kindness in supplying bread, butter, cream and coffee and invited all to adjourn to the basement of the church for refreshments. Here the ladies of the Guild served the dainty guests with a delightful lunch which brought to a close a very original and enjoyable entertainment.

What Women Want

The desire among women of all times and all nations, to look their best is the reason for the existence of one of the world's most unique stores, Timothy Eaton's. The direction of New York and Paris thousands of men and women in all branches of the industry work to satisfy women's desire for style.

There is an establishment though not a mile removed from New York (the style centre of America) which has we believe, What Women Want. This place is reputed with the models of the hour in the various shades and materials that have been approved by world's leading arbiters of fashion. No sooner has any style been accepted by fashion authorities of the women's world than reliable copies make their appearance at this store and are presented for the choice and the selection of the people of Belleville.

At this shop, of which we write The Yetta "Soogie, located at 260 Front Street, are always found not only styles and materials in vogue among today's society leaders, but the most conservative and modish garments that have met with universal approval. As regards price, which is most important to every woman today, you will find that graceful and becoming garments are offered at most reasonable figures, for which this store enjoys the patronage of the leading citizens of the community. It is the most popular store among the women of every walk of life.

You have at your service here a selection of many little accessories of dress that characterize the attire of the progressive woman of today. At The Yetta Shoppe you will always find the same courteous and accommodating quality at reasonable prices—the same metropolitan atmosphere which actually brings Fifth Avenue and the Rue De La Paix to your door. The Yetta Shoppe has so taken into consideration the needs and the demands of the people of Belleville that it is predicted that the future will see greater strides in the progress of their business. Obituary

THE LATE HERBERT COMINS

There passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George West and Mr. West, on Monday, May 13th, Herbert Comins, who had been a resident of Campbellford for the last fifteen years.

Mr. Comins was for some years in the employ of the Hydro Electric Power Commission and was well and favourably known in this vicinity. The late Mr. Comins was born in Thurlow township 73 years ago. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. George West, of Campbellford and three sisters, Mrs. Crozier Moore of Hamilton; Mrs. Phillips, of Perrylow; and Mrs. Wellington of Saginaw, Mich.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon May 15th., service being conducted by Rev. H. B. Neal, minister of St. John's United Church. The remains were interred in Mount Pleasant cemetery. The pallbearers were George Couch, Stewart Crossen, David Lesson, George Hammond, Frank Hubble, and Blake Sills. — Campbellford Herald.

FRANK H. MINAKER (Picton)

Picton, May 22.—(Special)—After an illness of four months' duration with heart trouble Frank H. Minaker, a prominent and highly regarded resident of Picton passed away at his residence on Paul St., Tuesday, May 21st.

The late Mr. Minaker was born in South Marysburg, Prince Edward County, 56 years ago, his parents being the late Mr. Albert Minaker and his wife Adella Loomer. As a young man he entered the employ of Mr. E. W. Case, Druggist, Picton, and after three years' service he went to Toronto where he was engaged for some few years with a drug firm. Returning to Ontario he successfully represented a Montreal wholesale drug firm as travelling representative from coast to coast for twenty years. Thirty years ago the late Mr. Minaker returned to Picton and entered into partnership with Mr. A. M. Buchanan in the furniture and undertaking business, the firm name being Buchanan & Minaker. In the year 1920 he retired and the business was sold to Messrs Rickel & Irvine.

In the passing of Mr. Minaker, the town of Picton has lost a good citizen, and many friends in the town and throughout the district deeply regret his death. He took an active interest in municipal, fraternal and church activities and he will be greatly missed in many respects. For many years he was auditor of the town of Picton and for several years he filled the position of secretary-treasurer of the Prince Edward County Agricultural Society. Fraternally he was a member of Prince Edward Lodge No. 18, A.F. & A.M. and the I.O.O.F. He was a staunch Conservative in politics and when health permitted he was an ardent golfer. In religion he was a valued member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and for ten years filled most efficiently the position of treasurer.

Surviving him and to whom the sympathy of many friends will be extended are his wife, formerly Miss Annie Buchanan; one sister, Mrs. Albert Welbanks, Picton, and one brother, Mr. Bruce Minaker, Picton.

The funeral will take place under Masonic auspices on Thursday afternoon to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The service will be conducted by the Rev. S. M. Scott, assisted by the Rev. T. W. Jones of Demorestville. Interment will be made in Glenwood cemetery.

Air Photography Great Assistance Says Official

Civil government activity of the flying service was graphically explained to members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon on Tuesday, when Wing Commander O. G. Johnson of the R.F.C. and in charge of the Trenton Airport addressed the meeting. It was new member's day at the Club, the officers being elected by members joining the club during the past few months. Gordon Brey, acted as president, Cam Hardy as sergeant-at-arms and Ross Silver as song leader. J. Hitchon presided at the piano for the community singing.

It was remember, Tim McCann and a real worker since he joined the Club, was honored for the day. Tim, who for some years was located in Northern Ontario, told his listeners he enjoyed himself but yet full of natural resources country, in detail he explained the value of Bellingsmines to Timmins, stating there were mineral shafts down 4,500 feet with miles of railway underground and that 3,000 tons of ore was mined daily, the mines producing gold to the value of $6,00. He also stated, that the south country provided a wonderful help for the manufacturing towns of Southern Ontario, and he recommended a trip to the north at the first opportunity to anyone living in such a great district, Cliff Barrager and Gordon Lawrence read contributions for the prizes donated by the booster. Rinkin Pinkie had as his guest, Mr. Smith, general manager of Zellers, who are opening a new store in this city. Mr. Kingsley, manager of the local store, Mr. Ritchie, superintendent construction for the firm, Edgar Rutherford, general contractor and A. Arnold Thomson, architect. Mr. Thomson assisted in the program by giving a number of his well known imitations. The guests were called upon briefly.

Fellow of Farnham

The speaker of the day was introduced by George Pordyce and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Ross Silver, Wing Commander Johnson told of the formation of the Air Board in 1919 and of the early difficulties in forming a flying corps for the Dominion after the war. Donations of aeroplanes by the British Government resulted in the fete war was the nucleus of the Royal Canadian Air Force soon recognized for more modern machines. The opening of the war saw the establishment of experimental forestry patrol station at Sioux Lookout from which has grown the Provincial services, and which are essential in keeping fires under control. The speaker told of the many stations now in operation and the good work they were accomplishing. He also explained the starting of the air mail routes and their taking over after the service was put in good working order.

The greatest contribution was the air survey photography claimed the speaker, which provided surveyors with informations, that was invaluable although Wing Commander Johnson admitted, that at first the surveyors were not pleased with the arrangements but at the present time find these air maps most useful. The speaker told of the various stations from which air photography was carried on, and how the maps were obtained presenting photographs to illustrate the point. Preventive service was also carried out on the east coast, which materially assisted the authorities. Wing Commender Johnson made it clear, that maps of any district photographed by the air service was available to any resident.

SIDNEY B.Y.P.U.

The meeting was held in the church with Ralph Smith in charge. It opened with hymn 2, after which the Lord's prayer was followed in unison. The members then, with Myrtle Reid as leader, repeated the 23rd Psalm for the Scripture lesson. Hymn 18 was sung, business discussed and the secretary read the minutes and called the roll with twenty members and a few visitors. The collection was taken and hymn 22 sung. Beatrice Parks gave a reading. Doris Carter sang a solo and another reading was read by Bertha Smith. Hymn 27 was sung and the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

4 1-2 YEARS FOR HI-JACKING JOB

Prince Brothers Sentenced in Toronto Court Today

TORONTO, May 22.—(CP)—Two men were sentenced today on charges of receiving and retaining stolen goods arising out of the "hijacking" of a truck load of $18,000 tobacco load near Napanee several months ago.

George Prince, 26, was sentenced to four and a half years in Kingston Penitentiary and Robert Prince, brother, received two years less one day definite and one year indefinite in Ontario Reformatory.

Crown Counsel charged George was more responsible than his brother. George testified said "I believe I influenced him."

Chippendale-a name that denotes worth

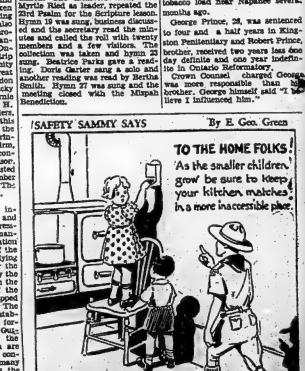
■ The name Chippendale holds a wealth of meaning in the world of furniture because a genuine Chippendale is a masterpiece of its kind.

■ For over 50 years the name Sunlight has stood high among housewives, too, because it means a soap that is guaranteed pure. It is a masterpiece of soap! No other laundry soap bears the stamp "guaranteed pure".



■ Being all pure soap, Sunlight dissolves easily without hard rubbing, forming lots of rich, lasting suds that go to work quickly even in hard water and give you a snowy white, sweet smelling wash. The cleansing action of Sunlight is gentle and protects your garments from injury—keeping them out of the mending basket. Its purity saves your hands from the roughening effects of common laundry soaps, too.

■ Because Sunlight is all pure soap it is for that reason economical to use. Get a supply of Sunlight—you'll have an easier wash day and a whiter, cleaner wash.

Daily Short Story

"GIGOLO"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The party was an informal one. Gertrude herself did not want to make any fuss or furore about it. She had good reasons for keeping it quiet. But none knew them.

As the drinks and snacks were being served, they revealed to them the secret. It was an engagement party. Her engagement to Jack Norton. Handshaking followed and general congratulations. The guests took it with not too much enthusiasm.

The evening wore on, and the guests began to depart. They had seen Jack before, of course. They had met Gertrude at the various theatres, concerts and dances. But none had suspected the romance.

A few of the more intimate girl friends remained after the others had gone. The conversation straggled desultorily.

"I think he is very good looking," said one of them.

"Quite handsome," said another, "and looks as if he's good-natured, too."

"I don't think he'll horsewhip you after the marriage," said Gertrude laughingly.

Finally, one of them summoned enough courage to ask the question that was uppermost in their minds.

"What does he do Gert?" she asked. "Does he earn much at a living?"

Ever since Gertrude had made up her mind to yield to the impulse of love, she knew that she would eventually have to make the explanation. Well, there was nothing wrong in it. The future was still before both of them.

"At the moment," she replied, "Jack is doing nothing. He lost his job about two years ago. So he's studying engineering. His parents have been helping him out a bit, paying his expenses."

Gloom.

The girls remained silent. They had suspected that much, although they had been hoping it was different.

"He's pretty clever at mechanical things," continued Gertrude. "I have faith in his future."

The girl who was her dearest chum spoke up. "Well, I don't like to advise in matters like these, but you ought to know one thing: As a teacher—with a job safe the rest of your life, you're a pretty good permanent investment."

"I have thought of that, too," replied Gertrude, "and I might add I don't mind you pointing it out because, after all, we are dear friends. But I love him and I believe in him and I have faith in him."

Despite her protestations of love, however, Gertrude did have some qualms. She loved her teaching and had no objection to continue teaching the rest of her life, though she did not relish the thought of having a gigolo on her hands. Gigolo! How she hated the word. She knew her friends probably thought of that very same word but did not hurt her feelings.

Jack was insistent upon an early marriage. He told Gertrude that he saw no rhyme nor reason for delayed honeymoons. If she was taking the chance there was no excuse to delay, unless of course she wanted him to get a job first. He planned to continue his studies until he would obtain his engineering degree, and, as a matter of fact, it would be easier for him to study after marriage. There would not be the waste of time in shuffling between her home and the home of his parents.

The Wedding

Gertrude delayed, but finally agreed that the best time for the wedding would be after the exams of the semester when her vacation would start.

The wedding was to be a simple affair, they did not want to spend too much money. There was only one thing he insisted on — she should leave the honeymoon arrangements to him.

And thus it happened. The first week in June they met one morning and went to the license bureau, then they called up a few friends and together went to a church, called the minister and married through the services. The bride and all the bride's friends had been in their best. Only the bridegroom was buoyant.

Then they repaired to a quiet restaurant for dinner. Toward the end of the course, Jack arose:

"I want to thank you all for the good wishes and the toasts," he started. "And now I think it is time for me to announce our honeymoon plans. Gert and I—are taking a trip to Niagara."

"Jack!" ejaculated Gertrude "what's got into you?"

Jack smiled blankly. "Well, I guess I should go through with the entire explanation. I still have no job—and will continue to study engineering. But I have been left a legacy—a legacy which I inherited today."

Tears were in Gertrude's eyes, and the others looked at him with a curious feeling of gladness and doubt.

"I didn't know your parents had any real money," said Gertrude.

"And so they haven't," replied Jack, "the legacy was left me—by a maiden aunt. And her sole proviso had been that I must marry before I can touch it. You see, she didn't want me to spend my life in loneliness as she had done."

"But why—why—didn't you tell me that before," cried Gertrude.

"Because I figured if you could love me without a job and without prospects—your joy would be all the greater to learn this today. This is my wedding gift to you."

Gertrude recovered herself to some extent. "I will continue at my job," she said, "until you get your diploma and get a job. We won't waste your maiden aunt's money."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself with a satisfied expression and he said, O deer, it's simply terrible, and yet there just doesn't seem to be anything to do about it, that's the sad fly in the ointment.

In this case we might as well drop the subjeck, pop said.

Him not even knowing what the subject was yet, and ma said. Do you realize the next war is going to be even more ruthless and devastating than the last one? Mrs. Timothy Ashers the president of the Sissiety of Peace on Earth addressed the Dwerers of Cheqaiters this afternoon, and my deer her facts and figures were enough to make your hair grow. The gastly things that are going to happen to this werld, O deer, ma said.

No doubt, but sufficient unto the day are the ills and bills thereof, so we'll have to let the future worry about the future, pop said, and ma said, But Wiliyum, there's even going to have invisible germs and stomik bombs. Mrs. Ashers read us about it from a book by H. G. Wells, and he knows everything because all he has to do is use his imeanny power and guess it. Do you realize what would happen to you if an atomic bomb was let off within 10 miles of you? she said.

I'd probably never realize it, pop said. But for Fee's sake what are we going to do about it, he said, and ma said. Well at least, as Mrs. Ashers said, we can take all the preventive safeguards in our power. O deer, are you sure the downstairs windows are locked, Wiliyum? she said.

Yo gods do you hear the sound of approaching troops? pop said, as ma said, Wiliyum are you going to make sure about those windows or are you going to force me to go downstairs in my nervous state?

The auser is yes and no, pop said, Meaning he was going.

Then he did.

CANADIAN MISSING LIST SEARCHED FOR CLUES

Burlington, May 21 (CP)—Vermont authorities today pondered searching the missing persons lists of Canadian police in all effort to identify three skeletons found last week at the side of a Middlebury Vt. roadway.

Sheriff Ralph R. Sweet of Middlebury said: "So believed it conceivably possible, the family came from some place in Canada."

York, Neb., May 21 (CP) — Only three pairs of rubber boots, since six, 11 and 12, remained in stock of York merchants today as generous rainfall continued.

Reports to this city say approximately 4,000 persons did not replenish their supplies last fall due to the drought.

Rainfall since May 1 totalled 2.67 inches here and 1.25 inches has been received since Friday.

TARZAN THE UNTAMED—

Roger Cecil was some hundred yards from his plane. It was at this instant that Numabo, chief of the Wamabon, chose to leap from his ambush and lead his warriors in a sudden rush upon the white man. The young Englishman had no intimation of danger.

There was a chorus of savage yells and turning, Roger saw a score of black, naked warriors swarming upon him. A quick glance showed him they had cut off all chance of his retreating to his airplane and that their attitude was hostile.

Heavily armed with spears, bows and arrows, he knew they could overtake him at the first rush in spite of his pistol. Numabo was leading and the lieutenant aims at the brawny chief. Unluckily for the Englishman he missed his target.

Otherwise the killing of their chief might have dispersed the Wamabon. The bullet struck a warrior, and as he lunged forward, screaming, the others retreated. But to Cecil's chagrin they ran toward his plane; so that he was still cut off from escape.

I.O.O.F. HONORS CHAS. PHILLIPS

Presentation is Made by Members of Madoc Lodge

Madoc, May 22.—On Friday evening the Madoc Lodge 179 of I. O. O. F. met in their hall to bid farewell to Brother Charles Phillips, L.S.N.G., who left Monday afternoon for the west. Brother Phillips will be located in Trail, B.C. The following address was read by Brother Don Whytock:

Dear Charles: It is with the greatest regrets that we are gathered here on the evening of your departure to a new home. Since your return from the west some three years ago you have lived and worked among us in the utmost harmony. Whatever has been your lot in life, we shall always remember the cheerful manner and yet quiet and unassuming dignity with which you fulfilled your obligations.

As time goes on, the friendships of today become the memories of tomorrow and it is our sincere and earnest prayer that wherever you may be, you will always remember those of us who remain in Madoc and number us among your fondest recollections. To you may we commit this thought, that honest men esteem and value nothing so much in this world as a real friend. Such a one is, as it were, another self to whom we impart our most secret thoughts, who partakes of our joy and comforts us in our afflictions, and to this add the fact that his company is an everlasting pleasure.

In the Order you have always conducted yourself as a true Oddfellow and given of your best towards the furtherance of the principles of benevolence and charity, and now, at this time, on behalf of Madoc Lodge 179 of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, we ask you to accept this gift as a mark of our esteem and as an appreciation of your valued work and friendship.

Fraternally yours,
Jesse N. Ried, N.G.

Brother Ried then presented Brother Phillips with a lovely Oddfellows ring.

Colin Defoe who has been attending Queen's University at Kingston has completed his fifth year in medicine and is spending a few days at his home in Madoc.

Mrs. Crombie of Montreal spent the week-end at the home of her mother, Mrs. Robert Brass.

On Sunday the Madoc A.F. and A.M. No. 48 joined with the congregation of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in the morning service. The pastor, the Rev. W. A. Hunter, conducted the following order of service: "Holy, Holy, Holy", prayer, Psalm 120, prayer, responsive reading (Psalm 4), "Glory Be To the Father", hymn 544, Scripture reading (second chapter of Hebrews), hymn 643, prayer, offering, solo by Mrs. Charles Anderson "A Stranger of Galilee", welcome to the Masons, sermon by Rev. W. A. Hunter—"What is the doctrine of the church", prayer, hymn 810, Benediction. The service was well attended, there being about fifty Masons present.

About thirty-five pupils of Madoc high school motored to Picton on Saturday morning to attend the annual field meet. The pupils from Madoc high school taking part in the sports were Carmel Golan, Beulah Keene, Mabel Grover, Lillian Wood, Mac Reeves and Wellington Munro and were successful in bringing home some of the prizes. Mr. A. G. Anderson and Miss L. West of the high school staff also attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson of Springville and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Rivers and baby Margaret of Toronto were over Sunday visitors at the United Church Parsonage.

CONDUCTS CLASS IN TRAINING FOR LEADERSHIP

Crestre, May 23—Miss Kathleen Giles returned home on Saturday after spending the week with her sister Mrs. J. Conkell and Mr. Conkell at Shannonville.

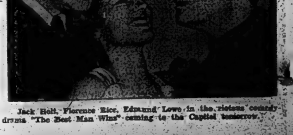
Ladies' Aid met on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Misses Minnie and Phea Howell with a splendid attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Pulver and Winston also Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Pulver and Morris and Clayton, visited at Mr. and Mrs. Arza Pulver's on Sunday.

Miss Grace Moy is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Moy for a time; Mrs. Moy is improving slowly after being quite ill with a severe cold and pleurisy.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Fox spent Monday afternoon and evening at Wellington.

Mr. Stanton Fox is making preparations for a new screen in verandah and sun porch. Houston Co. of Belleville have the contract.



Miss Helen Redner motored to Toronto on Thursday, returning Saturday morning. Miss Beatrice Jones of Redneyville accompanied her.

Motorists are looking forward to next Sunday as being blossom Sunday in Prince Edward. A nice warm rain would hasten the bloom which is a full week later than usual in this district.

Friends of Mrs. Stan Barber of Mountain View are very glad to hear of her returning strength after a serious operation in Belleville hospital recently.

Jack Holt, Florence Rice, Edmund Lowe in the riotous comedy-drama "The Best Man Wins" coming to the Capitol tomorrow.

"Bud" Donovan Eliminated In British Amateur

St. Anne-on-Sea, England, May 23 —(CP Cable)—Canada's last threat in the British amateur golf championship failed today when Jimmy Bud Donovan of Winnipeg, sole survivor of Canada's original quartet, was beaten one up by J. Morton Dykes of Scotland in the fifth round. Dykes had to go the qui tenic finals.

Dr. William Tweddell of Stourbridge, former champion, knocked out Mateus Storey, 3 and 2. Tweddell stopped Ben Riddian, who eliminated Richard D. Chapman of Greenwich, Conn., 3 and 1.

G. L. G. Henriques of the home club, dark horse of the tourney was the fourth to gain the quarter-finals, eliminating Dan Topping of Greenwich, Conn., 4 and 3. That left only Lawson Little Jr., defending title-holder and the original 11 United States entries.

Little himself, hard pressed on the way, got into the quarter-finals with a two-up victory over James R. Black, former Walker Cupper.

The fourth round saw a big upset as Cyril Tolley, twice former champion, was eliminated by A. M. Goodwin of Swinton Park, 36-year-old Manchester stockbroker, 3 and 2 one hole. Tolley had been expected to offer the greatest defence against the rookie invasion.

Another surprise came when H. I. Madden of Sweden eliminated Johnny De Forest, former champion, by 6 and 4. Madden was two up at the turn.

Tomorrow the titleholder meets Henriques, who has chalked up consecutive victories over Leonard Crawley, Leslie Garrard and Topping.

Dykes will meet Tony Torrance, who made the sixth of the quarter-finalists when he came back with a victory over H. L. Holden of Bowdon.

6 Naval Officers Hurtled To Death as Patrol Plane Crashes in Mid - Pacific

Aboard Battleship Pennsylvania in Mid-Pacific Press Manoeuvres, May 23.—(AP)— Six naval fliers on a mercy flight were killed, when their huge patrol plane crashed during the United States fleet manoeuvres in mid-Pacific, commanding officers revealed today aboard the Flagship Pennsylvania.

The six aviators, forming the crew of the Seaplane 827, went to their deaths without knowing what happened, officers said after shattered remains of the craft had been picked up.

The tragedy occurred Tuesday night, but was not disclosed until today after all hope for the men's lives had been abandoned.

The victims were:—Lieut. Harry Lately after announcement by the Government of the huge program designed to triple the first-line home fighting strength within two years, Lord Weir, aviation expert, has been named special adviser in expanding the force.

Recruiting offering themselves from the Dominions and Colonies will be welcomed, it was announced.

Altogether about 2,500 pilots and 20,000 skilled and unskilled workers will be needed in the next two years, and half of these will be needed before April of next year. This is in addition to a present strength of about 23,500 of whom 2,700 are pilots.

Apart from the actual recruiting the expansion program will include bringing reservists back into service and retaining for a time for existing personnel.

Ten new recruiting depots are being promptly opened throughout the country. Twenty-one new aerodromes will be to be provided, half to be used for training and maintenance units.

G. Britain Denies Concession Story

London, May 23 (CP Cable)—"Nonsense" is the authoritative comment here on the charges which have appeared in the Italian press to the effect Britain is forming military organizations on Arab lines in concessions within Ethiopian territory.

"We look for the story, whatever it was to be consistent in official British circles. British interests, it was stated, hold only one mining concession in Ethiopia, and that is small.

Church Union Thanksgiving Choir So Big It Can't Rehearse as Unit

Toronto, May 23.—(CP)—A choir of 2,000 voices, directed by H. A. Fricker, accompanied by the band of the Toronto regiment, will provide a festival of Sacred music as a part of the celebration of Thanksgiving in Maple Leaf Gardens, June 10, in celebration of the 10th anniversary of the United Church of Canada.

Seats are no longer available and more than 14,000 will gather in the great arena to celebrate the achievements of the United Church during the first ten years of its being.

The choir, composed of members of individual choirs throughout Toronto, is so large it has not been able to rehearse as a unit.

LIBERALS DEMAND MORE DETAILS

Want to Know How The Money Will be Spent

OTTAWA, May 23.—(CP)—The Government's Public Works program and the Relief of unemployment is still before the House of Commons today. Liberals plan before Easter have held up the works program first by opposing a proposal to tunnel at Toronto and then by demanding details of how a vote of $2,500,000 for harbors and rivers generally would be spent.

The House adjourned last night, J. P. Foulot (Lib. Temiscouata) carr. out with a charge against last year's expenditures. He said $32,000 had been spent to dredge a useless channel in the Riviere du Chene past property owned by Postmaster General Arthur Sauve. He claimed the material from the dredging was dumped on an island owned by Mr. Sauve. After protests from residents it was dumped back in the river.

Dredged For Boats

Minister of Public Works Hugh Stewart said the river was dredged to permit small boats to navigate and stop the water from stagnating. It was "for the benefit of the village and not for the benefit of the Postmaster-General".

He added that he did not believe there was anything irregular or improper in the dredging being so "so far as I know the usual, regular order was followed."

A long range use used by Mr. Foulot to emphasize his charges. He claimed the Postmaster-General absent from the House at the time, also owned property along the shore of the river opposite the island.

The Foulot charges climaxed a whole afternoon devoted to the $33,000,000 Construction Bill. He said later he would press them again today with the Postmaster-General in the House, claiming he had more particulars to disclose.

Most of the afternoon was spent with liberal members praising Mr. Stewart to say where he proposed to spend $2,500,000 appropriated for harbor and river works, but he claimed the list was not completed and he could not give details.

Two Persons Injured As Car is Ditched

Oshawa, Ont., May 22 (CP) — When the car in which they were riding plunged into the ditch last night, Bernice Wood of the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby and Delmer Butler of Ajilo Street, Oshawa, were badly injured. They were removed to the Oshawa hospital. Lillian Love, also of O.L.A., third passenger in the car, escaped with only a shaking up. Cyrille Bradley, driver told the police the steering gear on the car locked, throwing the vehicle into the ditch and upsetting it. The top of the car was almost completely torn off.

Dr. J. Rundle stated is injuries were not of a serious nature.

PRIME MINISTER TO BROADCAST

Will be Heard on Special Empire Day Program

Ottawa, May 23.— (CP) —The voice of Prime Minister R. B. Bennett will be heard throughout the British Empire tomorrow during a special Empire program to be broadcast by the Canadian Radio Commission. The program, which will start at 1.30 (m. E.S.T.) to last for one half hour, will be picked up by the British Broadcasting Corporation and transmitted to stations throughout the world.

The program will be Canada's contribution to a series of Broadcasts celebrating the various parts of the United Kingdom. Originating in Hamilton, it will feature greetings from the Dominion, and a brief dramatization of historical events, such as the arrival and settlement of United Empire Loyalists in Nova Scotia in 1783 and a meeting of the Wentworth Historical Society at which the Empire Day Movement was started by Mrs. Clementina Fessenden of Hamilton.

Following the Prime Minister's address, descriptions will be heard of how Empire Day is being celebrated in the Dominion.

BALDWIN LEADER IN THREE WEEKS LONDON REPORT

Condition of Premier Macdonald's Eyes Serious

CABINET CHANGES?

MacDonald May Take Place of Hon. Mr. Baldwin

London, May 23—(CP Cable)—Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, will replace Ramsay MacDonald as Prime Minister and head of the National Government within three weeks, it became virtually certain today in consequence of a new report from Mr. MacDonald's oculist.

Mr. Baldwin will continue as head of the council and frequently acting Prime Minister, will have a free hand in reconstruction the cabinet in the resignation of the head of the government involves the resignation of the entire Cabinet. There is every indication the Conservative leader, twice former Prime Minister, will take these steps without delay.

Mr. MacDonald is expected to change places with Mr. Baldwin and the reconstruction of the Cabinet, it was said on good authority, will be based on securing the strongest possible combination on the present national basis with a view to fighting the general elections in the early Autumn.

AGREEMENT BETWEEN GOMBELL, SEFTON IS WORKING OUT

Hollywood, May 23.—(CP)— The odd marital agreement of Minna Gombell, screen actress, and banker Joseph Sefton of San Diego was launched today on the third year of its existence.

When Sefton and Miss Gombell were married in Yuma, Ariz., May 19, 1933. He said he realized their world would keep them apart much of the time and he wanted his wife to enjoy herself.

He went before a notary and drew up a legal agreement providing that Miss Gombell date and dance with any single man of her choice between the hours of three p.m. and six p.m. without fear of their marriage vow. They both signed it.

At the end of the first year he drew up a new "declaration of trust" and renewed the agreement for another year, adding, "I am very much in love with my wife."

Miss Gombell announced Sefton has pursued the "declaration" to show flimdom two married persons can pursue different lives apart much of the time and be happy.

MAN AND DIME GO 7,000 MILES

Hitch-Hiker Hopes to Hold on to It For 3,000 Miles More

HALIFAX, May 23—(CP)—Ernest A. Wall still has his dime after 7,000 miles of hitch-hiking and can wonder now if he can stretch it out into another 3,000 miles of hitch-hiking.

That's what he has to do—hang on to that dime while hoping for handouts and complete the 10,000 miles he set out with when he left with Mayor H. E. Jenkins of Waldeck, Saskatchewan. He started from Waldeck last July, and he must get back by July 8 of this year if he's going to collect. He's sort of walking postal service and he picks up his odd change carrying letters from place to place in his travels.

Rejection by Mussolini Of Powers' Mediation Complicates Outlook

Prestige of League May Be Jeopardized, Some Fear

NOT SURPRISE

Responsibility, League Feels, Rests With Il Duce

Geneva, May 23—(CP-Havas)—Premier Benito Mussolini today rejected mediation proposals offered by the powers for adjustment of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

The summary rejection by the Rome government of the mediation facilities of the League of Nations, while not coming as a complete surprise, complicated the situation in which many delegates forsaw a crisis that may seriously jeopardize the league's prestige.

It is understood the proposals sent to Rome by Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Italian delegate, were substantially those submitted to him in private talks yesterday by Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal, and also communicated to Pierre Laval, French Foreign Minister, and other key members of the league of Nations Council.

The refusal of Mussolini to accept the propositions, thus means no further change in the situation here. Various delegates observing that responsibility for the success or failure of League intervention now rests with Il Duce.

FOUR INJURED IN TWO ACCIDENTS

Three Hurt in One Car When Vehicle Skids in Gravel

Wallaceburg, Ont., May 23—(CP) — Two motor accidents brought injuries to four passengers near here last night.

The injured: John Evans, Wallaceburg, cut about head and face, shoulder broken, body cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Evans, cuts on face, injury to one eye, possible internal injuries.

Joe Prendom, Wallaceburg, cuts on face and leg.

The first three were hurt when their car skidded in loose gravel on the blue water highway, went into the ditch and rolled over several times. The condition of both Mr. and Mrs. Evans was regarded as serious.

Alexander was a passenger in a car driven by Ernest Imie that skid on the Chatham townline and struck a telephone pole. Bleeding freely, he was picked up by Rev. and Mrs. Gotorih who were motoring past and taken to Wallaceburg. Later he was removed to Chatham.

The University, Baptist institution, frowns on smoking but yesterday, a special stock was laid in at the Tuck Shop for the Royal Society.

Crush Nations One by One, Hitler Plan, Say Russians

Moscow, May 23.—(AP) — The Soviet Press declared today Reichsfuehrer Hitler's foreign program as expounded in his speech Tuesday night is one of war in both Western and Eastern Europe.

Karl Radek in an article in Izvestia said Hitler has clearly rejected collective peace efforts.

The plan he put forward for the isolation of belligerents and the localization of war", Radek wrote, "is nothing but a device to allow Germany to crush her neighbours one by one".

Pravda said the Nazis were trying to get support "in certain circles in England and Japan" in her war plans and hoped for assistance from Hungary, Finland and Poland.

Police News

Activities in and around local police circles stirred a new low level during the past 24 hours, not a ringing arrest being necessary nor a major incident being reported locally. A number of automobiles were found parked in the downtown area obstructing the progress of the city sweeper this morning. Police officers were affined to the windshields of each vehicle instructing the driver to report to the police station. Sixteen transients were afforded a night's lodging at the police station last night.

The provincial police were called to the home of Herbert Hooke, fourth concession of Sidney, to investigate a reported robbery. According to information received burglars had entered the Hooks home and stole $15.00 from a trunk in the upstairs part of the home. Police are of the opinion that the robbery was committed during the absence of the family. The case is still under observation.

ZELLERS STORE OPENED BY MAYOR
Shoppers Gather Long Before Ribbon is Cut

The new store of Zellers, Limited was officially opened by Mayor Tice before a crowd of several hundred people this morning at nine o'clock. Half an hour before the hour set shoppers began to gather at the front of the new store and spent the time admiring the excellent window arrangement, which is one of the best that may be seen anywhere and which would compare favorably with any seen in city many times the size of Belleville.

Promptly at nine, Mayor Tice along with Alderman Frank Dobson, the new manager of the store, Mr. Klenapple, and officials of the Zellers organization appeared at the front door across the entrance of which stretched a cord.

The mayor in his opening remarks commented on the great many improvements, that have taken place since he came to Belleville. The stores of Front street, were a credit to that city, he said, and the new store was one of the finest. The past few years have seen a great change in the merchandising methods of doing business and I am glad to see that Belleville is not lagging behind other cities," he commented.

"I take this opportunity of congratulating Architect J. Arnold Thomas on the excellent appearance of this new store and, also the contractors, Mr. Johns, who executed in such a splendid manner the designs of the architect. I am sure the management of the Zellers organization will meet with success in their new location and I believe I am voicing the sentiment of all those present when I say that we wish this firm every success and many years of prosperity and that it will find Belleville a good place in which to do business. I now declare the store open for business, Mr. Tice concluded.

The Mayor then stepped forward and as he pulled the ribbon, a pair of scissors, the doors swung open and the crowd surged forward into the store. At the same time cash registers were ringing up the merry tune of wash sales that is added in this city another unit of the business body to Front Street.

590 SUBSCRIBERS WILL HEAR SERIES
Concert Association Announces Next Season's Program

Membership in the Canadian Concert Association of Belleville for the season of 1935-36 totals 590 as a result of the week's campaign which was brought to a close on Tuesday night when 590 members and one hundred more subscribers than heard the inaugural series of the association.

Miss Westerman of the association staff, Miss Lorna Riggs, soprano chairman and the local executive and committee were gratified at the result achieved.

Already the choice of programme for next season is the topic of interest in Belleville. At the first concert will appear Miss Ann and the London (Eng.) Singers, a group of five men who are available for only a few concerts in Canada. This is one of the premier organizations in the English world. Miss Ann Ayres, soprano of Toronto, who has sang in Toronto and Chicago will appear in the second concert. Miss Gwendolyn Williams who was here some months ago. Miss Alfred will be the accompanist for Miss Jones. In the third concert the two piano team of Scott Malcolm and Reginald Godden will be heard. The program this year is considered one of the finest which could be chosen.

3 BABES PLACED BY LOCAL BOARD

Has Fourteen Children Who Might Be Adopted From Society

"We have had several applications for adoptions of children," stated Inspector Thos. D. Ruston of the local Children's Aid Society. "The applications are for blonde or brunettes, some ask for curly haired babies and some are very careful about the age, the children from two and a half years up being popular for adoption."

"I have already placed three, two girls and one boy, and have executed 'Adopt a Baby' was started and I have been busy with persons for adoption of others.

"Altogether we could send out fourteen babies if we found the local society".

The adoption by Premier and Mrs. Hepburn of a child is expected to put even more spirit into the Adopt a Baby campaign, the Inspector said. He handed out for publication today the following letter:

With the appeal of childhood sweeping this province as never before in its history as the date of the quintuplets' birthday draws near, there are hundreds of institutions and agencies all over the province that are co-operating with local Children's Aid Societies in making Hon. David Croll's special project, "Adopt a Baby" movement of record-breaking proportions in the interest of unfortunate boys and girls. Almost every municipality has its own locally developed program, and during this week nearly seventy organizations in Toronto alone will be enrolled by the child Welfare Council of Greater Toronto.

One of the most comprehensive programs is that already put under way by the Belleville Society of Welland. In this city, arrangements are being completed for baby parades, outdoor picnic luncheons, and special meetings in all the local churches in Welland are making special mention of the "Adopt a Baby Week" on Sunday, May 26th, the eve of the date of the quintuplets' birthday a public gathering will be held on the Welland Civic Square with the co-operation and support of the local Lions Club.

With this mass co-operation enlisted in nearly every section of the province, the campaign for homes for clearing the shelters of Ontario of every child available for adoption before the end of "Adopt a Baby Week" has every likelihood of, on a wholesale scale life changed into substantialsalaried existence for 1,000 children by happy lives in adoptive homes.

BOWLING LEAGUE CLOSES SEASON

Banquet And Presentation of Cups at Recreation Alleys

Last evening at the Recreation Alleys the Major "D" Bowling League officially closed their activities of the past fall and winter months. The play-off for the Major Top Tailor Cup and the individual prizes for the league's play was staged.

After the evening's bowling all members assembled upstairs for a banquet and the presenting of the prizes. Mr. Bill Halsey presented Mr. James Rundle, captain of the Recreation Alleys team with the Major Tip Top Tailor Cup, which was presented for the best team score made throughout the season. "Jimmie" graciously received the cup and declared, that the team would be in fighting again next year.

Mr. Pat Drumm then handed the individual prizes for the evening's play. Mr. Sid Robinson proved to have the best single score while Mr. Den Garjeny won the prize for the high single score. Mr. Pat Drumm came second in the three string and the singles. Mr. Cecil Ling won the blind three string prize, while Mr. Henry Painter and Mr. Chuck Barnett won the blind singles prizes.

After the prizes were presented many speeches were given. Mr. Macklon on behalf of the American Hardware team, said he was glad that they had won the cup and while they would play under a different name next year they would again be trying had for the cup. The captains of the different teams expressed their pleasure of having had an enjoyable year's companionship together and hoped they would all be back again next year. Mr. Orliff Loyd was also asked to talk about the chain letter craze in which he had taken a prominent part. Speeches were given by all the team members with most of them expressing the same thought that they had had a pleasant bowling year together and that all present members would be back again next year.

PICTON STUDENT HAS A BRILLIANT RECORD

R. D. McDonald, a graduate of Queen's University, who was awarded one of the fellowships of the Royal Society of Canada at the annual meeting of the society which opened at McMaster University, Hamilton, yesterday, had an exceptionally brilliant career as a student at Queen's. In 1932 he won his first scholarship and in 1933 he was awarded the P. D. Ross scholarship. In 1931, the year he graduated with the Bachelor of Science degree, Mr. McDonald qualified for the Governor-General's medal and also won a National Research Council bursary. The following year, Mr. McDonald carried on post-graduate work at McGill and won a studentship valued at $750, offered by the National Research Council. In 1933, he returned to Queen's where he graduated with a Master of Science degree.

Mr. McDonald, who is only 25 years of age, is a native of Picton. He received his Royal Society of Canada fellowship, which is the latest honor he has received was awarded for his work in chemistry.

Ratepayers Association Against Pasteurization In Resolution Adopted

Question Thoroughly Discussed at Open Forum

OTHER BUSINESS

Motion Respecting Cardon Plots Left in Abeyance

Local city council through a resolution passed at a meeting of the Belleville Property Owners and Ratepayers' Association held in the city hall last evening will be requested, that the matter of compulsory milk pasteurization in this city be left in abeyance for the time being, and that if anything be done in regard to milk, that a ruling be passed requiring all cows from which milk is delivered locally be given regular tuberculin and blood tests.

The motion, proposed by Mr. Mayor G. A. Bennett and seconded by Roy Tracy, milk dealer, followed an exhaustive discussion of pasteurization in which a large and representative meeting of ratepayers in the city, and milkmen delivering their product locally took part. It was carried without a dissenting vote.

City council will also receive a letter from the local association applauding them on their action in deferring the matter of pasteurization until both sides of the question could be heard.

With little preliminary skirmishing the matter was brought directly introduced to the meeting immediately following the opening hymned by their chairman, Mr. Mayor Bennett, who declared himself one of the smaller dealers delivering cream in the city for the past three years pointed out, that the dairies were not against the welfare of the city, presented city council asking for pasteurization for the welfare of the city only. He charged they were impelled in the matter of getting it out of their own pockets.

"I've had to compete with the leading restaurants in this city for the past few years, and I've never heard any complaints about it. The thing is just meant to squeeze out a few of the smaller dealers so the larger ones can have their own way," he declared.

Inspected Regularly

In answer to a question by the chairman regarding the conditions under which milk is produced, Mr. Tracy pointed out that it was inspected regularly by the Belleville health inspector, who has the regular tests and everything is as sanitary as it can be. We have to come up to a certain standard set by by the city but by the Ontario Department of Health. They govern us all the time."

As a member of a family, whose annual taxes is in the neighborhood of $750.00 Mr. Tracy felt he had a right to voice his opinion of the matter.

The possibility of milk skyrocketing to a price of from 12 to 15 cents a quart this winter if the pasteurization law goes into effect was pointed out by Mr. R. Osborne, a second milk dealer delivering in the city.

"As a meeting of the dairies and raw milk dealers some time ago I was elected a representative," declared Mr. Osborne, "I can see that if this law goes into effect that seven or eight smaller dealers will be forced out of business, and their business is quite a total when it is all added together. This business will be divided among the farmers and then there will be no milk surplus."

"We sold milk to the dairies for fourteen or more years, but we weren't satisfied with prices and weights and so on and we quit. When the dairy had too much milk then it used to ship it back in the cans saying it was sour or something.

"I don't know whose names were signed on that petition, but I do know that the majority of them were farmers, who wouldn't use a pint of pasteurized milk themselves in a year."

"If this goes through, then next winter you can be prepared to pay as much as 12 or 15 cents for a quart of milk; that's what the petition is for, to get the business in Belleville in the hands of five or six dairies, who can then set whatever price they think the people can pay." Mr. Osborne warned the audience.

"We produce our milk under absolutely sanitary conditions. We whitewash our stables twice a year. The milk is fresh. We peddle raw milk in the city that is pure and fresh from the morning's milking. Dairy milk is dangerous in general- ly forty-eight hours old, when you get it."

Inspector on Job

"You'll find, that the Belleville Board of Health can handle this thing nicely. You have an inspector, that is on the job and one that don't look after things. Any farm any of us may have are quickly pointed out and remedied."

A call by the chairman for any representatives of dairies to put forward their side of the question was unproductive. There was none in the audience. Mr. Stanley May, however, who admitted signing the petition as one of the milk producers questioned the probability that such an increase in the price of milk to 12 or 15 cents would be made this winter.

"Well," retorted Mr. Osborne, "it was at a milk meeting not so long ago, when the question of the government milk was brought up. It used to be 9 cents but now the price of milk to 9 cents was brought up. I heard it myself. It was said that then we have to creep before we can walk! I'd infer from that that as soon as we get used to pasteurized, they could get together on it."

"Is it not a reasonable price for any dairy to raise the price of milk to 13 cents or 14 cents without consulting the city health Board," maintained Mr. May. "The price of milk is not a matter of control at the moment. That is why the prices was raised to 9 cents because they were selling at a loss. The producer was the only one who benefitted by this."

"You were one of the men, who put the dairy names on the petition, you say? questioned chairman Diamond.

"Yes."

"Do you think it is British justice or fair to the public to ban boy something he doesn't want?"

"That wasn't the idea," returned Mr. May, "but to protect the public from the standpoint of health alone."

"Then, if the petition sent in by the speaker, hasn't had a case of fever since pasteurization went into effect in that city. In Belleville, he claimed, the Board of Health was in favor of the measure passing.

"How many cases of diphtheria have we had in Belleville due to milk?" interrupted Mr. Wm. Hogan.

Questions Asked

"Several of them, I believe," answered Mr. May.

"Pooooohh!" interjected a voice in the audience, "I have been pasteurized while yourself!" asked a second voice. The speaker admitted he did not, and a wave of laughter swept the hall.

Milk got pasteurized which is delivered in the city sours quickly claimed Mr. May, "any milkman can tell you how quickly cream multiply when it is left in the can."

"Why was pasteurization equipment put into the dairies in the first place?" asked the chairman. "Just as an idea to catch the peoples' eye a little better," he continued in answer to his own question.

"The whole country uses raw milk and they are not a bit alarmed about it, but it seems as if we in the city have to take the cooked milk whether we like it or not," claimed a voice in the audience.

"Would you increase the price of milk through pasteurization?" asked Mr. Bennett of Mr. May.

"Then why put in the plant; do you put it in just for the benefit of the public?"

"I believe it is worth it," maintained Mr. May.

Mr. Bennett questioned the number of cases of typhoid in the city. "How many did you supply?

"I just don't remember," answered the speaker.

"Something like eighteen cases, I think," volunteered Mr. Tracy. "The last cases we had were caused by the pollution of the bay water and river."

Mr. Geo. Woolcon: "The whole joint of this pasteurization business is a scheme. They just want to put it over on the people in the city, for there was any danger in this raw milk they'd come to the city council and demand, that a pasteurization law be enacted, but as it is now they're just scheming, worrying their own little game. The whole world has been working that way, that's what's been the matter with it."

Resolution Passed

Mr. Osborne: "After all, you have to take the word of the milk dealer that your milk is pasteurized, when he does leave it on your doorstep. Sometimes they're in a hurry you know."

"You can't make any mistake in taking fresh milk which comes from cows that are T. B. and blood tested. But the milk coming into the city is from cows of which very few are tested," he added.

"Let us pass a resolution and forward it to the city council asking that all milk delivered in the city come from cows that are tested," suggested the chairman.

"Now you're talking," agreed Mr. Osborne.

"That's one of the first things we should do," also agreed Mr. Bennett. "But they have the pasteurization matter before them now and this isn't."

"I am very glad to hear there are people still left in this country, who are interested enough in my health that they'd go into their pockets and put up the money for equipment, that I would help to see me around here a while longer," continued Mr. Bennett. "This is not a new question, it was brought up, when Mayor Reid was in office. I don't see why if Johnny Jones wants pasteurized milk he should- n't be able to buy it, but I also don't see, why I am compelled to drink it when I don't want it. Is there anything fair in that?"

"It's a scheme—a scheme to cut out the little fellow and get the business into the hands of a few, if I remember also, when the milkmen wanted to put a hundred dollar tax on the others delivering in the city. This city is not in a page today to put a fence around it. (Applause). It's their own selfish ideas they're looking after."

Mr. Bennett referred to the excellent milk of the city as reported from time to time in the press from the office of the local Medical Officer of Health. He doesn't look as if there was anything wrong."

Mr. Woolcon: "Anyhow it isn't the council's business to pass legislation affecting all the little butchers and bakers and milkmen, who trade here. Their job is to look after the city. That's what they were elected for."

Motion Deferred

"Even if the council does not pass the law it will be only a matter of time until it is made a Provincial law requiring all milk to be pasteurized," claimed Mr. Osborne. "The big plant manufacturers of equipment for factories naturally want to sell their stuff and equip every plant with the machinery for doing this, and they are bringing plenty of pressure to bear on the matter. The law will pass merely because they are not enough people in Ontario interested as there are here at this meeting tonight."

In passing the resolution which will be forwarded to council, it was also added, that if anything is to be done in regard to milk, that all cows from which milk is delivered in the city be required to pass regular tuberculin and blood tests as carried on by the department.

Garden plots of the unemployed of the city came under motion of Mr. Fred Henry, who presented a prepared motion that "Whereas it is reported in the press that about only one half of the gardens are being carried on this year over the total of last year, perhaps owing to the fact that no free plowing is given, in view of the urgent need for the working of the vacant land, and realizing the investment that is might accrue thereof, be it resolved that we urge the municipal authorities to encourage to the utmost the helping of such endeavors, even if the cost of plowing is advanced to those not able to pay now, and a thorough investigation, covering any proportion of results be returned."

There was no seconder for the motion, the general consensus of opinion being that such a matter had been left until be in the latter season.

Daylight Saving came in for brief mention by members of the Association. Following the introduction of the subject, it was pointed out by Chairman Diamond that there were some counsellors who would see to it that a vote would be taken on the matter.

"It won't matter; the people voted on it twice and defeated it twice, but you see what they're doing now," retorted a member.

"We'll take it up at a later meeting," suggested Mr. Bennett.

On the motion of Mr. Geo. Woolcon, a letter will be sent council complimenting them for their action in deferring action on the pasteurization question, until both sides could be heard.

MRS. S. RODGERS IS HONORED ON 83RD BIRTHDAY

Woman Remarkably Active For One at Her Age

SOFTBALL

Stirling High School Cadets Inspected on Tuesday

Stirling (Special)—On Tuesday evening a number of friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gordonier in honor of Mrs. Synthia Rodgers, who celebrated her 83rd birthday on that day. Sharing with the charming guest of honor, the sisters by of the occasion the group entered readily into the spirit of merriment and festivity.

Many beautiful gifts were received by the honored one. She was taken completely by surprise by number of guests as they arrived. Cards and telegrams were received. Congratulations were received from Western Canada and United States.

Mrs. Synthia Rodgers is remarkably active and modern for her 83 years, and the whole family history was Synthia Weaver, was born on the Weaver homestead at Anson which is now the property of Reuben Weaver, and has remained in the Weaver family for more than 125 years. The grand parents of Mrs. Rodgers moved to this farm from the vicinity of Ulna, Hay township.

The very interesting lady whose memory extends back to the many many changes made by the progress of time in the County of Hastings. The first railway to pass through Anson reburn railroad she well remembers. A large number of men were employed on its construction boarded with her at her home on the Ridge road. Remembering how in the days of those days was a bit inferior to those when Anson was the "Jumping Off Place" to the "Far West." Her first ride was in a buggy from her home to Anson for 10 cents.

At 7 o'clock the large table was set with the guests taking their usual including a large birthday cake bearing 83 candles which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Among those who came in person to offer congratulations were Mr. and Mrs. William Rodgers of Belleville, aged 90 and 86 years respectively, Mr. Rodgers sang as a solo during the evening "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot" and the entire party joined in the chorus. Other guests present in the happy event were Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Rodgers and family, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rodgers and family, Mr. and Mrs. Orval Bell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hagerman of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Rosebrugh, Stirling, and Robert Hedley, Stirling. Vocal and instrumental solos by Marilyn Bell and Robert Hedley added greatly to the evening's entertainment.

Rawdon Softball League Opens

The Rawdon Softball League was officially declared open on Tuesday, May 21st when the teams entered, met in the first of their regular league games, with exception of Springbrook, which forfeited their first game with Bethel by failing to appear.

At the game between Glen Ross and Moscow, which was the opening game was marked with a deal of ceremony, Rev. F. Joblin throwing the first ball and Rev. F. W. Ireland of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, at bat.

Both these gentlemen spoke in high praise of the manner of sportsmanship shown throughout last season and impressed upon the mind of the contesting teams that to win or lose was not so important as to "play the game" as true sportsmen.

Ken Holmes on mound duty for Mount Pleasant held down the first week allowing four hits in a row but Armstrong for Glen Ross was the only one to reach home. He first started well but faded into the discard at the third inning, when the just couldn't get the old arm working right and walked five in a row. It looked bad for the riverside boys at this time when the Mounties got completely out of control and got nine runs in all. The Glen Ross team to both teams in the field and grounders were nearly all safe hits. At the end of the fifth inning the game was called because of darkness Mount Pleasant leading the way one run, the score being 15-14. Scott batted out the only homerun for Glen Ross in the fifth inning as he put in high one into centre field, bringing in Harry Brown from second. C. Potts, the big right fielder of the Mounties, knocked out the longest fly of the game when he came up to bat in the second time for the Mount Pleasant team with the bases all vacant it only meant one run though.

The line-ups—Mount Pleasant—C. Coughlin, K. Hall, Johnson, 1b; B. Jeffs, 2b; C. Dunkley, 3b; H. Higgs, ss.; H. Hagerman, cf.; C. Potts, r.f.; H. Smith, lf.

Glen Ross—R. Hagerman, c; H. Brooks, p; C. Fyfner, 1b; F. Fraser, ss; G. Armstrong 2b; K. Brown 3b; J. Armstrong cf; D. Scott rf; J. Brown lf.

W. J. Whitby and Conley Ackers officiated as umpires.

As the league games progress and the boys are able to get started on time there should be some very exciting games before the season is over. This game was very well attended in spite of the cool weather, and each team has an army of supporters who will be out at every game to cheer them on.

While this game was in progress the boys of Ivergreen were battling it out with Deseronto where they defeated by the score of 14 to 13. Home runs were by, out of order in this fixture either. Don Rodgers and Charlie Divolin were the heavy hitters for the Ivergreen, each getting a homer. These teams are members of the Centre League.

Cadet Inspection at Stirling High School

On Tuesday afternoon Capt. Fox of Kingston, visited Stirling and reviewed the Cadet corps of the local High School as they were put through their various manoeuvres on the school campus under the guidance of principal R. O. Lawlor, Mr. Schollie and the following officers: Commanding officer, B. Sutherland; Platoon Commanders John Munro and A. Rodgers and Sgts. Sager, Fox and D. Rodgers.

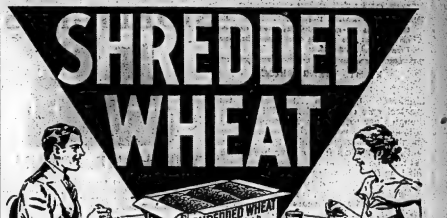
"The boys looked well to those who stood by to watch the drill as they went through their different formations and then through the physical training exercises. The platoon drill was exceptionally well done. At the close of the inspection Capt. Fox addressed the boys briefly on the value of cadet training, not from a military standpoint but from a personal standpoint. . . It gives one self-confidence, teaches one to take pride in his appearance. The value of it can never be truly estimated," said Capt. Fox. He told the boys that their showing was quite good in every department. After this the boys marched down past the cenotaph in Memorial Park and back to the school again where they were dismissed. The drum corps, made up of drummers Butler, Baker and Hagerman, assisted in the and added greatly to the parade.

Some of the property owners on the business street of the village are doing their share to beautify the town before the summer tourists start passing through on their trips north from the Stirling Fair Ground and also Walter Wright's store is very neat with their new coat of paint.

Rev. F. Joblin, pastor of the Rawdon circuit, and his son Fred journeyed to Newtonville on Sunday May 19 where Mr. Joblin conducted the anniversary services at Newtonville United Church. During his absence Mr. Arthur Wilbur of West Huntingdon occupied the pulpits of the three churches in Mr. Joblin's absence.

Mr. Wm. Simpson of Oakville is spending a few weeks fishing in this district. For the past week Mr. Simpson and Mr. Geo. Tulloch of Stirling have been camping at Hay Falls. Mr. Simpson, who lived for some time in Stirling often finds his way back here on fishing trips.

Mrs. Ivan Caldwell has returned home after spending a few days at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Hobbs of Marmora.



Many friends of Charlie Jandrews will be glad to learn that he is getting along quite favorably at his serious illness of a few days ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Eggleton and Marilyn were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Moorcroft of Madoc.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Barrager of Belleville spent Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Baker.

The members of the Stirling Horse Shoe pitching Club's, 12 boys preparing their courts on the property secured by the club, grading and levelling is now being done, and when the lights are installed this will be an attractive spot.

BROTHERS MAY DIE, PUT 'GAS' IN STOVE

Turtleford, Sask. May 22.—Terribly burned, two boys are in the hospital here, with little hope for their recovery, all because of their eagerness to help their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Kendal.

Seven-year-old Allen and his brother, Jimmy, 5, were alone on Wednesday at their home at Silverdale, near here, at light the fire before their parents got up. They used gasoline which presumably, exploded.

Attending physicians here enlarged on hope of saving Allen's life. Jimmy, they say, may recover.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendal also were burned in rescue attempts.

EIGHT YEARS SINCE

It is eight years since Charles A. Lindbergh flew the Atlantic in the greatest epic of air history. Still he flies, though riper experience has come to the lithe and slight youth who stepped from his plane at Bourget Field in Paris. Since that day countless flights have been made but not one of them has appealed as did this lone flight in a day when solo crossing of the ocean was unknown.

Eight years in flying is a long time, just as sixteen and a half years in flying is a long time, that is, since the war's end. There will come a day when men will wonder how planes ever fought the war as they did, so far are they from the perfected machine of today and of the day which is ahead. Yet primitive almost as the war planes were, never in peace or war will men do greater deeds of prowess than those heroes did in the tragic four years when the world was at strife. Men with the last invention in planes cannot do more than these heroes of the air fleets of the nations who accomplished the almost unachievable for their time. The early machines they flew took odd to the world acquainted with modern styles of planes but their very primitiveness was the challenge to youth in their day.

Likewise a peace flight like Lindbergh's stands in the same class. It will stand by itself forever. British fliers who were the first to hop the Atlantic set just such another mark which time cannot efface.

As in the deeds of the Spartans at Thermopylae Pass, the achievements of Alexander and other great figures, it is the man more than the weapon which counts. The weapon does not live, it is ever changing but man really does not change with the ages. Fundamentally he is the same. So to every youth today as to every man yesterday or seons ago is the challenge to excel. He can do it if he has the will and the ability whatever weapons or devices his age uses.

STUDY OF SPORTS PAGES

Sports news study was urged by Gene Tunney, student of Shakespeare, oil prospector, world traveler and former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, in an address to the school authorities of New York on Monday. His argument was that boys and girls should be taught to study the newspaper sports pages with the same diligence they give to their academic work. Sports writers he called "teachers who have more to do with influencing the youth of the country than any other single type of instructor." He added that through them it would be possible to build in youthful minds a true hero of the athletic field to replace the worship of false gods.

The view is gaining ground especially since the year of 1929 that more and more games will come to play a part in the routine of living, though of course the appeal of the game is that it can never become so inert as to be merely routine. The game has not only a physical aspect which is invaluable but participation in games is a great developer of character and social importance. The world knows how valuable the Grecian games became in the Greek city states and it realizes today that youth must find an outlet for energy. In the leisure all the energy which cannot be used up in work or study may find an outlet. On the other hand energy may easily be misdirected and be destructive and old in trouble. Sport not only provides a means of occupying unoccupied time but it has value in unifying the outlook of the individual. It has been pointed out that for one who does not find unification his life interest is largely a failure. If any factor will benefit that unity in the wonderful makeup of man it is sport.

Sport is an excellent glass through which to look at life. Sham can get nowhere in sport.

Today the newspaper gives sport a large space because it is important in the life of the people. One has only to take a look at the rural loops to find a supreme interest in sports. The human to be natural must play. It is a healthy sign of the times.

OYSTERS IN SUMMERTIME

For a long, long time Canadians have nourished themselves on the devout faith that oysters must not be eaten in months which do not have an "r."

From May to August we are a people of oyster-abstainers, actuated by the belief that oysters consumed in hot weather will make us ill.

One laboratory recently made an investigation and found that oysters are as good in summer as in winter.

But now they can be stored and shipped in summer as well as in winter.

The old rule of the "r" is out—and another tradition has been knocked endwise.—Vancouver Sun.

Youth, when thought is speech and speech is truth.—Walter Scott.

IN REBELLION

If I could only forget sometimes,
The fate of the ticking clock,
The sound of its quarter-hour chimes
And its whirling hands that mock
My futile efforts to give the hours
One fragment that I will remain,
Ah, then, I know I should feel fresh powers
Leap up through my heart and brain!

If every clock could be put aside
And the calendar torn across,
If I could drift on a timeless tide,
With no thought of an one's loss,
Thrice lovely then would the bright world be,
Thrice golden the gifts it brings,
If life were timeless as wind and sea,
Where no pendulum ever swings!

—Aline Michaelis.

ANTHONY ADVERSE is a ponderous tome of more than 1500 pages, and to read it once, especially if borrowed from a library with two weeks' loan limit, is quite a task, but the editor of MacLean's Magazine claims to know a person who has read Anthony Adverse three times. Taking the book from a loan library and reading an average of one hundred pages a day the reader can just scrape through the two weeks' limit—and that anyone could read it three times is beyond comprehension in a world of interesting literature. The same authority also claims to know a man who reads Bruce Copperfield twice a year. O! Dear! that Toronto editor must surely be spoofing.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has hypnotized the Press of the United States, according to the views of some disgruntled partizans who would like to see political turmoil stirred up in and out of presidential circles. The Press has been very friendly with President Roosevelt and abstained from harsh criticism, no doubt, from the reason that it was thought desirable to give this forceful national leader with policies of his own, every chance to work out his theories—for better or for worse—and he sure has been given plenty leeway.

The 24th of May! Does it mean that carry your mind back to the days when Queen Victoria was on the throne and when we used to have celebrations in Belleville which were worth while? How, alas! many citizens who want amusement leave town and we have no celebration here. Would it not be better if we had a grand celebration and attracted people from outside places to this city to spend their money?

Grenville Sinclair, young son of Mr. D. V. Sinclair, met with victim of an accident yesterday afternoon which might easily have been more serious. As result, fir with some companions, was playing with gunpowder when it flashed up quickly with the result that Grenville was painfully burned about the face. Fortunately the burns are not serious and his sight injured.

Many in this city will remember Mr. R. A. Lasier, "Dick" as he was called by many friends. Mr. Lasier, like many other Belleville boys is climbing up lately recently left Santa Barbara, California, to become director of the Lompoc Valley, California Banking Co.

In the good old days the 24th of May was a summer day. Judging from the temperature today it is a good way from summer.

MAY 12, 1885.

Col. Alfred Campbell, brother of the Hon. Sir Alexander Campbell, Minister of Justice, and leader of the Conservative party in the Senate, died at his home on Front Street, in this city on May 21st, aged 80 years lacking one week. He had been a prominent citizen of Belleville since his early manhood. During his active life he had command of the 15th Battalion, being its third commanding officer since the force was organized. It was during his long continued command that the Battalion gained its present title, "Argyle Light Infantry." Some eight years ago he retired from the general active list of the militia and resigned his commission, being succeeded by the present commander, Col. S. S. Lazier. He was also an active Mason, being a Knight Templar, and attained to one time the highest office that branch of the order could bestow. As a citizen it was generally esteemed and with the regard of all with whom he came into contact either in business or socially. The funeral took place this afternoon. Col. Lazier and officers and men in uniform. The bearers were Messrs. A. Bonnon, E. J. Slaman, R. C. Hulme, C. Wilkins, D. Pitcathly and L. H. Henderson.

Where Shall We Dine?

The person who can answer the question, "Where dine today?" is undoubtedly the most popular in any crowd. The one who directs you to The London Lunch at 174 Front Street, has shown such good judgment in the selection of a place that combines prompt and courteous service with the best of food, that we believe to him belongs all the attributes of social success.

The London Lunch has gained a name that has spread far and wide as a place where both the food and travelling public can more than satisfy their demands in the matter of obtaining good food. The menu consists not only of the prime necessities of life, but many delicacies to tempt the taste of the most fastidious. Another outstanding feature of this modern up-to-date restaurant is one of the most complete and popular soda-fountains in the city. Here are to be found those mysterious and refreshing concoctions known to the true connoisseur of soft drinks. Soda's, sundaes, salads, and all manners of delightful tid-bits abound at this modern cafe, tasty sandwiches and light lunches are also served at this fountain with a despatch and thoroughness that leaves nothing to be desired. An unusual cleanliness is another feature of The London Lunch, and it is was confided to me that the silverware that is brought to the attention of everyone, but extends to the kitchen and those places only frequented by the management and assistants.

The London Lunch is tastefully decorated and attractively furnished in the opinion of many who go there regularly. They say that without a doubt it is the smartest restaurant in town. Here too, is the place where to take the girl-friend, wife or mother-in-law, after the dance or the show. The management has made a special study of the restaurant business and it was his interest in dietetics and health food that caused him to open The London Lunch some years ago. He is trying to give his patrons something better all the time. Prompt and courteous service is insisted upon.

We take great pleasure in complimenting the management upon the fine order of this place and refer The London Lunch to our readers without hesitation. (Protected 1935).

To Belleville Folks:

"A Message of Appreciation"

In very simple language may we say

"Thank You Very Much"

for your most cordial reception of our new store and for your patience with the discomforts of shopping in a crowded store.

Possibly during the rush you did not get exactly what you wanted, so may we remind you that any purchase made in our store which does not satisfy you in every respect, will be gladly exchanged or the purchase money refunded, according to your preference.

Our warmest thanks are extended to the splendid group of saleslades who worked untiringly in new surroundings and with new merchandise. Their willingness to give smiling, friendly service is indeed a tribute to Belleville.

You have given us a very nice send-off, and we feel a real obligation to so conduct our business as to merit your further patronage.

HUSKIES DEVOUR THOSE WHO FALL

Destruction of Dogs Ordered When Child is Mauled

The Pas, Man., May 22 (CP) — Dog drivers, veterans of the snowy trails, should steer their teams better hearing death recommended for the three husky dogs, that attacked and killed six-year-old Mike Sergiovich.

To the mushers it meant confirmation of the trail-drivers' fear that huskies, no matter how friendly, attack and kill man, woman or child who falls. It is the law of the wolf pack and in the malemutes of the north the wolf strain predominates.

Last night a coroner's jury heard the details of how three huskies bred by a trapper and treated kindly since they were pups, mauled the youngster to death.

The jury recommended immediate destruction of the dogs and even went so far as to suggest no huskies be allowed within a mile of the town. Praise was given a Mrs. Kryschuk who risked her life in an effort to save the boy from the fangs of the angry animals.

Those who follow the northland trail believe the lad must have fallen. To huskies, who often eat their own kind on the trail that means "fair game."

SUNDAY TRUCKING ABOLITION FORECAST

TORONTO, May 23—A strict ban on Sunday nuisance trucking is being mooted at Queen's Park. According to an Attorney-General's Department report yesterday, the Provincial authorities are keeping a stricter eye than usual on Sunday freight truckers. A full-stop to the practice, it was intimated, is in the offing, says The Globe.

Milk trucks and the like are not the targets of the Provincial authorities. On the other hand, transport of freight is in their end books and one official included beer trucks in a list of the Sunday nuisances. The ire of the legal officials has been aroused, as result, by the traffic problems which result as by the infractions of the Sabbath observance laws. The trucks were a problem in Sunday highway traffic, it was explained.

Weddings

FINDLAY—SOUTHEN

Trenton, May 20 (Special).—A lovely wedding took place in St. Peter-On-The-Mount Church, Monday morning May 20, when Leota Southen was married to Allan Findlay, Rev. Father O'Reilly performing the ceremony and Rev. Father Hanley said the nuptial mass. The church was prettily decorated with Sunburst roses and baskets.

Mrs. O. Couture gave her daughter in marriage, wearing an ensemble of blue with white accessories, white sheer and matching accessories and wore a corsage of Ify of the valley.

The bride was gowned in petal pink lace over pink satin with fitted bodice, small collar and buttoned from the throat to the waist, with short sleeves and bolero. She wore a small pink straw hat to match, trimmed with a touch of blue and white ribbon. She carried a shower bouquet of Butterfly roses and forget-me-nots. Her only attendant was her sister, Aurore, who wore a costume like hers with small, matching hat and carrying Premier roses and baby breath. Mr. Paul Lalonde of Montreal, was groomsman and Mr. J. M. Deeth, of Trenton, ushered.

The choir, of which the groom is a member, sang during the mass and Mr. Joseph Lalonde sang "Ave Maria" and "One Hour With Thee."

Miss Genevieve Couture, sister of the bride, wore a dress of gold crepe with small brimmed hat to match with brown accessories and shoulder bouquet of Talisman roses and Miss Zita Couture, another sister was in a dress of honey beige with geranium taffeta capeline hat and slippers to match and wore sweet peas.

After the ceremony breakfast was served in the dining room of the home of the bride's mother which was decorated with white streamers and pink sweet peas.

Later the happy couple left for Montreal, the bride's going away costume was a chamois shade suit with brown hat and accessories. On their return they will reside in Trenton.

MISSION CIRCLE HONORS OFFICER

ACROSS CANADA LECTURE GIVEN

Bonarlaw.—At St. Mark's Sunday School on Sunday, June 2nd, the Mother's Day program was used owing to the illness of Rev. Canon Swayne on the previous Sunday, Mother's Day.

There was a large attendance. The pageant, "No Laurels on their Brows" was given, those taking part were Misses Iva Brown, Florence Frost and Nola McLaren and Masters Jack Eastwood, Jack Frost and Kennard Anderson. The Scripture reading and introduction was given by Ross Fleming and readings were given by Mrs. Austin, Mrs. Anderson and Miss Hilda Brown. The primary class sang, "Jesus Loves Me," and Mrs. Jason Baker acted as organist. A delightful address was delivered by Canon W. G. Swayne and also by a number of practical hints to the boys and girls on obedience to parents and obedience to their mothers.

On Friday of last week a fine set of slides "Across Canada" were staged by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and shown in the Sunday School Rooms of St. Mark's Church. There was a splendid attendance. Canon Swayne read the lecture which accompanies the slides which are very interesting and instructive. Another set showing scenes on ocean liners has been promised at same future time.

Sunday visitors at Barlow, G. C. Swayne, S. S. McCosh, John A. Bell, M. Fitzgerald, A. P. Williams and J. F. Bailey attended the Masonic Lodge and banquet at Marysburgh on Monday evening. It was the occasion of the official visit of Provincial Deputy Grand Master Right Wor. Bro. Hicks, of Belleville. All the above brothers report a splendid evening.

Veterans' Needs Remembered By Canadian Red Cross

In making its annual appeal for fund to carry on its work for another year, the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society has brought to the attention of the press some interesting data regarding the Red Cross has plunitdered to the needs of sick, needy and disabled veterans throughout Ontario during the last fiscal year.

It is reported that 60,136 visits of friendship were made to 4,231 soldier patients in military and other hospitals in Ontario during that period, and that many and various "extra comforts" were distributed to brighten their days. Also that 17,584 needy visits were made to their dependents were given a helping hand at times of distress. 1,132 were given hospital care at the Red Cross Outposts in Northern Ontario. A Soldiers' Club was operated by the Red Cross as a residence for veterans on small war pensions, who through distress, loneliness, sickness and poverty were unable to make ends meet.

In war and peace, Red Cross has proved itself a friend to the soldier. It is right that this should be so. The enthusiasm and glamour of war days, many promises were made in the men going overseas. Quietly, the Red Cross has been keeping these promises for us. Its appeal for funds is backed and sanctioned by every veteran, together with its many fellow citizens, other services, should meet with a ready response.

HONOR MR. HOWEY ON RETIREMENT

Surprise Party Staged by Cheesemakers And Cheque Given

Cheesemakers of Belleville group with their wives staged a surprise party at the Rooms of Hugh Howey, 283 Albert Street, recently, shortly after the announcement of his retirements as Cheese Instructor of the group for the past 23 years. Mr. Howey was retired following a realignment of the various groups in this section, two others being retired and five added to the service. The guests were welcomed by Mr. Howey and a social evening followed. Samuel Anderson, maker at Melrose factory, presided as chairman for the evening, while Arthur Orr, president of the group read an illuminated address and presented Mr. Howey with a substantial cheque, a gift of the group. Although taken entirely by surprise, Mr. Howey in a few well chosen words expressed his pleasure of the visit and his co-operation, that had existed between the makers and himself through the years. Other speakers called upon expressed regret at the retirement of Mr. Howey, stating that the inspector always gave his time and ability for the advancement of the cheese industry in his particular group and the industry at large. Dainty refreshments, furnished by the guests, were partaken of and a social hour passed before the party departed, wishing Mr. Howey continued health and happiness. The singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and "God Save the King" concluded the evening.

Dear Mr. Howey:

It was with the deepest regret, that we learned of your retirement as cheese instructor in our district. Your kindly manner has won a warm place in our hearts.

The highest standards of workmanship you have always exhibited before us and will ever be a guiding influence in our lives. Your interest in our welfare and progress has always been most helpful and appreciated.

We have earnestly enjoyed your work among us and the knowledge you have so ably imparted to us will be remembered for years to come.

We wish to convey to you, our sincerest gratitude and trust you will be spared for many years to enjoy the privileges of life. May the remainder of your life be one of happiness and good health.

On behalf of the cheesemakers of this district we ask you to accept this purse not for the intrinsic value but as an expression of our appreciation of your work among us.

Signed on behalf of the Belleville Group,

Arthur J. Orr, President.

FAULKNER URGES PREVENTIVE MEDICINE

Cancer Problem is Stressed at Queen's Medical Convocation

Kingston, May 23—The great possibilities of science should be along the lines of preventive medicine, Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health for Ontario, told the graduating class in medicine of Queen's University when addressing the problems that will confront them as they enter the profession of medicine.

Dr. Faulkner felt that the field of cancer offered great possibilities for research. "Those of you who are interested in scientific research, as a representative of a Government which knows the economic aspect of sickness, I urge you to concentrate yourselves to the need of your fellowmen," said Dr. Faulkner.

IN MEMORIAM

HALL—In loving memory of a loving husband and father who passed away on May 25, 1934.
The flowing stream of life rolls on,
But still we mourn your name
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile,
The face we shall not see.
Sad hours come and days and years,
His heart was true and unselfish,
He toiled as few could know,
Then left us to remember,
Sadly missed by his wife and children.

IN MEMORIAM

COCKINS—In loving memory of my dear husband, John Cockins, who died May 26, 1934.
Softly sleeping where the flowers fall gently down,

Just a thought of you each day, yet memories linger and true,
And a heart still aches for you.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why external remedies as applied to sore and painful piles are only local in effect and do not reach to true circulatory cause?
Why Piles may "come back" even after a first removal by cutting?
Do you know the cause of Piles and Hemorrhoids?
That there is congestion of blood in the lower bowel veins (Hemorrhoidal plexus)?
Do you know that there is a serious internal remedy for itching, bleeding or protruding piles which relieves pain at once? Remember as HEM-ROID and sold with your money back if not joyfully satisfied with the help one bottle gives?
HEM-ROID banishes piles by reducing the swollen veins, relieving pain and helps to heal and restore the sore surfaces.
HEM-ROID is so successful in even the most stubborn cases that J. S. McKeown and other good druggists advise every sufferer to get a bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets today—take them as directed—and if not entirely satisfied with results—your money back.

AT THE CAPITOL
"Miss Pilgrim's Miss Wins"
Combines Thrills With Vivid Drama

An amazingly vivid and dramatic picture of the thrills, adventures and perils encountered by a pair of roustabout deep-sea divers now at the Capitol screen. "The Best Man Wins" is the story of two rollicking screen he-men Edmund Lowe and Jack Holt.

Lowe and Holt are seen as a pair of wrecking contractors, bodies, both in love with the same girl. Lowe loses an arm while helping to rescue Holt and as a result, Holt's years. Holt leaves too, joining the Foreign Legion to forget. Years later when Holt discovers his former friend's arm has been replaced by a diamond smuggler. The action from this point on takes a dramatic turn, culminating in a fast-moving underwater sequences ever filmed below water.

Lowe and Holt are perfect as the romantic rivals. Florence Rice, as the girl of their affections, confirms early critical approval with her splendid performance in romantic role. Lionel's "Dr. Boehm" is a witty, shrewd and effective characterization. Others in the cast are equally as good, particularly J. Farrell MacDonald as Mike, the boss rigger. Eric Kleinton's direction leaves nothing to be desired in the way of screen thrills, powerful drama and heart-throbbing pathos. "The Best Man" is heartily recommended.

"Maybe It's Love"

A new star and a new romance lives in Gloria Stuart and Ross Alexander will be seen in "Maybe It's Love", which is shown as a companion feature.

The two make an unusually presentable couple. Alexander being handsome, fine athletic build and natural blonde of medium height. Miss Gloy equally appealing as each other in the leading roles in the picture which is a thrilling romance of martial bliss and glamour.

There is a quadrangular love affair in the story, which makes a play for the beautiful Gloria, who is a stenographer in the office until she marries Alexander, another stenographer, and an office vamp casting her eye for the husband.

The picture carries the spectator through many scenes of thrilling situations with the girl's family always "butting in" to add to their troubles.

Complete Shows 2.30, 7.00, 9.10.

AT THE ELLIS
"West Point of the Air"
Romantic and Exciting Story With Strong Cast

"West Point of the Air", which comes to the Ellis today, fulfills the most rigorous requirements.

It is a splendid, warm, human thriller for Wallace Beery. According to a strong character study worked out against a new background, the background which the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer knows how anything about a background of utmost importance to the theme of another picture, the air college at Randolph Field, Texas.

Surpasses "The Champ"

Beery in his role as "Big Mike" gives a dramatic portrayal that surpasses even his performance in "The Champ". His pathetic love for a son whose conceit almost brings disgrace to the Air Corps and public ridicule, his foundation for one of the most smashing screen climaxes ever written.

Heading the supporting cast as the young romantic lead is Maureen O'Sullivan, whose recent hit in "David Copperfield" won her great popularity. Following in her footsteps she gives a freshness and vitality to her performance that will win many admirers.

The most important role since "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" is that of Malcolm Claudet" is filled by Robert Young as "Little Mike," Beery's son. He gives a notable performance as a young man whose ego inferiority caused him to seek relief and mental love helps him to find himself.

Rosalind Russell as the "other woman" in the picture gives an interesting and deft handling to her scene with Young. She scored recently in "Forsaking All Others".

The polish and military bearing of Lewis Stone adds much to his role as General Carter, officer in charge of the aviation training center. His years of army training is evident in his strict observance of regulations in every scene.

Comedy Highlights

...Hilarious comedy highlights are added by Jimmy Gleason as the Sergeant in charge of those who is content to sit on the ground and watch planes fly. A terrific punch on astrology. Russell Hardie who appeared in "Sequoia" to be seen as the flying ace who plays the role of Calter's son who is injured in the crash. A touching comedy realism. Henry Wadsworth, Robert Taylor and Robert Livingston add comedy and pathos as flying students. The action of thrill scenes of legal training is a terrific pace by the direction of Richard Rosson, famous for his work as a co-director on such pictures as "Tiger Shark" and "Rose of the Crowds."

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are appearing on the same program in one of their funniest comedies "Tit for Tat"; Mickey Mouse in "Dognappers" will be exhibited on the same program.

Shirley Temple, Saturday

Shirley Temple, "Our Little Girl" Shirley Temple's greatest. The full length picture coming Saturday at the Belle will be shown for the last daily evening.

Rooster Rumsford, world-famous clown and circus rider has an interesting story to tell the boys and thrills in the circus sequence which has everything complete from the wild animals to the beautiful ring horses.

Howard Jones plays Shirley's mother; Joel McCrea, who needs no introduction, plays her father. Lyle Talbot, Dixie Dunbar, Jason Jack Donohue, continue the list of fine performers in the cast.

When Irvin S. Cobb presented Shirley with the special award from the Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, he said: "You have made more people happy and made more people laugh than any child your age in the history of the world". "Our Little Girl" her greatest picture will appeal to every member of the family.

NEW YORK : TORONTO : WINNIPEG

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 22. (CP)—The oil issues, Imperial and Petroleum as well as Consolidated Smelters and Consolidated Bakeries headed heavy trading today and sold at new high prices for the year on the industrial section of the Toronto Exchange. The general market was inclined to anticipate the Friday holiday and show down but interlisted leaders travelled along with the New York market where firmness ruled despite the uncertainly surrounding radio developments at Washington over the home bill. Recessions outnumbered gains at the close.

Imperial Oil sold at 22¼ and closed off 25 for a net gain of ¼ and International Petroleum sold up to 30 for a half point gain. British American sold over the 16 mark but held only ¼ as a gain. Mexico Eagle, Supertest, Consumers Gas, Thayers Common had small net gains at the close.

Consolidated Bakeries advanced ¾ to 16¾. Higher closing prices ruled for Smelters, Consolidated Smelters, Ford "A" and International Nickel.

A general note of confidence was displayed by the industrial section today with oil and metal stocks again out in front with substantial gains. Retailers and Ford "A" ferred on small-lot turnover and action in those issues was dominated by a heavy turnover in Consolidated Bakeries which pushed up ¾ to 16¾.

The market holiday tomorrow (Victoria Day) undoubtedly had slowing up effect on trading. Trade in the steel, utility, food and construction groups was small and these issues bunched for price changes. There was also a disposition to await the outcome of the senate vote at Washington on the President's veto of the Bonus Bill.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 23 (AP)—Some of the silks, farm machinery and scattered specialties continued to force ahead in today's stock market, but the general list followed a rather narrow range as the bonus veto outcome in the Senate was awaited.

Issues up major fractions to around 3 points included Texas Corp; Tidewater Oil; Deere; Case; Goodyear; Gen. Western Sugar; Universal Leaf Tobacco; Rails and Utilities moved a shade in either direction. The late tone was steady. Transfers approximated 1,250,000 shares.

NEW YORK FINANCIAL

New York, May 22. (AP)—The United States bonus veto bogey brought few pronounced shivers in today's financial markets. Stocks, on the whole, were steady to firm and fairly active.

Bonds finished fractionally higher among Canadian stocks, while Massey, Canadian Pacific and International Nickel ventured slightly ranged. Dominion Government Bonds were steady. Canadian funds closed 1-16 of a cent at 100 1-16 cents.

Shares of Universal Leaf Tobacco got up about two points while other fractions to a point better, included Westinghouse, Texas Corporation, Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, Cuban American, Sugar Preferred, Case, Deere, Montgomery Ward, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber Preferred and Goodyear. The Steels, Utilities and Rails were unchanged to slightly lower.

TORONTO MINES
(Close)

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Heading into a holiday and with political disturbances at Washington, the Mining Section of the Toronto Exchange was content to drift today and although volume was heavy in spots, price gain nowhere in particular. The Base Metals had morning gains but they lost them later while the silver and gold moved within a narrow range and closed with minor losses in the majority.

While action showed down in Noranda, the price was steady at the close. Hudson Bay, Mining Corporation and Coast Copper held unchanged or slightly higher while recessions of 1 to 3 cents were recorded in Big Missouri, Premier Oreille and Base Metals Corporation.

Macassa pushed up vigorously till it reached 52 from which level it weakened moderately to close with a gain of about 8 cents. Prices were a bit soft for Kirkland Lake, Gunnar, Paymaster, McVittie and Wayside, Royalite Oil dropped back to 25.30, down about 75 cents.

The Mining Section played a well big game today and trade was small in all groups with prices barely firm. The main action appeared in the Base Metals where slightly lower prices was the rule and the silvers also boarded on recessions, reflecting the moderate trend of the gold issues.

While the senior golds were mainly steady the secondary group showed irregularity and also some weak spots. Little Long Lac sold down to 5.40 off 20 cents and McWatters lost 8 to 1.32. After several days of successive declines, Macassa turned on the short sellers today and pushed up 13 cents to 53.

Corporation Savings Interest Reduced

Changes in interest rates which go into effect on June 1 in Canada do not affect savings and current accounts of religious and charitable institutions and Government and municipal bodies, in cases of other institutions and corporations, rates are lowering of interest established on small accounts.

The changes to be made, notice of which is now being sent to clients by the banks, are briefly as follows:

Current accounts: Interest on certain small accounts is discontinued; interest will be paid at the former rate of one per cent. on minimum monthly balances over $500.00.

Savings accounts Accounts in the names of firms, institutions, organizations and corporations will have the rate of interest allowed reduced from 2 to 1 per cent. No change is made in the rate paid on personal savings accounts.

Deposits receipts: The rate on these was formerly 2 per cent. After June 1, 1 per cent. will be paid on receipts for 90 days or longer, and for less than 90 days, 1 per cent

Obituary

JAMES ABBUCKLE

On Wednesday last 22nd. there passed away to his eternal rest, James Abbuckle, a most highly respected citizen of Belleville, after a brief illness of only four days. He was born in the Township of Hungerford on Aug. 22, 1864. Thirty years later he was married to Miss Jennie Coulson. They took up residence on the farm where he lived many years there before coming to Belleville six years ago. Mr. Abbuckle, Hoggins and Co. Limited moved their business headquarters to Belleville from Toronto and their employ for 40 years and was held in highest esteem by his staff and perfect workmanship. He was a man of a retiring disposition and very fond of his home life which was exceedingly happy. Mrs. Abbuckle was a faithful helper in St. Thomas' Church. His character was a very strong one and he was blessed with good judgment. He was staunch and loyal to his friends and possessed the sense of humour. Always a man of uprightness and integrity, never satisfied with workmanship that was not of the best; a loyal citizen and a kind and loving husband and father.

Recently Mr. Arbuckle had spent eleven days with his son Harold of Walkerville, Ont., a few days after his return home he was suddenly stricken ill with paralysis from which he never rallied. All medical skill could be done for him, together with the loving care of his family and the services of a trained nurse.

During the last moments of his earthly sojourn here, he was surrounded by all the members of his family, Mrs. Jennie Arbuckle, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Arbuckle, Mrs. Mabel Freeman and Bernice Arbuckle. The Rev. C. T. Lewis a personal friend of over 35 years standing was also present.

The funeral service will be held in St. Thomas' Church on Friday 24th. at 2 o'clock. Interment afterwards in St. James' Cemetery, Tweed.

JAMES P. MARRIN (Marmora)

On Wednesday, May 22nd, James Patrick Marrin, husband of June Rayburn, passed away at his residence in Marmora, at the age of 52 years.

London, Ont., May 23 (CP)—Tiboy, household cat with pink-soaps for life which forbids it getting its feet wet and insists on a meal diet, recently celebrated its 18th birthday. A special birthday supper was prepared for the feline pet by its owners Mr. and Mrs. James Adams.

ALL FOR LOVE

ELENA RIVERO CORRAL

JUAN IGNACIO POMBO

Neither record nor glory are the inspiration of the Cuba-Atlantic hop of this daring Spanish aviator, Juan Ignacio Pombo. Just love, and the estimation of his beloved. When he and his childhood sweetheart, Elena Rivero Corral, were separated, he vowed he would fly the Atlantic to reach her. She is in Mexico City, and he is on his way to join her, making the trans-Atlantic flight by easy stages from Spain.

Curious Not Foiled

The mysterious shunting of the private coach, apparently to baffle the curious who were waiting at the station to see the bridal party arrive, was reminiscent of the Count-Countess elopement. The coach was switched from track to track by the Bremen when she arrived here last March and Countess Barbara Hutton Mdivani, en route to Reno to seek a divorce from Princes Alex Mdivani, the Count-to-be Churchyat were drawn when the train left the Marconi Street location in Newark at 8.11 a.m. yesterday. It was reported that the Countess and her new husband might leave on the train there to avoid the crowd expected in New York.

The blinds were still drawn when the coach arrived at the Pennsylvania station, but a porter was seen in the act of washing clothes. On the platform were piled some luggage, After being uncoupled and switched around mysteriously, the coach finally returned. The Countess was escorted by railroad officials through a dense throng to the elevator. The Count came near missing it, however, finally they reached the main floor and rushed to their automobile.

The couple were married in Paris on May 14, a little more than twenty-four hours after the divorce was granted. They travelled by aeroplane to San Francisco.

The couple were a mysterious exit Roenlund, on an island in Lolland, Denmark.

BARBARA HUTTON ARRIVES IN N.Y.

Newly - Wed Hangwitz-Reventlows Will Live in United States

New York, May 23.—The former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, and her new titled husband, Count von Haugwitz-Reventlow, arrived here yesterday morning at the Pennsylvania Station on the Curlieflyer, the private coach of the Countess's father, Franklyn L. Hutton, which carried them across the continent from San Francisco.

There was considerable mystery on the arrival of the coach at the end of the Manhattan Limited. The curtains were tightly drawn and the Count and his bride were nowhere to be seen. The curious were further mystified when a switchengine pulled the car out of the station. Finally it rolled in at another platform and the Count and Countess stepped off and made a hurried departure in a waiting motor car for the Hutton home at 1020 Fifth Avenue.

Sailing Next Week

Confronted on their arrival there by a group of interviewers and cameramen, the Countess responded briefly to various questions while the Count looked pleasant. They also posed for the photographers.

The questions mostly concerned the couple's plans for the future. The Countess said she and her husband would remain at her father's apartment until May 30 when they would sail for Denmark on the liner Bremen.

"Then we'll return here," she added, "where we are to make our permanent home."

"We heard you were going to live in Denmark, instead," some one suggested.

"We are going to live in the United States," the Countess reiterated firmly.

Then the Count was asked how he liked the United States, he answered, "Fine! I love it!" When the next question was put to him, "Will you become an American citizen?" he smiled and nodded, and then said "Well, I don't know. I should think."

The Countess was dressed in pale blue with a small white hat, dots and a mink cape. Her hat was white silk twill. The Count wore a grey suit, a matching topcoat and tie, a brown hat and brown suede shoes.

Prosperity In Agriculture Essential, Says E. W. Beatty

Chairman and President, Canadian Pacific Railway

Owing to the outstanding urgency that citizens from coast to coast should be supplied with all possible information on the nation's vital problems, the Canadian Club has arranged for requests for its general publication, the address delivered by E. W. Beatty, K.C., LL.D., Chairman and President, Canadian Pacific Railway, before the Toronto Canadian Club on May 20th, is herewith published.

Mr. Beatty spoke as follows—

"In no country do we have a more useful chain of societies than that of the Canadian Clubs in this Dominion. The success of their organization is most depends on the efficiency of the means provided for the discussion of public affairs. Societies whose object is to encourage the discussion of public questions perform a service of great value. No one will doubt that the Canadian Clubs are the leaders in this field.

"I am becoming, against my will, and from what I have thought to be a sense of public duty, only too well known to the public as a speaker in public. Speaking, as I have felt I must, on matters affecting not the private interests of the times, I feel myself exposed to criticism which sometimes becomes acrimonious, and often misrepresents the views which I have expressed. I presume that your kind invitation, and the contents hereof, which I know that you will give me, are but the prelude to fresh criticisms of what I say. For this reason I commence by appealing to you for careful study of what I have said on a matter of very public concern, and of some of the rejoinders made by those who disagree with me.

"In a series of addresses of which the last was made in this city somewhat more than a month ago, I have tried to offer a solution of a major problem facing this country. I trust that many of my hearers will feel that I do me the honor of listening carefully to what I have said, or of studying the copy of my addresses which I have been circulated, or at least the summaries which have appeared in the press. I trust that those of you have read what has been said against the proposal.

"PUBLIC ENEMY No. 1."

"If you have you will have learned that I have proposed neither the establishment of a railway policy which has added three billion dollars to the national debt, nor Government ownership. You will have learned that the name me the title of 'Public Enemy Number One.' Perhaps the members of Parliament who thus describe me believe that waste of public funds is a proper function of government. I believe that we should proceed to waste more billions on railway expenditures. I believe that economy would not permit me to accept the theory even if it would make me popular with the railway interests in question.

"You may also know that I have suggested as an end to be had a plan of operating the two great railways jointly and as efficiently and economically as possible. In its presentation on my last address, a prominent Western newspaper, which, I shall not name, again, with me, describes my plan in these words: 'The plan, in part is badly in need of a thorough overhauling is the charge of Mr. Beatty and his officers; and to modify it so that the railway system would be managed by parties whose prime concern would be to see that Canadian Pacific interests are given the consideration due to them as also against those of that unregarded individual, the taxpayer.' And the Hamilton Canadian Journalists do not permit the deliberate mis-statement of fact to go unchallenged, I am convinced that the writer of these words had not at that time read the address which he criticised, nor any of my previous addresses on the subject. I have argued that the ownership of the Canadian National should remain vested in the Government, and that the benefits obtained by joint operation of the railways be divided fairly between the owners. I have not the slightest of obtaining relief for the taxpayers of Canada on this point in any other system of the railways would not be the most economical method of providing railway service in the country. This extraordinary idea has been expressed, recently, by an officer of the Canadian Railway Board. If it is correct my plan is useless. I have it to you, as ordinary men of intelligence, to pass your judgment on that point. I shall wait patiently for a retraction of what must have been an unintentional misrepresentation of what I have said in plain language.

DISCUSSION ESSENTIAL

"These two criticisms of my recent address will show at once how important it is that the citizens of this country should inform themselves fully of the facts of our railway problems if they are to be in a position to deal wisely with them.

"It is today more than ever vital that we should have discussion of the problems of the nation and that it should be as free and as reasonable. If I have suggested a plan of railway management which would rob the taxpayer, or for the benefit of the Canadian Pacific, you should know it. I should have my case on erroneous figures, you should know it. If, on the other hand, those who criticize my plan have not personal stake in argument, or base their criticisms on intentional or unintentional misreadings of my statements, you should know those facts also.

"Other critics disagree with my plan, but do not so flagrantly misrepresent my proposals. Speaking in the city recently, the Minister of Railways, for whom I have much personal regard, discussed my plan, and, in many ways, the railway problem. As on other occasions, he opposed intelligent argument with a few catchways, and concluded by challenging the supporters of the plan to answer twelve questions which, by inference, embody his objections. As the one who has had the privilege of presenting the plan to the Canadian people, I may be permitted to regard the invitation as extended to myself.

"If the Minister will read my speeches on the subject with the same care which he has given to all his public statements, he will find that I have already answered the objections which he has advanced.

TOO MUCH PARTIZANSHIP

"Even the most good-humored controversy with the Minister of the Crown in this section of the country might lead one to think the problem a party issue. The railway mess has very largely resulted from too much partizanship, and I plead that, in considering what I have suggested to deal with it, you treat the question on its merits, and not from party boundaries.

"With this introduction I shall answer the questions which the Minister has asked. He first enquires whether the amalgamated railways are to be under private or Government control. Each is, in my plan, to remain the property of its present shareholders and should be managed by a private company, since our experience with management by a company under direct control of the Government has not been satisfactory. Governmental control of rates and service—as complete as needed—would continue.

"His second question asked how much saving can be made by amalgamation short of present traffic conditions. I have said that it would take five years to complete bridging the railways under facilities which, at present, divide them, and cannot be profitably effected. The Minister is wrong when he says that most of the possible savings have already been made. The major decisions in expenses of two systems have been ordinary savings due to reduced traffic, and economies in most departments cannot continue. The savings by unified management are still remain to be made.

"His third question inquires about the division of the savings to be made by amalgamation. The savings made by unified management, after expenditure of the gold in necessary capital, would be those which would have resulted if the properties had been under a united independent body, would be divided on an agreed basis, with at least one-half going to the owners of the National Railways.

"His fourth question is: 'How much capital expenditure will be necessary to effect the physical unification of the railways, and in the uniting of terminals, and how will this be raised?' Capital expenditures would be only those necessary to unify and would result. These would offer a valuable temporary method of absorbing surplus labor and accomplish unification. The method of financing these expenditures—which would not require much new money—would be a part of the syndicate agreement.

NOT PART OF PLAN.

"The fifth question begins 'If the Canadian National is to be absorbed by the Canadian Pacific, how much of the present deficit of 30 million dollars is the Canadian Pacific ready to absorb? . . .' Any idea that the Canadian National is to be absorbed by the Canadian Pacific is not a part of my suggestion, so I need not answer this question.

"The sixth question enquires what guarantees are to be given the owners of Canadian Pacific securities if the Canadian Pacific is brought under Government ownership. Neither Government ownership of the Canadian Pacific nor guarantees of its securities is a part of my plan, so I need not answer the question.

"The seventh question asks: 'In case of amalgamation is the Canadian Pacific put in all its assets (such as steamships, express, hotels and land) or only a part of them?' Amalgamation is not a description of my plan. The earnings which each company would draw out of the operation of property would depend on the assets and earning power which would be put in. The Canadian Pacific would put in, the less proportion of earnings they would draw out. I have already stated that we would be prepared to put in a fair joint operation of the railways would not be the most economical method of providing railway service in the country. This extraordinary idea has been expressed, recently, by an officer of the Canadian Railway Board. If it is correct my plan is useless. I have it to you, as ordinary men of intelligence, to pass your judgment on that point. I shall wait patiently for a retraction of what must have been an unintentional misrepresentation of what I have said in plain language.

The railway mess has very largely resulted from too much partizanship, and I plead that, in considering what I have suggested to deal with it, you treat the question on its merits, and not from party boundaries.

"With this introduction I shall answer the questions which the Minister has asked. He first enquires whether the amalgamated railways are to be under private or Government control. Each is, in my plan, to remain the property of its present shareholders and should be managed by a private company, since our experience with management by a company under direct control of the Government has not been satisfactory. Governmental control of rates and service—as complete as needed—would continue.

The Farmer and His Wheat Basis of Our National Life

Canadian Pacific President stresses the importance of basic industries and the fundamental necessity of Railway unification — Answers Hon. R. J. Manion and poses two vital questions for national consideration.

"His second question asked how much saving can be made by amalgamation short of present traffic conditions. I have said that it would take five years to complete bridging the railways under facilities which, at present, divide them, and cannot be profitably effected. The Minister is wrong when he says that most of the possible savings have already been made. The major decisions in expenses of two systems have been ordinary savings due to reduced traffic, and economies in most departments cannot continue. The savings by unified management are still remain to be made.

"His third question inquires about the division of the savings to be made by amalgamation. The savings made by unified management, after expenditure of the gold in necessary capital, would be those which would have resulted if the properties had been under a united independent body, would be divided on an agreed basis, with at least one-half going to the owners of the National Railways.

"His fourth question is: 'How much capital expenditure will be necessary to effect the physical unification of the railways, and in the uniting of terminals, and how will this be raised?' Capital expenditures would be only those necessary to unify and would result. These would offer a valuable temporary method of absorbing surplus labor and accomplish unification. The method of financing these expenditures—which would not require much new money—would be a part of the syndicate agreement.

NOT PART OF PLAN.

"The fifth question begins 'If the Canadian National is to be absorbed by the Canadian Pacific, how much of the present deficit of 30 million dollars is the Canadian Pacific ready to absorb? . . .' Any idea that the Canadian National is to be absorbed by the Canadian Pacific is not a part of my suggestion, so I need not answer this question.

"The sixth question enquires what guarantees are to be given the owners of Canadian Pacific securities if the Canadian Pacific is brought under Government ownership. Neither Government ownership of the Canadian Pacific nor guarantees of its securities is a part of my plan, so I need not answer the question.

"The seventh question asks: 'In case of amalgamation is the Canadian Pacific put in all its assets (such as steamships, express, hotels and land) or only a part of them?' Amalgamation is not a description of my plan. The earnings which each company would draw out of the operation of property would depend on the assets and earning power which would be put in. The Canadian Pacific would put in, the less proportion of earnings they would draw out. I have already stated that we would be prepared to put in a fair joint operation of the railways would not be the most economical method of providing railway service in the country. The extraordinary idea has been expressed, recently, by an officer of the Canadian Railway Board. If it is correct my plan is useless. I have it to you, as ordinary men of intelligence, to pass your judgment on that point. I shall wait patiently for a retraction of what must have been an unintentional misrepresentation of what I have said in plain language.

DISCUSSION ESSENTIAL

"These two criticisms of my recent address will show at once how important it is that the citizens of this country should inform themselves fully of the facts of our railway problems if they are to be in a position to deal wisely with them.

"It is today more than ever vital that we should have discussion of the problems of the nation and that it should be as free and as reasonable. If I have suggested a plan of railway management which would rob the taxpayer, or for the benefit of the Canadian Pacific, you should know it. I should have my case on erroneous figures, you should know it. If, on the other hand, those who criticize my plan have not personal stake in argument, or base their criticisms on intentional or unintentional misreadings of my statements, you should know those facts also.

"Other critics disagree with my plan, but do not so flagrantly misrepresent my proposals. Speaking in the city recently, the Minister of Railways, for whom I have much personal regard, discussed my plan, and, in many ways, the railway problem. As on other occasions, he opposed intelligent argument with a few catchways, and concluded by challenging the supporters of the plan to answer twelve questions which, by inference, embody his objections. As the one who has had the privilege of presenting the plan to the Canadian people, I may be permitted to regard the invitation as extended to myself.

"If the Minister will read my speeches on the subject with the same care which he has given to all his public statements, he will find that I have already answered the objections which he has advanced.

TOO MUCH PARTIZANSHIP

"Even the most good-humored controversy with the Minister of the Crown in this section of the country might lead one to think the problem a party sense. The railway mess has very largely resulted from too much partizanship, and I plead that, in considering what I have suggested to deal with it, you treat the question on its merits, and not from party boundaries.

"With this introduction I shall answer the questions which the Minister has asked. He first enquires whether the amalgamated railways are to be under private or Government control. Each is, in my plan, to remain the property of its present shareholders and should be managed by a private company, since

Hurlers' Duel Marks Opening When Kingston Ponies Earn 4-4 Tie With Stewart-Warners

Calhoun Outpitches The Highly Advertised Bud Clancy

KERR HOMERS

Local Outhit Ponies But Walks by Calhoun Hurt

Art Calhoun, newly acquired right handed pitcher for the Stewart-Warner baseball club, out-pitched Bud Clancy, Kingston import, but was forced to accept a tie decision when the local "Radios" batted the Ponies to a 4-4 tie to open the current C.O.B.L. season, in Kingston last evening in an abbreviated seven innings game that was terminated on account of darkness. Despite the fact, the locals forged to the front early in the game with a mighty home run coming from the bat of Johnnie Kerr in the second frame, they were never headed, but tied when Calhoun weakened slightly in the seventh to walk two batters in succession, both eventually entering into the scoring column when the Ponies drew aside the "Radios".

History repeated itself when Calhoun broke into the front ranks as a hurler in the C.O.B.L. last evening as just about twelve months ago the Belleville club spoiled the opening day ceremonies in Kingston by playing a 4 to 4 tie in full nine innings, the same score as yesterday's abbreviated tussle. Calhoun used a sharp breaking curve and a fire-ball that literally left batters in a stand-pat bewildered at the plate, Calhoun striking out nine and allowing four shallow hits, all of the one base variety. Brad Clancy, opposing Calhoun, pitched a good ball for the Ponies, but did not display the aggressiveness of Calhoun in the tight pinches, Clancy whiffed nine, but the "Radios" clipped his offerings for the same number of hits, including a mighty smash to deep centre field by Johnnie Kerr that went for a home run. The game will not figure in the league standings as no decision was arrived at, no draw games being recognized in the C. O. B. L. If the game has any bearing on the ultimate league standing it will be replayed at the conclusion of the regular schedule.

Home Runs Framed

Belleville "Radios" scored their runs in three different innings, getting two in the second, one in the fourth and their last in the seventh. The Ponies scored two in the second and two in the seventh, three free tickets via the "four balls take your base route" resulting in three runs being scored by the Ponies. Catcher batting a masterful game, Calhoun scored the hitting honors of the day connective to two nice bingles with Johnnie Kerr's home run being the only extra base hit of the day for the game that set fans literally shiver and shake under the cold weather conditions that prevailed, a crowd of approximately 700 witnessed the opening C.O.B.L. tussle with the opening day honors being performed by Mayor Reynolds, Thomas Kidd and President Bert Sowash.

When Jimmie Barclay threw out Wm McQuade at second in the third frame, the Kingston outfielder showed off Jim's throwing ability and did not attempt any more base stealing all day.

Coach Mills worked nicely from the side lines, especially in the seventh inning when Reg Smith had advancement that saw the local youngster score after Kerr had singled through when Roy Smith balked in another run.

Mickey Compeau was an absentee from the line-up, he being laid up with an infected finger. Incidentally Jake Gaetz was also out with the same until the fifth. Wonder why (?).

Jack "Chief" Williams was kept warm all afternoon and should be in tip top shape to ascend the mound and oppose Vic Sorrell in battle of the return game here on Friday morning.

Perhaps the Ponies will commence their future games when the sun is shining and not play their games under the cover of darkness in the future.

After the game the "Radios" and their friends were royally entertained at the Lasalle Hotel at a banquet given by President "Jack" Sowards at that Ponies. It was a most precious affair and did much to create a better feeling of good-fellowship between both parties. President Ernie Sowash responded to the visitors' toast and promised a return gesture when the Ponies come to town on the 24th of May.

Incidentally Earl "Sonny" Green was the first batter to step in the plate in the 1935 season in the C. O. B. L. while the honors of hitting the first home run of the season went to Barclay struck out as Wade stole second. Kerr was safe at first, third and scored on Arnie's error. Kerr was out stealing. 1 run, 1 hit, 1 error.

Kingston—H. Smith was called out on strikes. Green was sent to first. Arnie was called out on a third strike through the centre. 0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors.

Fifth Inning.

Belleville—Ford struck out. Calhoun singled a hit over second. Grey hit to third, Calhoun being forced at second. Kerr safe at first. Johnnie Kerr was safe on an infield hit. R. Smith was called out on strikes. 0 runs, 2 hits, 0 errors.

Kingston—Stone lifted to first baseman Webber was called out on strikes. Clancy popped to Grey. 0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors.

Sixth Inning.

Belleville—Green singled over second. Weir walked. Barclay forced Weir at second, Green pulling up at third. Barclay stole second. Reg Smith was hit by a pitched ball. Ford struck out. Calhoun struck out. 0 runs, 1 hit, 0 errors.

Kingston—Scruton singled to right. Kerr threw to Barclay for Scruton's sacrificed Scruton. McQuade was safe, short to first. Reg Smith was called out on strikes. 0 runs, 1 hit, 0 errors.

Seventh Inning.

Belleville—Grey singled and went to second on Kerr's sacrifice bunt. Grey sacrificed Grey to third. R. Smith hit through the pitcher's box, Grey green sided to right. Weir struck out. 1 run, 2 hits, 1 error.

SOFTBALL LOOP RAWDON OPENS

Rawdon, May 22.—On Tuesday evening, May 21, a large number of spectators gathered at Mount Pleasant and enjoyed the first game of the season. Teams were chosen from Stirling, Bethel, Carmel, Mount Pleasant and Rawdon.

The Glen Ross team looked snappy in their new red sweaters and the Mount Pleasant team also were in good trim.

Mr. C. O. Joblin had the signal honor of opening the Rawdon baseball league by pitching the first game of the season and in a brief address he welcomed the spectators and players to the new league. Reeve Rev. E. W. Rowland in his reply acknowledged the fans and players never to forget that a game of ball is for the development of mind, body and character, whether you win or lose. At this juncture Rev. Rowland declared a new ball for Rev. Rowland and after the ceremony the game was started with Mr. Bill Whitby of Stirling as plate umpire and Mr. Conley acting as base umpire.

The game was won by Mount Pleasant, 15 to 14.

PHYLLIS DEWAR STEALS THE SHOW

Moose Jaw Natator Shatters One Mile Mark

Winnipeg, May 23 (CP)—Stroking swimmers from coast to coast today were giving old man time's cherished records a real drubbing.

With four new marks lining up in the second program of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association title gala last night, the natators were primed for their final assault tonight, in the final two nights of swimming, seven new records have been established and 18 new champions crowned.

Not all the record breaking was left to water sports. Phyllis Dewar and Robert Pirie, both of Toronto, flung up virgin times in winning both high throws. Miss Dewar's spoke title and the 220 yards men's Canadian free-style championship respectively.

Wilson inaugurated the new cest in times by paring the junior one-mile stroke mark to five 1.14 and then 1.10 1-5 as compared with the now discarded time of 1.16.

Pirie Feared

"Bob" Pirie, feared "Y" tanker from Toronto, beaten by the beautiful stroking of Bobby Wilson of Hamilton in the final of the 100 yards men's Canadian free-style title event, when he forced the classic chief to the limit to get fifth of a second of the record, came back into his own in the 220 yards free-style and had a great duel with Arthur Ostrander of Chilliwack in the new record of 2.21 1-5 will testify. The Toronto star shaved off two-fifths of a second. Robert Johnston of Winnipeg was a good third.

Mary McCluskey, one of the meet's gilt-edged surprises, defeated a classy field in the 100 yards women's free-style Canadian championship event. The slim Edmonton girl was forced to break the Canadian record of 1.16 6-5 in staving off Marion Moffatt's challenge. Miss McCluskey's time 1.32 2-5 and the closeness of the finish, with Miss Moffatt and Vancouver miss also broke the old mark, Margaret Stotton of Toronto was an easy third.

to Johnnie Kerr (and was it a mighty smash).

Clancy's effort in the sixth frame stamped him as a real pitcher. With one on and none out Clancy started to bear down and whiffed two to stop the local rally.

Coach Joe Daly has St. Louis, Jamieson and Clancy to throw right back at the "Radios" tonight while the locals have Williams and Ernie Smith for mound duty with Calhoun in reserve.

Incidentally Umpire Woodley was perfectly justified in terminating the game somewhat abruptly in the seventh as darkness was fast setting in. Maybe the Ponies will learn to play their home games in the daylight in the future.

Many a flowery word was passed across the baseball diamond during the game, but all of those remarks will be forgotten as safe to saying, when the two teams clash here tomorrow morning.

With the exception of Dean Ford and Jeff Barclay, all of the "Radios" slapped the spheroid for at least one base and even Barclay executed a sweet sacrifice bunt with a fielder's choice in the sixth. Barclay's throw-out will not be highly respected in and about the C.O.B.L. this year while his judgment of batting is also good.

The lateness of starting games in Kingston has caused plenty of argument in the past and good for the officials of the Kingston club were robbed of a win by the late start on Wednesday.

Giants Increase Lead and Yankees Move Up Second in Games Played in Two Loops

Ivory Deals Among Hurlers Not Turning Out Well

PHILLIES LAST

Old Jesse Haines Wins a Heat For The Cardinals

The theory behind a number of outstanding deals in "ivory" particularly the head, that performs on the pitching mound, since the opening of the current Major League ball season has been to add strength to the clubs concerned, but so far very little improvement is shown in evidence.

Two players who recently figured in important transactions, George Blaeholder and George Earnshaw, made their initial starts with their new clubs yesterday. They met the same fate that came to others, including Vernon Kennedy, Russ Van Atta and Phil Collins — a lot of trouble.

Blaeholder managed to do a fair job of scattering 11 Detroit hits in his first start for Philadelphia, but the Athletics didn't get him the runs and he was beaten 4-1. His first pitch was turned into a homer by Pete Fox and the Tigers scored single in the second, three in the sixth, while Elden Auker pitched a steady game.

Giants Increase Lead

Earnshaw, in hot water from the start, failed in the Yankees' home debut as the Giants increased their lead over the Yankees to two games by driving him from the box with a three-run rally in the seventh.

Van Atta, said by the Yanks to be the Browns, and Fischer, sold by Detroit to the White Sox, both were beaten by their former clubs as their new clubs while Collins won from the Phillies, although he failed to finish against his old club, the Phillies.

The result of Earnshaw's defeat yesterday, the Giants increased their National League lead to 1½ games with a 5-2 victory over the Pirates and their second successive Cy Blanton. Roy Parmelee got the better of Blanton on the hill, giving him only five hits.

The other National League game saw the Phillies finish last in their place tie with the Braves as they came out on the short end of a 3-2 decision with Jesse Haines getting credit. Boston was rained out at Chicago.

Yanks Win

The Yankees registered the day's big gain in a series of American League games, although they just got together two four-run innings against young Joe Vance and Dartmouth College lefty Walter Stewart to move into second place, a game ahead of Cleveland, whose Indians failed to take a five-run lead against the Red Sox and took a 12-8 trimming. The Sox scored their runs in the first with a homer six in the eighth with Manager Joe Cronin batting for Jim Bagby. The Senators kept pace with Detroit's fifth-place club, just a half-game behind the Yanks, to beat the celer-crelling Browns 5-2.

SOCCER

Toronto, May 22.— (CP)— The greatest array of footballers that ever left Scotland's shores for overseas fields prepared today to leave Glasgow this afternoon with the highest respect for the ability of their first opponents on Canadian soil. They play a Western Ontario team in Kitchener tomorrow.

A selected Toronto team beat the Doughty Scots to a 3-1 victory at Maple Leaf Stadium last night, 10,000 cheering fans saw the game and the margin was flattering as it was, for, as was told, the tourists making sure of victory by playing as many starts as they were likely to be called upon. They had previously registered wins over Montreal and New York.

W. Miller, Patrick, Thistle star, was the outstanding player and his play was outstanding. The third counter was notched by Hugh Gallagher with a fine drive from a free kick. The Derby County centre-forward, approaching the veteran stage, was held in check for most of the game by Sarwig, Bowering Toronto Scottish centre-half. "Paddy" Duncan also failed to shine but his corner kicks were a real subject lesson to the opposing players as well as the crowd.

"Whitey" McDonald, Glasgow Rangers star, has returned his football in Hamilton and Toronto played a sound game as did all of the Scottish defenders.

J. Allen, sturdy little Vister Utility forward, scored Bowering's goal and with N. Donald of British Consols stood out on the local attack. Woollacott, in goal, and the remaining members of the defence turned in fine performances.

Jack Forbes, the well known Toronto wrestling referee, will be the third man in the ring. Vics of Bert Wells, local official.

NEWARK BEARS FAIL TO HIT A FAST CLIP

Drops to Third Place And Bisons Move Up

LEAFS LOSE

Red Wings Finally Win Game From Toronto

(By the Associated Press)

The failure of Newark Bears to hit a winning stride, even at home, dropped the Jersey City Skeeters into second place, two games back of Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League pennant race.

Newark, which has been in a second straight game to Syracuse Chiefs yesterday by 4-1, also trail Buffalo by the same margin. Buffalo have played four more games than the Bears.

While the Bisons were idle yesterday, the Leafs also lost an opportunity to add to their position as Rochester Red Wings finally salvaged victory out of the first game of the series with the League leaders. The score was 8-5.

The game was a stormy affair with Tony Kaufman, Red Wing pitcher and manager Ike Boone of the Leafs engaging in two fist fights. Boone was finally banished to assist Kaufman was trying to umpire. In the third inning, Umpire Hubbard had to clear the Rochester bench.

Ken Starr and Phil Gosad held the Red Wings to five hits but the Leafs' pitchers gave up seven runs when he issued five walks, four of which led to runs, gave Rochester a lead with the Leafs unable to overcome.

Joe Mulligan, lanky right-hander, held the Bears to two hits and got as many himself in Syracuse's victory. Cliff Melton also pitched an effective ball, allowing only four hits until he retired in the seventh for a pinch-hitter. His successor, Pete Fox, walked the first one blow the remainder of the inning. Fox was credited with the save, however, with Kromer Kowalczyk home run.

Baltimore Orioles struck their home run stride, including six circuit drives among their 15 hits as they defeated Albany Senators 17-3 at Albany yesterday and Jersey Citys got two each and Bill Brenzy and Eddie M. o one. Abernathy's pair was his total for the season to 12, one less than George Puccinelli.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Despite the fact the local senior baseball aggregation was forced to accept a draw verdict at Kingston last evening in an abbreviated seven round tilt, there is little doubt left in the minds of local fans but that Belleville has a real smart up and coming team of ballsters. The same situation entered in upon the scene last year when the locals battled the Ponies to a four-all draw in the opening game in Kingston, but also dropped the pastime was started with too late, despite the bitter cold weather, the officials being forced to call the game. Even in a draw contest, the locals still won a moral victory, insofar as they cuffed the deliveries of the highly advertised Bud Clancy for nine solid blows, including a home run, the opening game in Kingston saw the "Radios" to batting circulations. The box score of the game actually tells the tale, as the locals batted and fielded their way to a well earned victory, but they were thwarted as the sun died in the west.

For seasons past outside clubs have resented the lateness of the hour in commencing ball games in Kingston. For instance, it is exactly 6.36 p.m. (daylight saving time) when the final out was recorded last night. It is hoped that the executive of the Kingston club will by the mistakes of last night and advertise their games slightly earlier in the future. Visiting Senior clubs were quite satisfied to call "quits" at the end of seven innings and simply because there were very few chances of actually playing baseball after the above mentioned stations that prevailed. But, getting back to the actual game, we must doff our chapeaux to Art Calhoun, who silenced the mighty Ponie batters to the tune of four hits and two hits in a pretty pitchers' battle with Brad Clancy, Calhoun once showing the master in both hitting and pitching. The first result of last night's game really does not mean much in the final league standing, but Friday's opener at the local Exhibition Park means much more and we feel sure that "Jack" Williams 'facing the formidable Ponies.

Following the game the local team was banquetted at the Lasalle Hotel at the expense of President "Jack" Soward of the Kingston club. During the course of the evening a most flowery word was passed across the banquet table and a return dinner tendered the Belleville confines. Whereupon, following the game here on the 24th, Incidentally Mickey Compeau was an absentee from the line-up, Mickey being laid up with an infected finger. Incidentally Jake Gaetz was also out with the same until the fifth. Wonder why (?).

Jack "Chief" Williams was kept warm all afternoon and should be in tip top shape to ascend the mound and oppose Vic Sorrell in battle of the return game here on Friday morning.

Perhaps the Ponies will commence their future games when the sun is shining and not play their games under the cover of darkness in the future.

After the game the "Radios" and their friends were royally entertained at the Lasalle Hotel at a banquet given by President "Jack" Sowards at that Ponies. It was a most precious affair and did much to create a better feeling of good-fellowship between both parties. President Ernie Sowash responded to the visitors' toast and promised a return gesture when the Ponies come to town on the 24th of May.

Incidentally Earl "Sonny" Green was the first batter to step in the plate in the 1935 season in the C. O. B. L. while the honors of hitting the first home run of the season went to Johnnie Kerr in the second frame, they were never headed, but tied when Calhoun weakened slightly in the seventh to walk two batters in succession, both eventually entering into the scoring column when the Ponies drew aside the "Radios".

History repeated itself when Calhoun broke into the front ranks as a hurler in the C.O.B.L. last evening as just about twelve months ago the Belleville club spoiled the opening day ceremonies in Kingston by playing a 4 to 4 tie in full nine innings, the same score as yesterday's abbreviated tussle. Calhoun used a sharp breaking curve and a fire-ball that literally left batters in a stand-pat bewildered at the plate, Calhoun striking out nine and allowing four shallow hits, all of the one base variety. Brad Clancy, opposing Calhoun, pitched a good ball for the Ponies, but did not display the aggressiveness of Calhoun in the tight pinches, Clancy whiffed nine, but the "Radios" clipped his offerings for the same number of hits, including a mighty smash to deep centre field by Johnnie Kerr that went for a home run. The game will not figure in the league standings as no decision was arrived at, no draw games being recognized in the C. O. B. L. If the game has any bearing on the ultimate league standing it will be replayed at the conclusion of the regular schedule.

Home Runs Framed

Belleville "Radios" scored their runs in three different innings, getting two in the second, one in the fourth and their last in the seventh. The Ponies scored two in the second and two in the seventh, three free tickets via the "four balls take your base route" resulting in three runs being scored by the Ponies. Catcher batting a masterful game, Calhoun scored the hitting honors of the day connective to two nice bingles with Johnnie Kerr's home run being the only extra base hit of the day for the game that set fans literally shiver and shake under the cold weather conditions that prevailed, a crowd of approximately 700 witnessed the opening C.O.B.L. tussle with the opening day honors being performed by Mayor Reynolds, Thomas Kidd and President Bert Sowash.

When Jimmie Barclay threw out Wm McQuade at second in the third frame, the Kingston outfielder showed off Jim's throwing ability and did not attempt any more base stealing all day.

Coach Mills worked nicely from the side lines, especially in the seventh inning when Reg Smith made advancement that saw the local youngster score after Kerr had singled through when Roy Smith balked in another run.

Mickey Compeau was an absentee from the line-up, he being laid up with an infected finger. Incidentally Jake Gaetz was also out with the same until the fifth. Wonder why (?).

SOFTBALL LOOP RAWDON OPENS

Rawdon, May 22.—On Tuesday evening, May 21, a large number of spectators gathered at Mount Pleasant and enjoyed the first game of the season. Teams were chosen from Stirling, Bethel, Carmel, Mount Pleasant and Rawdon.

The Glen Ross team looked snappy in their new red sweaters and the Mount Pleasant team also were in good trim.

Mr. C. O. Joblin had the signal honor of opening the Rawdon baseball league by pitching the first game of the season and in a brief address he welcomed the spectators and players to the new league. Reeve Rev. E. W. Rowland in his reply acknowledged the fans and players never to forget that a game of ball is for the development of mind, body and character, whether you win or lose. At this juncture Rev. Rowland declared a new ball for Rev. Rowland and after the ceremony the game was started with Mr. Bill Whitby of Stirling as plate umpire and Mr. Conley acting as base umpire.

The game was won by Mount Pleasant, 15 to 14.

PHYLLIS DEWAR STEALS THE SHOW

Moose Jaw Natator Shatters One Mile Mark

Winnipeg, May 23 (CP)—Stroking swimmers from coast to coast today were giving old man time's cherished records a real drubbing.

With four new marks lining up in the second program of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association title gala last night, the natators were primed for their final assault tonight, in the final two nights of swimming, seven new records have been established and 18 new champions crowned.

Not all the record breaking was left to water sports. Phyllis Dewar and Robert Pirie, both of Toronto, flung up virgin times in winning both high throws. Miss Dewar's spoke title and the 220 yards men's Canadian free-style championship respectively.

Wilson inaugurated the new cest in times by paring the junior one-mile stroke mark to five 1.14 and then 1.10 1-5 as compared with the now discarded time of 1.16.

Pirie Feared

"Bob" Pirie, feared "Y" tanker from Toronto, beaten by the beautiful stroking of Bobby Wilson of Hamilton in the final of the 100 yards men's Canadian free-style title event, when he forced the classic chief to the limit to get fifth of a second of the record, came back into his own in the 220 yards free-style and had a great duel with Arthur Ostrander of Chilliwack in the new record of 2.21 1-5 will testify. The Toronto star shaved off two-fifths of a second. Robert Johnston of Winnipeg was a good third.

Mary McCluskey, one of the meet's gilt-edged surprises, defeated a classy field in the 100 yards women's free-style Canadian championship event. The slim Edmonton girl was forced to break the Canadian record of 1.16 6-5 in staving off Marion Moffatt's challenge. Miss McCluskey's time 1.32 2-5 and the closeness of the finish, with Miss Moffatt and Vancouver miss also broke the old mark, Margaret Stotton of Toronto was an easy third.

TANGLED LIVES

By ANN FORESTER

At the eager, scandalous murmur which followed Queenie's entrance, Jim almost scowling. No way to avoid this woman without resorting to actual rudeness . . . she sought her out deck . . . she hurried remarks across the table at meal times. Remarks tipped with spite because of Jim Keith's avoidance.

That evening at dinner the widow's resentment had even more food to feed upon. From beneath a youthfully yellow bob, Mrs. Chilton turned enticing eyes on the man at the end of the table.

"It's a heavenly night on deck. Mr. Keith, you're coming on. Of course you are going, Mr. Keith? I shall be kind hearted and save a dance for you!" she added playfully.

"Sorry," said the young man shortly. "I'm afraid I— won't be able to get there. By the way, miss Jenness— he turned politely to Kitty— "why don't you drop in this evening and let me show you that book I was telling you about today? I know it will interest you."

Kitty's blue eyes sparkled with indignant at this barbed glance of the woman across the table. Her hearty laugh rang out—"sure, I'll go —if you ask my chaperone. A young girl like me is liable to have her head turned with your attention, Mr. Keith. How about it, Joyce—" Kitty looked at the girl beside her with dancing eyes. "Will you come along and save my reputation from this young heart smasher?"

A strange little thrill of anger went through Joyce. This was unlike— Kitty—getting her in a corner, like ti . She felt her cheeks beginning to burn — for no good reason at all, and the mere knowledge made her blush the deeper.

But she maintained her poise. In a voice severely cool, she heard herself agreeing to Kitty's plan. She lifted her lashes and felt her heart sink a beat.

A moment when their eyes plunged deep. A sweet hot throb of excitement pulsing through her blood and a queer little thrill, almost panic, seizing her.

A LOOK OF THE PAST

CHAPTER THIRTY

"Whatever possessed you to go with a thing Kitty! It isn't its type!" Vidgel Gay Dunlop in Joyce's room. There was a little shake of anger in her voice, as she went on deck after dinner.

"Why, it was nothing so dreadful, was it?" asked Kitty meekly. "I had three good reasons. I really wanted to see the book—

"The other two don't matter, I suppose—"

"Oh, yes. I wanted to take that Chilcoon woman down a bit. Did you see her face when she had stopped her net and walked right into him?"

The thought of Kitty, so open and matter-of-fact, surrending a rank, set caused Joyce's mouth to twitch in spite of herself.

Kitty sat, and knew the day was won. "I can't stand that brazen female! She makes me think of Nedine . . . all sex and no appeal."

"What's the latest from Nedine?"

"There's no need of 'Phi being so high-hat with the nice young fellow!" Kitty's voice was loyal. Then she stole a rather timid look at the girl's face as she went on. "It isn't like you, Joyce, to be prejudiced against a person on hearsay. It's that gossiping doctor and his wife against Jim Keith in the first place—"

"It wasn't that—" Joyce began, then stopped. She had no reason for her feeling so antagonistic toward the Neptunes first officer! It was something finer, more sensitive which flashed between them in the first glance. Something looking out of their eyes at each other. Something instinctive and disturbing.

"Oh—it's say no more about it. she said hastily. "I'll go—as soon as Roger wants to retire."

Roger Cameron never came to the dinner table—preferring to eat by himself in his cabin, where the slight awkwardness left by his ill-temper would not be noticed.

He listened to the ships concert tonight; lying back in his own comfortable swivel chair, weary old eyes resting on the phosphorus sea, his head placed gently on the hand of his young wife where it lay on the arm of the chair.

Beauty and peace, and a ship gently dipping beneath a night sky . . . He felt his heart going up on the strains of the music in an incense of thanksgiving . . . Thank God, he had found these things before it was too late, Thank God for this brief reprieve . . .

Before the concert was ended he had tired and gone below to his cabin on the saloon deck. He tired easily, these days, sleeping more hours than he was awake.

With Roger made comfortable for the night, Kitty and Joyce went to the first officer's quarters. Nothing to tell Kitty how Joyce's heart was pounding . . . Nothing to tell of that furious reluctance in her mind to see more of this man.

She could deny to Kitty, but not to herself, the strange power Jim Keith had over her. Half liking, half dread. Boasting at herself she had, nevertheless, changed to a dress which she felt was more becoming. It was a filmy black chiffon affair, which flung her skin into ivory relief and turned her hair to shining bronze.

A lovely paridgan for her slim figure, thought Jim Keith as he rose to greet them, but his cool politeness gave no hint of this.

Indeed, it was Kitty who received the warm smile of his dark eyes. It was for Kitty that he brought out the Chinese vases, the Burmas jade, the Oriental bronzes which had formed his pastime on these sea trips.

Giddy with delight, Kitty wandered about the room, exclaiming, marvelling; thoroughly enjoying herself her square, capable hands lovingly fingering the delicate objects of Art as the man spoke of them.

Left, to herself, Joyce gave up all pretence of folding them. She sank into a chair beside his desk and lit a cigarette, letting her eyes rove about the room.

The usual ship's officer's quarters on the Oriental run. Wicker furniture cushioned in flowered crelouns for the tropics. The creams and blues seemed oddly feminine when contrasted with —Jim Keith's trim, tang figure.

More in keeping with the thought of him was the ship's clock, with cabinets. The shelves of books standing on either side of the desk.

Joyce rose to read their titles. Technical works. Biography, poetry, old and modern. Scientific tomes standing beside bright bound modern fiction. A cosmopolitan taste, this man had. A many faceted mind . . .

She stole a glance at him. He was standing on the other side of the room, in his hands a vase of pigeon-blood cloisonne. Jim Keith was at his best, his dark face alight with interest. When he brought that in his eyes was gone. Something warming and boyish in the smile he turned on Kitty. They were in such friendly accord, those two — Kitty Joyce knew that the lonely little chill of her own heart was ridiculous, yet she was conscious of it all the same.

What could have been the trouble long ago when he was forced to leave the British navy?

The doctor had said. Such a hot fury rose in Joyce's heart that she trembled. Jim Keith was not! it was contempt for a man who would let an off-color affair with a woman wreck his future.

He must have loved her—or thought he did, to let her have any power . . . ran the girl's relentless thoughts—as she pretended to be examining a thin volume of modern poetry which she had drawn from the shelves. She couldn't imagine a tempestuous love affair—it would be preposterous with such a man. Scandal and disgrace. The crash of Jim Keith's world, and oblivion. It was oblivion to become first officer on this far western run . . .

Nothing to tell her that the man was fighting to keep his interest on his face he hide. Fighting to keep from being too keenly aware of the slender, lithe figure across the cabin.

Joyce was standing under a side light which splashed her hair with bronze gold and polished it to a glow on her face. Something wistful in the delicate outline of her face . . . in the droop of her head . . . something which drew a bitter tenderness from his heart.

In angry contempt, Keith talked it down. "Your confidence in my discretion working again, you poor fool! Will you never learn? Mystery natal Nothing but emptiness at all the rest. A trick of color. A snare of nature . . .

He turned his back. Spoke more animatedly to Kitty.

As though his secret antagonism reached her, Joyce put the book back upon the shelf and moved listlessly back to her original seat by the desk.

Her eyes fell on its flattered top. Papers covered with diagrams, thought in a pile and held together by a heavy iron weight. Several red leather ledgers. One, open, and red pen flung down beside it. Their task had interrupted. Jim's work, apparently. A bronze calendar. A letter knife. Loose pages of a letter with a deliquent sloping hand. Joyce's own handwriting—heavy and black and angular. Instinctive. Her eyes found herself reading the writer of this letter . . .

Some snapshots evidently enclosed in the letter, lay at her elbow. The inevitable things snapped on board ship. Groups on deck, squinting through the sun. A picture of a man and woman standing before a funnel.

The man, Joyce could see at a glance, was Jim Keith in his white uniform. The woman . . . a slender, laughing girl, smiling up at him.

Joyce wanted to look away . . . It was none of her affair. She was not even interested . . .

Against her will she stole a glance at the girl of the photograph, and caught her breath in an audible little gasp.

The girl snapped with Jim Keith!

FATHER COUGHLIN SPEAKS IN N. Y.

President and Plutocratic Capitalism Denounced By Speaker

NEW YORK, May 23 — (AP) — With bitter denunciation of President Roosevelt and "plutocratic capitalism", the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin called on a widely responsive throng to deluge the United States Senate today with telegrams demanding enactment of the Bonus Bill.

The occasion was the Michigan priest's organization of a New York unit of the National Union for social justice last night in his campaign to "restore America to the Americans."

The thousands who filled Madison Square Garden—and a like 13,000 gave tremendous ovations to his tirades against "tampered creators of money", to his demand for a "proper distribution" of the products of labor and to his attack on the Presidential veto of the Patman Bonus Bill.

Dwelling on the veto, his voice shattered by his cordial words, Father Coughlin declared:

"You heard the President of the United States condemn class legislation, as he called it, while for years he and his predecessors in office have been upholding this very class legislation for the benefit of the tincup bankers.

"Wednesday, May 22, 1935, once more I demonstrated that no one dare breathe against their will. That I stand alone, that I stand alone, who were vetoed. It was the American people".

The "real contest" in the bonus fight, the priest said, is identified with the Roosian bat or ban. The Congress the right to coin and regulate money.

Attacks Bankers

After declaring the bankers have created a false structure of wealth by manipulating the creation of credit and the flow of money, Father Coughlin said:

"Here, then, is the real printing press money of the nation. Any job printer can stamp out these bank cheques and the promissory notes. That is how the money of the United States comes into being.

In issuing new currency to pay the bonus, he continued, the Patman Bill, the priest said, "We could have more than it is gold for every dollar of currency—and they call it inflation."

Father Coughlin declared the regulation of money must be stripped from the bankers and returned to Congress.

The priest frequently mentioned toward the reporters' tables in assails on the press. On one occasion, flinging one arm high in the air, pounding his pulpit-like stand with his fist, he shouted, "It's about fed up with the newspapers."

The press, he declared has paid heed to the thin, selfish voice of the financier" and "more or less supressed the voice of the people."

Wage Scale Denounced

The priest once again linked Roosevelt and the "money changers" in his attack on the wage scale of public works projects.

"If we are forcing men to work for $19 or $20 a week, then this plutocratic system must be liquidated, because it is out of existence."

"We must pay them a decent living, American wage. We dare not offer them less, because that is the breeder of Communism."

Not only was the night one of "congratulation" of the New York unit of the priest's union; it was a night of profit, for the union.

The garden rental was $4,000. The precipts totalled between $15,000 and $17,000. Some seats sold for $2.

DROP FOOD FROM 'PLANES TO STRIKERS

MOUNTED POLICE CHARGING PICKET LINE AT RAYON PLANT IN CLEVELAND

Battles between 75 mounted policemen and pickets and 1,000 pickets were frequent as strikers and sympathisers attacked workmen entering or leaving the plant of the Industrial Rayon Corporation in Cleveland. Food dropped from 'planes to 100 employees virtually imprisoned within the factory. A number of workers were clubbed, police were stoned and a newspaper cameraman was beaten. The strike was called as a result of collective bargaining dispute.

Twelve Rules For Tire Health

Rochester, Ont. May 21—There are 12 simple rules for tire health, which if followed, would cut the average motorist's tire bill anywhere from 25 to 50 per cent annually, writes K. D. Smith, technical superintendent, tire division, of The B. F. Goodrich Company, Akron, Ohio, in a recent issue of the Rubber Age magazine Monthly. These rules are:

1.—Maintain recommended or raied air pressure at all times. The recommended pressure is a minimum below which tires should never be allowed to fall. Nor should pressure be kept much above this figure.

2.—Whenever you put a new tire or wherever a tire has been off the rim do not start on a long drive with implicit faith that its air pressure is correct. A tire may lose several pounds of pressure immediately after it is put on the rim. Have it checked three or four miles down the road.

3.—Do not run a tire constantly on the same wheel. Shift your tires from wheel to wheel, which will produce even wear.

4.—Do not rely on the generally accepted theory that it is all right to run old tires on back wheels, because a rear tire blow-out is less dangerous than one in front. A rear tire blow-out is every bit as dangerous as one in front.

5.—Keep to prevent an accident do not slam on the brakes. The most gradual braking possible is best for

7.—Have your wheel alignment checked occasionally, rear as well as front.

8.—Look over your tires occasionally to see how they are getting along.

9.—Do not drive too fast on hot, dry roads. In extremely hot weather use low speed. High speed heat the tires, hastens deterioration.

10.—Start up gently, do not spin your wheels.

11.—Do not bump into curbs or run over them. Tires have not yet been perfected that will permit this kind of abuse without injury.

12.—If your tire begins to steer queerly, slow down, pull off the road, and examine all four tire carefully. Often this action comes when a tire is preparing to blow out. Inspection may prevent accident.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
KILLED DYNAMITING STUMPS
Hamilton, May 23.—Willis Hall, Flamboro Centre farmer, lost his life on Wednesday, in a dynamite explosion on the farm of a neighbour, Charles Buttenham. A field of stumps was being cleared. A charge had been laid and a fuse lighted. It sputtered toward the stump but there was no blast. Thinking the fuse had gone out Mr. Hall rushed toward the stump to relight it. Several persons nearby shouted to him to stand back but before he could withdraw the explosion occurred.
He was so close to the stump when the charge detonated that his body was badly mangled, one arm being blown off. Death is believed to have been instantaneous.

POLICE RAID INN HUNDRED TAKEN

Manager Held on Charge of Keeping Gaming House

Toronto, May 23.—(CP) — More than 100 persons were arrested and about $4,000 seized by police early today in a raid on the Jolly Miller Inn in Hogg's Hollow, York Township. Louis James, manager of the Inn, was held on a charge of keeping a common gaming house. Bail was set at $1,000.

A number of these arrested as frequenters were able to gain release by paying bail of $500 but the majority spent the night in North Toronto police station cells, on mattresses.

In one of the largest raids in the county's history, a cordon of police was thrown around the building at one o'clock this morning. Doors and windows were smashed in as the police swept into the Inn.

Police charged the men were playing dice, blackjack and poker.

Early today the officers were dismantling equipment found in the place, some of which, they said, would be taken into court today.

ENO PEPS UP THE WHOLE SYSTEM
People who are half-well, half-sick most of the time only exist. To really live you must be well. And to be well you should take steps at once to rid yourself of constipation, which causes most human ailments.
Drastic purgatives and harsh mineral waters aggravate the condition. Eno's "Fruit Salt" liquidates gently, effectively —normally. It tastes good and forms no habits.
If you want to feel like a million, take a dash of Eno's "Fruit Salt" in a glass of water, morning and night, for a few days. Then see the reasons. Eno refreshes, sweetens the stomach. CARRYING PLACE DEFEATED 12-2 IN FIRST GAME

Carrying Place—The age of the service station is here surely. A quarter-mile north west of the canal on the Trenton Highway, tanks and pumping equipment have been delivered Mr. R. Simmons for the erection of a new station on the south side of the road at that point. Meanwhile the tasks of erecting are not yet complete at the Ellis station on the canal bank.

Local softballers made their Trenton debut at Bayside Park on Monday evening last when they opened the season schedule by taking an uphanded 13-3 lacing from Whitfall Cab Company. However the score is hardly a fair indication of the respective merits of the teams, and before the season is over there is a very good chance that the tables may be turned. The Whitfall Cabmen are an aggregation of young fellows, many of them last year's "College Grads" players. In Kidd and Derry they have two splendid pitchers, but the Carrying Place jersey can equal that threat with Leo Coughlin and Hugh Chisholm soon. Local players who saw action in the first game were Henry Harris, Fred Hicks and Gordon Hanthorn. Others were Trenton boys with the exception of Carman Cook of Redmerville. Nevrousness afield coupled with the fact that many of the Cabmen into a ten-run lead in the first inning; but from that point on the game was even. Both teams used the game as a trial workout, two pitchers seeing service for each team.

Corrigan's Pond, the scene of many a furious hockey battle during the winter months, is now quite dry and baked. Until a few days ago a bit of water was left in a small depression near the centre, but this has disappeared.

Miss Ellen MacDougall is to ill health and has been forced to give up her position in Picton temporarily. Miss MacDougall is at home.

A number from the community attended the Conservative rally at the Arthur Hayes home in the English Settlement on Monday evening.

A sister of the Hendricks brothers, David, Jacob and John of this community, a Trenton resident, was buried in the local cemetery on Friday last.

Rev. R. Tebbs and son of Hamilton were in the community holidaying last week.

Two large red reflectors placed at the ends of the detour leading across the canal have done much to keep strangers from straying from the present course. Meanwhile many are wondering when another will be taken to erect the new bridge.

HUSKIES REND BOY

The Pas, Man., May 21.—Fullen Millen was indefinite last night in the killing of six-year-old Miles Seglowitch by a pack of bush-bred husky dogs owned by a trapper.

Investigation into the killing of the lad was underway, with the cause of the dogs attacking the boy and his playmate, Joe Kryachuk, undetermined.

The two boys were attacked by four of the half-wolf dogs as they played on an unused trail. Seginovitch was able to get away and run to his trapper for help.

Mrs. Kryachuk beat the dogs off with a stick picked up young Seglovitch and took him to her home, while the dogs barking in pursuit. He died shortly afterward.

Activity was Good for Her Figure

Helped by "That Kruschen Feeling"

Her husband assured her that it was true, and that she could not expect to wear stock size now. He was evidently a believer in the ancient "fat and forty" legend. To-day she slenderer the lide with a laugh. But let her tell the story herself:

"I must tell you I had developed beyond the 'stock size.' My husband assured me that it was true my age. One day I saw an advertisement and decided to try Kruschen Salts. That was last July. Now once more I wear a size 38. Besides which, I feel so much better, more energetic, and can do my work without that tired feeling."—(Mrs.) J. M.

Your figure will not develop a "middle-aged spread" if you keep yourself healthy and active. Salts for a few days that old-fashioned sluggish feeling begins to disappear. Use the young folks. Get a 75c. bottle of Kruschen (it lasts four weeks) and start right away to take half-a-teaspoonful in a tumbler of hot water every morning.

YOU SEE I CAN WEAR STOCK SIZE NOW THAT I AM MORE ACTIVE

You'll enjoy it—you thought you'd never dance again, but you find you're getting as easy as ever—and you can wear the modern dresses with as much grace and comfort as the young folks.

Kruschen is sold in every town and village in Canada. Start right away to take half-a-teaspoonful in a tumbler of hot water every morning.

Daily Short Story

Beauty—and Brains

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Everything is quiet and peaceful around the office and I'm sitting back dozing pleasantly when the door opens and the vision of beauty proceeds to disturb my rest.

"Good morning, good morning," she chirps. "Lovely day. I'm so glad to be working here. It must be SUCH an interesting place. I just KNOW I'm going to love it here."

This might have been going on for all I didn't interrupted. You see I am a little peeved at being disturbed like this by a perfect stranger, so I growl:

"You're all wrong, sister, and wrong. It isn't morning anymore and the hour now being 12:15 and even if it was morning it wouldn't be a good morning because I have never seen you before and even if I have I would never like you to work in this office because I can't think of anything more useless in a working prospect's office than a lady, unless it's two of them."

She looks at me amazed. And meanwhile I get a good look at her. She's about this high and she's got the kind of eyes that make many a young fellow turn corners in the middle of the street.

"Didn't my aunt call you?" she asks.

I have softened up some by this time so I merely shake my head and say,

"No, but I wish she had."

No sooner said than the phone rings. I answer in my usual courteous fashion:

"You put the nickel in, talk."

"This is Mrs. Van Bleecker," comes a voice. "I just called to tell you that if you wish to continue to promote social activities here for me this Summer, you had better give my niece, Dorothy, a position in your office as she is tired of the gay social life."

What would they try to a thing like that? Well, I took another look at Dorothy and said it. So Dorothy became my only employe.

Before I go any further with this story, I wish to point out that any thing that happens after this point of the epic is absolutely no fault of mine. I did what I could to stop it, but did you ever try to stop a girl like Dorothy?

In two days I find I am the manager of the classiest boarding stable of grunters in the entire business and I am kept broke paying for manicures for guys who have formerly used their nails for nothing more gentle than opening safes.

Besides which I am inundated with applications from college youths of all shapes and sizes to become members of the troupe and, so help me, Ripley I even am forced to turn down payments for this privilege.

Weakness

All of this makes life very interesting, but it has it's weak side too. You see, Dorothy has a habit of coming to the boys and advising them that they are big strong men, and they all want to win their bouts.

Now, as anyone can see, this is bad for business. You see, if they all want to win, they level, and if there is anything duller than a level of honest wrestling bout, it is your razor after the little darling has used it for opening the canned beans.

I do not even mind level wrestling bouts except for one evil effect. It makes the customers stay away from the matches in large hordes, and the money that they would spend at the box office of the Coliseum goes to the movies in which I have no interest whatever except a sentimental one about Myrna Loy.

I do not see what I can do about this situation which is driving me both to insanity and bankruptcy, so I call an office conference to see what can be done. It is at this point that Dorothy shows that she has something besides the kind of looks that would drive a movie star crazy. She has brains, too.

She gives me the idea that saves my business. Since that afternoon I have no trouble whatsoever getting the boys to wrestle like I want them to. I also find that they get along fine with only shave a week and I am starting to make plenty of clisers to date. She certainly proved she knew how to handle men.

It was that afternoon that she decided we'd better get married.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in the private office and ma said, These so called soap box orators really have a lot on their side, Willyum. What I mean is, they seem to have a lot to say and they seem to say it, she said.

They say it all rite, pop said, and ma said, I was listening to one in the public square downtown this afternoon and I must say I was quite impressed.

Was he handsome? pop said, and ma said, Well, yes as a matter of fact he was quite good looking in a long wavy brown hair and the most remarkable dark eyes, and that makes any difference, Mr seemed a little wrought up over the fact of such a few people having practically all the money and so many people practically none, and the people that have the least are the ones that have to work the hardest, that's what seemed to make him particullly angry. And I must say I think he was quite right. Why should millions of people have to work 12 and 14 hours a day with their noses on the grindstone while a few fortunate ones just sit around with their feet on a pillow. Why should that be, ma said.

To speak confidentially, I really dont beleive it should, pop said, and ma said, Of course it shouldn't, and neither it would if it were not for the selfishness of the few, to the detriment of the many, and as the young man said, And that just reminds be, by the way, Nora actually had the bare faced nerve to tell me that she's going to join the Homemakers League at some such thing. Anyway it's just a paltry excuse for a bit of cooks training on an 8 hour day. Imagine such a thing with expenses what they've been and what they seem to be coming to, I told Nora I'd discharge her without a reference if I heard another aberd word on the silly subject, me said!

What was the cracking noise? Was it a soap box collapsing? pop said, and ma said, I don't bear anything, and what's funny?

Pop just snorted so laughing out loud to himself without saying why.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1935

LITTLE AGAIN WINS BRITISH AMATEUR TITLE

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Toronto, May 25 (CP)—Three Toronto girls were injured near Pickering, Ont., when their car, a 1929 sedan, skidded into a ditch and turned on its side. Miss Mary Gal and Miss Isabel Gal, sisters, and Miss Jean Kerr, 24, were treated for minor injuries. The driver, Miss Kerr, said she was driving carefully when the accident occurred.

Brantford, Ont., May 25 (CP)—Mrs. Ethel Brookes, 37, was rushed to Toronto Western Hospital with a fractured leg and other injuries. Jean Kerr, 24, was treated for minor injuries. The driver, Miss Kerr, said she was driving carefully when the accident occurred.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 25 (CP)—Captain W. E. Margetts managed to make the voyage safely by and brought in something nearly as big as his steamer.

It was a 2600 pound bull ray, 16 feet in width, weird denizen of the sea that sometimes leaps clear to the surface and perhaps harder before in a shrimp net.

Indianapolis, May 25 (CP)—There will be no "brothers" left of the Hoosier Lodge of "The little bad boys that bite back."

Fellow lodgemembers of youngsters, when one of the "brothers," a 16-year-old negro, died recently, had eight declared heirs of the society's records.

Officers of the youth told them the lodge had a membership of about 30 boys ranging in age from 16 to 74 years. To become a full fledged "bug", officers' vows, a boy must have been delinquent in order to make trouble and "bug" the police, the latter being considered the most annoying.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 25 — (CP)—Adam Meister, Chippewa, is to be laid to rest on his birthday. Magara district's oldest resident, he "considered 101 how much longer the old machinery would hold out." He is in the health.

St. Catharines, Ont., May 25 — (CP)—Efficiency is "progressing" into a science, my local observers. The old method of fruit-farmer having a thumb at nearby motorists has come into the discard.

The other day a car was seen carrying a sign about two feet high reading "Thanktiers, 1931."

Kitchener, Ont., May 25 (CP) —Prosperity has not arrived on the corner, it is here. So say school officials, in reporting an orders of 126 pupils from Kitchener schools since last October.

Ninety dropped up to the first of the year, and since then another 36 have moved and resigned their studies. Only 16 of them left to remain at home, to fill the place of other members of the family who have obtained jobs.

Kitchener, Ont., May 25 (CP)—Does anyone want to adopt a baby boy?

Children's Aid Society has a number of baby boys reported to it, some calls had been made, all for girls.

There are plenty of baby boys ready for adoption, but only two girls.

Wilmington, May 25 (CP)— One fatality and several accidents, mostly of minor nature, were recorded today as the result of Delaware Day celebrations in Western Canada, but here in Vancouver, drowned in English Bay when the 14-foot sailboat in which he and two others were sailing capsized. His companions clung to the craft and were rescued.

New Westminster, B.C., May 25 (CP)—Alex. Sclater, employee of the Vancouver golf and country club, suffered a fractured skull when a stilted ball struck him on the forehead.

POLICE SEIZE TORONTO GAMBLING DEN, FILL JAILS WITH 120 MEN

American Ace Captures Title, Second Time in Succession

STERN CHASE

Dr. William Tweddell, English Star is Opposition

St. Annes on Sea, May 25 (AP) —Carried right to the last green, Lawson Little, of San Francisco, finally defeated Dr. William Tweddell of Birmingham one up in the 36-hole final for the amateur golf championship today.

Little thus became the first American ever to capture the British title two years in succession. He was three up on the stylish Birmingham golfer through the first nine holes, but Tweddell gave Little a grand battle on the last 18, pulling even at one time but never able to get into the lead.

GLUT IN WHEAT SEEN BY EXPERTS

Wheat Agreement May be Continued to July 1936

London, May 25 (AP)—The International Wheat Conference in a communique today announced it had "unanimously decided to recommend in its report to the governments consideration of the treaty work of the wheat agreement, through maintenance of the wheat advisory committee, until July 31, 1936."

France, the announcement disclosed, was granted an increase of 13,000,000 bushels in her unlimite export quota to October, 1935.

An increase in the glut of world stocks was forecast, and the conference waged a revival of restriction measures. Argentina was not mentioned in the communique although her stand against continuing forced postponement of export quota discussions.

With the agreement for extension of the wheat pact ready for approval by the 31 signatory nations the conference wound up its short session today.

Khartoum Veteran Lives in Peterborough

Mr. Harris is over 80 years of age but is still hale and hearty, taking a walk about the streets every day.

A despatch from Oscoda, Mich., state James LaPlant who died there at the age of 80 believed himself to be the last of the Canadian Voyageurs who went to General Gordon's relief at Khartum in the British-Egyptian Sudan.

Eden's Argument Averts With Aid of Pierre Laval Italo-Abyssinian Crisis

League Smooths Way to Peace in Africa

TELLING BLOW GIVEN

Mussolini Capitulates Before Pressure of Legion

Geneva, May 25—(AP)—Diplomatic pressure in the League of Nations Council early today averted an impending crisis in East Africa, won from Italy an agreement to arbitrate her long-standing dispute with Ethiopia and left the nations free to settle their troubles under their own treaty.

The capitulation of Premier Mussolini, who previously had said he would not permit arbitration in his 1928 treaty with Emperor Haile Selassie's government, was attributed to the force of argument of Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy Seal, and Pierre Laval, French Foreign Minister.

New troop contingents have sailed frequently from South Italian ports for Africa and it was generally believed 30,000 soldiers will reach their destination before the time limit before the negotiation is reached.

Two Resolutions

The League Council adopted two resolutions designed to smooth the road to peace in Africa, after Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Italy's representative, had carried on long and numerous telephone conversations with Mussolini at Rome.

The resolutions provide for arbitration and, unless the border incidents which caused the trouble and extensive Italian mobilization are ironed out by Aug. 25th the nations of the council will deal anew with the problem. This date is well in advance of the close of the rainy season, which is effectively preventing any military action.

Officials of the League expressed the opinion a telling blow had been struck for peace in Africa.

Mr. Eden said he interpreted the agreement to mean Italy and Ethiopia will delimit the frontier of Italian Somaliland and Ethiopia and that the present difficulties are settled amicably.

The Ethiopian representative said his nation interwerted the agreement to mean Italy was bound from sending additional troops to East Africa and will not employ troops already there for aggression.

Italian government circles at Rome said they regarded the resolutions as following the normal course of events. Officials declined to comment otherwise, except to say the setting of a time limit for the negotiations and recognition of the treaty clauses outlawing recourse to arms fit in with Italian ideas.

NEIGHBOR SAVES WOMAN, FAMILY

Bellevue, Near Ottawa, Scene of Early Morning Rescue

Bellevue, Ont., May 25—(CP)— A woman and two small children were rescued today from their burning home by a neighbor who rushed into the smoke-filled house and carried them outside.

Mrs. Leterva, neighbor, noticed smoke issuing from the two-storey frame dwelling occupied by the family of William Daly. He smashed the front door and carried to safety Mrs. Daly and the children, aged three and Louis, two.

All three were overcome by smoke.

Bellevue is about two miles west of Ottawa.

LONGSHORE STRIKE MAY BE DISCUSSED

Ottawa, May 25—(CP)— The strike or longshoremen at Vancouver is expected to be discussed here early next week with the arrival of T. G. Colonel R. W. Brock, chairman of the Vancouver Harbor Commission, to confer with Minister of Marine Alfred Duranleau and officials of the Marine Department. Work program for the 1935 year also will be under discussion.

SEAGRAM HEADS LIST

Toronto, May 25—(CP)— The black and yellow of the E. F. Seagram stables headed the list of leading owners as the Woodbine spring meet drew to a close today. For the first six days, winnings were, E. F. Seagram, $12,270 (and 50 guineas); J. E. Smallman, $5,705; Erindale Stable, $2,000; Mrs. A. E. Abel, $1,950; Mrs. J. Badame, $1,500 Frank Gilpin $1,250; H. G. Hatch $800.

Oxen Fly High Into Northland

Cobalt, Ont., May 25—And the cow jumped over the moon! Perhaps a fable for readers of fairy tales but, nevertheless, two oxen from this small town, 200 miles west of Quebec city, were seen 2,000 feet in the air. They were out-fishing the cow on their way to work in a new and active industry.

With the almost overnight setup in mining settlements 125 miles northeast of here, on the shore of Chibougamau Lake, actives concluded transportation of wood by dog-sled was inefficient, and bore over they to bring horses or oxen from the outside.

A huge Fairchild freighter at this Canadian Airways base was pressed into service. Securely tied and wrapped in canvas an 800-pound ox was loaded aboard, and freighted north. The next day a second animal, much larger, weighing 1,200 pounds, was similarly sent into the sky lanes.

The pilot reported his unusual passengers were ill-behaved during the flight, but recovered as they reached their destination. Almost immediately, they were drafted into their new occupation, hauling cordwood to the new settlements.

INTENSE SEARCH FOR MISSING BOY

Scion of Wealthy Timber Family Believed Kidnapped

Tacoma, Wash., May 25 (AP)— An intense search for nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, scion of a wealthy timber family, was pressed today, while reports the lad's parents had received a ransom note were neither confirmed nor denied.

Disclosure of the disappearance of the late John Philip Weyerhaeuser, Sr., widely known lumberman, who died here in 1914, was retained since noon yesterday was made late last night by Charles Barnes, assistant manager of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company, after a frantic hunt already had been undertaken by friends and relatives.

The son of John Philip Weyerhaeuser, Jr., vice-president of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company, last reported seen at noon by a schoolboy patrol at Lowell School.

COMPOSER DIES PENNILESS

New York, May 25—James W. Blake the man who wrote the "Sidewalks of New York," died of cancer in St. Vincent's Hospital last night. Blake, 72, died penniless. He never received royalties for the song.

LOSES HIS K. C. AFTER 27 YEARS

North Bay, Ont., May 25 (CP)— Back in 1908 a young lawyer received the honor of being appointed King's Counsel. Delighted, he immediately started using the magic initials.

Today, the former County Judge McMurrich recalled he had never taken out his patent, the fact being brought home by Premier Mitchell Hepburn's inquiry into those who had failed to take out their parchment.

The same year G. H. Ferguson, better known as G. Howard Ferguson, former Ontario Premier and Canadian High Commissioner to London, was made a King's Counsel.

Mother, Daughter, Receive Same Sentences at Trenton

Trenton, May 25—In court on Thursday Mrs. Edna McMurter, 106 Lege street, Trenton, was sentenced to a determinate sentence of two months and a further indeterminate sentence of two years less one day on a charge of disposing of a dead body with intention of concealing the fact that a child was born. Her daughter, Myrtle McMurter, was sentenced to the same period of imprisonment on a charge of failing to obtain medical assistance in child birth. Both pleaded guilty to the charges.

This was the outcome of an investigation by the police of the discovery of a body of a babe in a woods in Sidney township several months ago. Evidence was given to the effect that the child was stillborn.

Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., presided.

Four children of Mrs. McMurter were made wards of the Children's Aid Society and were given into the care of the local superintendent. Mr. T. D. Ruston, who was present. Mr. R. D. Dundas, K.C., prosecuted.

Mrs. McMurter is the mother of eight children.

FOUR BILLS READY FOR ACTION BY DOMINION HOUSE

Strenuous Portion of The Session is Yet to Come

INCREASE PENALTIES

All Four Bills Amend Laws Now on Statute Books

Ottawa, May 26 (CP)—With a grist of bills implementing some recommendations of the price spreads and Mass Buying Commission before them, members of Parliament today marked time and gathered energy for what may prove to be the most strenuous portion of the session. Until Monday they will have opportunity to study four bills introduced in the House of Commons before the adjournment for the Empire Day holiday.

These bills are first instalment of legislative measures designed to carry into effect the Mass Buying report to the extent the Government feels it can be done. All four bills are aimed at present on the statute books.

Standing in the name of Hon. R. B. Hanson, Minister of Trade and Commerce, one of the bills provides for changes in the Weights and Measures Act. A second, sponsored by Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, amends the Livestock and Livestock Products Act. Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, brought in a third amending the Criminal Code. The fourth measure, moved by Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Labor, will, if approved, alter the provisions of the Industrial disputes and Investigations Act.

Increase Penalties

Increased penalties for short-weight offences, new provisions regarding weight standards, and a general tightening up of the Weights and Measures Act are provided in the first bill which amends this law. The Mass Buying Commission heard a great deal of evidence in respect to short weights.

Amendments to the Livestock Act would, among other things, establish grades by calibre and quality of carcass. The effect of this would be to make the packing plant furnish daily reports to the Dominion Livestock Branch of the Agriculture department, as public grades now do.

The bill amending the Criminal Code is directed against false advertising. Clauses of the code are amended by adding a section to provide, which gives to the court jurisdiction to impose a fine against a manufacturer or seller advertising falsely on the ground that he has acted "in good faith." Such plea from the person responsible for the goods the Commission felt was not a good one.

The fourth bill which would amend the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act gives the Minister of Labor authority to initiate investigations into complaints of intimidation or other discriminatory actions by employers or employees.

It is understood that other bills based on the report are in course of preparation.

ANTHONY EDEN MAY TAKE POST HELD BY SIMON

Malcolm MacDonald, Son of Premier May Enter Cabinet

PREMIER TO RETIRE?

New and Younger Blood Likely to Enter British Cabinet Soon

London, May 25 (C.P.: Cable) — Introduction of new and younger blood into the cabinet loomed as a possibility today.

The latest report had it Malcolm MacDonald, son of the Prime Minister, would step into the office of Secretary for the Dominions now held by J. H. Thomas. Anthony Eden was prominently mentioned as a possible successor to Sir John Simon as Foreign Secretary.

An unfavorable report on his eyesight, which had caused him trouble for several years, was believed to have made certain the resignation of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald.

Stanley Baldwin, former Prime Minister, leader of the Conservative party and now Lord President of the Council, was expected to take over Mr. MacDonald's office.

Capt. Anthony Eden, 37 year old Lord Privy Seal, has made a name for himself in the field of foreign affairs by his magnificent work at Geneva and played an important part in consulting Hungary and Yugoslavia last December when they fell out over efforts to place responsibility for the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia at Marseille in October.

More recently he went with Sir John Simon to Berlin and alone to Moscow, Warsaw and Praha, in efforts to devise a collective security scheme for troubled Europe. He played a leading part in the negotiations at Geneva which culminated last night in the agreement of Premier Benito Mussolini to end Italy's defiance of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Malcolm MacDonald Parliamentary Undersecretary for the Dominions since 1931, is only 34. He has travelled widely in various parts of the Empire. At present he is suffering from a stomach ailment but he is expected to make a quick recovery.

There was no indication as to whether other cabinet posts would be found for Winston Churchill or Sir John, if these changes take place, or whether they would no longer remain in the cabinet.

BESSBOROUGH TO INSPECT CADETS

Visits R.M.C. at Kingston For Ceremonial at College

Kingston, Ont., May 25 (CP) — His Excellency the Earl of Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada arrived in Kingston today on official visit to the Royal Military College. He was accompanied by the Countess of Bessborough.

On the morning the Vice-Regal party were received at the College by Brigadier E. W. Mathews, commandant, and officers of the staff, the Governor-General was given an up-parade grounds, was inspected by the Governor General, who commented favourably on their smart appearance. After the ceremonial parade the Governor took the salute, after which the cadets marched past. This was followed by a physical training and gymnastic display at Port Frontenac and also an engineering demonstration.

The mounted sports were scheduled for this afternoon, and Sunday morning his Excellency will take the salute after the church parade to Sir George Cathcart square.

On Sunday afternoon he will formally open the new club house of the Kingston Yacht Club which replaces the building destroyed by fire a year ago.

GIVES UP BUSINESS

Mexico, D. F., May 23—(AP)—The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada announced today in accordance with an official ruling it will shortly surrender its entire business in Mexico to the newly-formed Mexican government insurance company.

The Sun Life has operated in Mexico for 35 years and has issued policies totaling near 40,000,000 pesos ($11,200,000).

RECOGNITION OF COLONY RIGHTS HOPE OF GERMANS

Sir Eric Phipps Interviews German Foreign Minister

QUESTIONS SPEECH

Is Told Germany Does Not Seek Return at Present

London, May 25 (AP)—Germany has informed Great Britain her right to hold colonies must be recognized in some tangible form by the former allies before she will return to the league of Nations, well-informed British quarters said today.

The German attitude toward colonial possessions and mandates was clarified in an interview yesterday in Berlin by Sir Eric Phipps, British ambassador, with Baron Konstantin von Neurath, German foreign minister.

It was officially disclosed here Sir Eric asked to question von Neurath regarding various points raised in Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech.

Von Neurath, it was understood, said Germany's demand for 55 per cent of the strength of the British navy would not be altered if she were granted her former colonies or mandates. The German chief also does not want actual possession of the colonies or mandates at the present time.

Plans for Anglo-American naval conversations in London will begin within ten days, also were believed to have been discussed.

EX-WIFE OF VANDERBILT SUICIDES AT RANCH

Las Vegas, N. M., May 25—Mrs. Emily Whitfield, former wife of William K. Vanderbilt, was found dead in a remote ranch-house near here Friday and last night a coroner's jury had decided she committed suicide.

Mrs. Whitfield, New York woman apparently shot herself with a revolver Thursday midnight, it was revealed this morning in divorce to end her third marriage to Raoul Whitfield, a writer.

Jaws Jammed Together As Car Hits Bridge

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 25 (CP) —Donald Irwin, 17, pleaded guilty today to stealing a car owned by J. Sheppard of Niagara Falls and was sentenced to one year in the Reformatory. Irwin crashed the car into an abutment of the Thorold bridge. His broke several teeth and his jaws jammed together, requiring medical assistance before he was able to open his mouth.

Hen Eats Gold Found After Death

St. Hyacinthe, Que., May 25 — J. A. E. Morin, poultry raiser of Joseph St. Hyacinthe, had had a hen that went around pecking for gold. Morin decapitated the fowl for the table the other day and found in its craw two pieces of yellow metal the size of a bean. He took the find to a goldsmith who assured him it was gold.

City and District News

SATURDAY PUMPAGE LOWEST OF WEEK

The city waterworks department has squelched the myth about the Saturday night bath. Residents of the city it is revealed, are liable to use their weekly shower or plunge at any other day in the week, and not Saturday, proverbially allied to personal scrubbing.

Leafing through the records of pumpage at the city filtration plant this week it is found, that while on any less water is actually pumped on Saturday than on any other day of the week.

Average pumpage during the week day, reaches approximately two and one-half million gallons. Generally on Saturday somewhere in the neighborhood of two million gallons are pumped.

BELLEVILLE FOLK VISIT ROCHESTER

A number from the city and vicinity on the holiday enjoyed a trip to Rochester, N.Y., on one of the ferry steamers sailing out of Oswego. The excursion was well patronized and the sights of the lower city were enjoyable. It was an early hour this morning when the excursionists arrived home tired but pleased with the trip.

POLICE COURT

Three inebriates appeared in the local police court, charged with intoxication, held before Magistrate C. J. Butler, K.C. today, all pleading guilty and receiving the minimum sentence.

Robert Gregson, Toronto navvy, silent, pleaded guilty to his drunk charge and sat down in disgust when he was informed that he would have to serve a ten day sentence in the default of the payment of his fine.

John McMahon, Relief Project No. 36, Trenton, pleaded guilty to a similar charge and intimated he would have to serve the jail sentence or ten days. "If you come back here again it will mean six months" stated Chief Kidd as McMahon left his seat. When a drunk charge was read to Dan Mullins, Tyrendinaga, the accused was asked to have up till the 31st of the month to raise the fine. "I've got a job and can take the money if you'll let me out for a few days," stated Mullins. His request was granted, but he was instructed to be back with his fine on Friday next. The entire court procedure did not take over five minutes.

Police News

Four drunks were picked up by the local police during the week, the majority being old offenders. Activities in granary row, as a result, were level. No serious trouble being reported. The police answered a few minor calls, the disturbances were reported by children igniting fire crackers, no particular damage being reported. Thirty transients were after-noon sleeping quarters over the city hall, seventeen on Thursday and thirteen on Friday.

E. Babcock, Point Anne, complained to the authorities the loss of the radiator cap from his motor car overnight. The article was parked on Front street on Thursday night. Thomas Derbyshire, 135 Yeomans street, reported the loss of his bicycle on Friday. The wheel was left parked on Campbell street, from where it was removed last night.

A slight degree of accident resulted in tender damage only was committed on Friday about 4.15 p.m. last when a Ford coupe overturned on the east curb in his automobile. John Buffington of this city collided with a car parked parallel with him and driven by Miss Dorothy Treble of 141 Avenue road, Toronto. Only two damaged fenders resulted and no personal injuries. The matter settled before the arrival of the police.

SEEN AND HEARD ON WATERFRONT

Reporter Makes Round of River Mouth And Harbor

Rock gardens crowned with verdant foliage peep from the waters of the bay along the waterfront. Weeds have begun to choke the waters of the upper harbor in slimy profusion, and already the effluvia of decomposing matter and dead fish drifts shoreward, a blanket of stench to the nostrils of south ward residents. Gulls and terns constantly patrolling the waterfront rise raucously as they dip for choice morsels of garbage carried down the river by the sluggish current. Boats the flat-bottomed punts which make their annual debut by the score in the bay-last year, solid grey fishing craft and the sleek, mahogany trimmed launches, tug and pull at their mooring posts, their crews along the waterline already covered with a black and greasy film of oil. Turtles bask contentedly on the rocks and rotted logs of former mooring rafts, blinking in the sun, and pigeons from nearby building areas float easily down with a flutter of wings to the water.

Further up men are laboring at the task of sliding new boats out into the water. A hammer clunks dully on wood, the clunk last knocked from under the impainted hull, and the whine of reluctant nails being pulled from the ways boards that covered the windows of the launches during the year mingle with the unmistakable sound of commercial activity. Then the clank of chains and the slap of rigging on the bare masts of a punt moored further out, or the inboard motor coughs explosively, bursts into a chattering roar and then settles down to a steady drumming of sound as a man leans over it, screw-driver in hand, making a final adjustment. Hull out of water a heavy fishing launch undergoes beating a white wake behind ghosts by with another man manipulator of his silently working engine. Forward are slowing the reels of nets as they are hauled ashore, a tanker moves easily in from the bay. Men shout to each other and are thrown and made fast to the heavy mooring anchors and the huge boats grunts up to the water's edge on the wooden bumper rails and make-a-fast to a floating dock, or a scrapes wood. The growls from her iron belly cease and the skipper emerges from the cabin to stand at the wheel-house to see that all is in order.

In the slanting rays of the sun other men fish, placidly, dreamily, flipping their lines up and down with rhythmic motion. Here and there swarming fish strip the baited hooks with unbelievable speed. The bamboo pole wiggles slightly at the tip, the sudden jerk of the hand of the fisherman, awakening from a half reverie of elysian fields, while mightily the fish, a perch with its tail and fins flapping emerges from the water and flops on the concrete. One more for supper, joins others in the wet potato bag which dangles in the water. The garbage dump, tat east a haze of smoke and flame, with the fish hawk wraiths across the rippled water. Far down in the Murray canal swamp Point basks in the sun, and from Point Anne smoke columns towers into the sky, as men seem by clawing dismally at being disturbed by the inquisitive roar and the clanking of gang planks as they are lowered into place.

Afternoon. Clouds drift over the sun and a chilly wind springs from the north. It ripples the calm and paws of waves across the surface of the shining — as the sun sets the sails of a scudding sail boat manned by a gang of youthful skippers. The man with the fish in the bay has left. Deliberately he cleans his hook and rises from the water's edge up of the spring pole.

"I'll be back tonight," he promises.

Tonight lights will flicker like fireflies along the waterfront. The night will be warmer; the fish will be biting more readily. All's well along the waterfront.

Langley's RETEX CLEANERS

Lawrence of Arabia

The "uncrowned king of three nations," the leader of desert tribes which had been disorganized for centuries! While Lawrence roved the seas like a pirate, Lawrence ruled as a mysterious, spectacular potentate in Arabia. . . . Lawrence adventurer, poet, mystic, spy, and military genius, Lawrence, at twenty-six, rejected by the British Army as physically unfit, was not air tight compartments and the children to be adopted only by people in that locality.

There is a vast spread in the matter of the number available for adoption in the different sections of the province. While one Children's Aid reports 123 children available, another has only three. Although the children are not shifted from one to another of the three institutions for the number or adjust the supply to requests for adoption, every effort is made to secure the exchange of information through the department to meet the desires of the applicants and to find the children happy homes.

Radiating from the quintuplets celebration of their five birthday in Ontario, the "Adopt a Baby" enthusiasm has spread down to the Maritimes.

Hon. David Croll, Minister of Public Welfare, received a letter today from the New Brunswick Protestant Orphans Home, explaining that the Ontario "Adopt a Baby Week" has led to a similar movement in New Brunswick. Representatives from the Catholic Orphanages, the Protestant Orphanage and the Children's Aid are having a joint interview with the Premier of New Brunswick on plans for the week. The letter explains and asks Mr. Croll to forward literature and other information on the matter.

Local Baptists Attend Union

Misses Gertrude Fisher, Mabel Peck and Edith Looker of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church of this city who attended the sessions of the Ontario-Quebec Inter-Provincial B. Y. P. U. Convention now being held in London, Ont., report that the new $10,000 budget as presented by Rev. Harold E. Ridge of Toronto, Inter-Provincial President was approved.

George Harris of Toronto, Inter-Provincial Secretary, presented his report. It showed a membership in 1934-35 of 19,731 in the 290 unions, and 63 junior unions with 2,790 members. The total amount raised by these unions was $12,776.35, of which $2,380.23 was for missions. During the year 3,333 members were also church members; 438 accepted Christ and 478 entered the church by baptism.

The Belleville delegates report that though there is a $2,000 increase in the budget for this year, the Union is looking for a very substantial both financial and in Christian work.

FORMER STIRLING GIRL IS DIRECTOR OF EDUCATION

Word Received by Grandparents in Madoc

Madoc—Mr. and Mrs. Adam Corrigal of this village, received word that their grand-daughter, Miss Gertie Corrigal, B.A., of Dodsland Sask., has been made Director of Education for the Province of Saskatchewan. Miss Corrigal is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Corrigal (nee Gertie Knox). For a number of years she attended Public School in Stirling, Ontario, moving out west where she continued her education by attending the University of Saskatoon from which she graduated at the age of eighteen as a Bachelor of Arts. She has been teaching High School for three years and at the age of 24 has received a responsible position in the Department of Education for the province.

On Monday evening the Young People's Society held their "last meeting for the term. The president, Miss McDermid presided, after the general business the meeting took the form of a musical evening. Miss Aileen Kelly gave an interesting talk on the life of Beethoven and how he came to write the "Moonlight Sonata," which was played as a piano solo by Miss Edna Salisbury. Miss Gertie gave a paper on Madame Alboni, also loving a piano solo by Miss Jean Hicks and six girls sang a chorus.

Miss McDermid, in a short address, spoke of the Rev. C. E. and Mrs. Rivers' work among the young people of the church and said they are to leave in the near future for their home at Bolton, asked them to accept two Imperial bound books. Rev. and Mrs. Rivers spoke briefly, and a fine social time of dainty lunch was served.

On May 23rd, Mr. George Rollins, one of Madoc's oldest residents celebrated his 83rd birthday. When young Mr. Rollins left home he left the tinsmith trade with the late Jack Dale and at first went into the hardware business. His many friends wish for his good health and continued success.

Mr. Eric Ruttle, visited his mother, Mrs. W. Cross on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Oakley and Rev. Wayne Want of Woodland, Cahill, are spending a few days with Mrs. Oakley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McMullen.

Mrs. Frank Dafoe, Mrs. W. A. Sinnier and Mrs. John McCaffrey motored to Picton on Wednesday to attend W.C.T.U. Convention being held there in the Methodist on Thursday of this week.

Miss Helen Dafoe, who has spent the past year in England and Scotland returned home on Tuesday.

On Tuesday evening the Tuxis Boys of Trinity Anglican Church under the leadership of their Sunday School teachers, Messrs. John Bristol and Jack Kincaid held a social evening at the home of Mrs. A. Kincaid. The evening was spent in contests, games and music and at the close a lunch was served by the mothers of the boys. The proceeds went for the work of the local Tuxis group.

Fire Dance Seen By Woman Explorer

New York, May 25—Rosita Forbes, 36-year-old explorer of London and Uruguay, is enjoying a brief spell of civilization here after nine days and eight nights of forging through the Dutch Guiana jungle to see the legendary fire dance performed by naked savages in the light of a full moon.

The exultant, lovely woman told how she entered the jungle through the backdoor—the route of the few convicts who escape Devil's Island. She was accompanied on the expedition by five half-castes and a negro guide.

"The forest was like a wall," she said. "It was so dark we couldn't see anything but 100 tall-as-men, all naked, dancing in a huge fire with flames up to their necks. When the flames died down they ate the coals, or pressed them to tender parts of their bodies."

Miss Forbes said a young priestess stood beside the fire and that the dancers appeared to get the power to withstand heat from their faith in her.

'ADOPT-A-BABY' WEEK CAMPAIGN PROCEEDS APACE

Matching Requests of Prospective Adoptive Parents Difficult

Inspector T. D. Ruston stated today that the lists for adoption a number of children, five of whom are a two months old available supply of variegated children scattered in 34 institutions over Ontario is one of the problems becoming more complicated with the daily increasing demands for babies and applications pouring into the Department of Public Welfare in response to "Adopt a Baby Week."

The red-head, snub-nose, freckled face, so beloved by a couple in the eastern townships may be just the lad who is cooling in the Rainy River shelter longing for adoption. If the desired child of prospective adoptive parents in Peterboro, say, is not among the five children in the shelter at Cobourg—why, there is a shelter in Toronto with the boys and girls to choose from.

Every effort of the Children's Aid Branch at the Parliament Buildings is being bent to reconcile the desire expressed in the stream of letters with the children available for adoption, no matter how at variance the geographical location of the adoptive parents and the child may be.

"We could almost use a clearing house to meet the requests for children for adoption in response to the appeal," said Hon. David Croll yesterday. "But lacking that, the department looks on the setting as the clearing house. When we get requests for children of a particular type and appearance, we will canvass the whole field of shelters to find the child most closely approximating it. When local Children's Aid Societies cannot meet the desire and they communicate with us we will circularize all the shelters and institutions for the "the right parents." In other words, the Children's Shelters are not air tight compartments and the children to be adopted only by people in that locality.

There is a vast spread in the number of children available for adoption in the different sections of the province. While one Children's Aid reports 123 children available, another has only three. Although the children are not shifted from one to another of the three institutions for the number or adjust the supply to requests for adoption, every effort is made to secure the exchange of information through the department to meet the desires of the applicants and to find the children happy homes.

Commencement Exercises At Tweed High School

Epidemic of Measles Reduces Attendance at Schools

Tweed, May 25.—Owing to the epidemic of measles which has swept over Tweed and vicinity, the attendance at the annual commencement exercises on Monday evening was the smallest in years. At 8.30 p.m. the meeting was called to order by Mr. R. W. Anderson, principal of the High School board, who regretted the small attendance which under the circumstances was only to be expected. He expressed the appreciation of the board to the teachers for the excellent results obtained by the school in the examinations of June, 1934, and stated that enquiries had come from other places from prospective students.

The following excellent program was given.

Piano solo, "Two Larks", Alice Nicholson. Chairman's address, R. W. Jones. Vocal solo, "Drink To Me Only", Cora Smith. Address, Very Rev. J. P. O'Sullivan. Piano solo, "Sixth Hungarian Rhapsody" (Liszt) Miss Laurence Smith. Address, Madden, Rev. W. G Hope Swayne. Vocal solo, "Home, Sweet Home", by Dorothy Sager, A.T.C.M. Presentation of medals and prizes: Upper school medals, Phyllis Bestrick presented by T. N. Beatty. Fourth Form Medal, Hilliard Varty, presented by James Ryan. Third Form Medal, Dorothy Quinn, presented by T. N. Beatty in the absence of Mrs. T. Ketcheson. First Second Form Scholarship, David Price, presented by B. Rollins. Second Second Form Scholarship, Gertrude Mosher, presented by Paul Rashotte. First First Form Scholarship, Delma Pipe, presented by W. S. Gordon. Second First Form Scholarship, Jean Sills, presented by D. B. Morrison. Address, Mrs. R. Harrison. Presentation of W. E. Tummon character and conduct prizes, Arthur Rose (boys), Hilliard Varty, presented by S. R. Curry in the absence of W. E. Tummon, M.P. Presentation of staff prizes in Upper School subjects: English, Hilliard Varty; History, Marion Nicholson; Mathematics, Marion Nicholson; Biology, Margaret Collins; Latin, Phyllis Bestrick; French, Marion Nicholson. Vocal solo, Miss E. Simmons, Rev. R. R. Nicholson. Piano solo, "On Wings of Song" (Mendelssohn), Ruth Connor. "God Save the King".

In his splendid address Very Rev. J. P. O'Sullivan offered his congratulations to the prize winners and to the staff for their excellent work. He urged those who had not been successful not to be discouraged but to put forth a greater effort. Many men who have been successful in business and professional careers have not won prizes in school. He asked on behalf of the teachers for the co-operation of the parents without which little can be accomplished. To the students themselves he said there is a time for play and recreation and activity. Parents do not need to be unduly harsh or severe with their children but must exercise discretion if they are to achieve even a fair measure of success in life.

Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne offered some very timely advice to the students. They must learn the real lesson which lies behind the study of the various school subjects if they are to successfully fill a place in life. It is not the high marks on examinations at school that are paramount but how they have learned to apply the knowledge practically to the problems that confront them. The mind is being trained to attack problems and solve them. The boys and girls of Canada are particularly favoured in comparison with those of many other countries who because of the type of educational training which they receive or fail to receive, are ready to follow any leader blindly. Canadian boys and girls enjoy the opportunity of obtaining the education which will enable them to map out for themselves a successful course which they may follow.

Mr. D. H. Morrison, Librarian of Tweed Public Library chose "Books" as the theme of his address. He advised his hearers to be careful in their choice of books, to choose them as one would choose his friends. His observation also taking over the duties of Librarian show that the reading public of Tweed is interested mainly in the reading of fiction, fully 90 per cent being books of that type, a condition which does not reflect creditably upon the local readers. He stated that he was not favorably impressed with the type of American literature that is being published today. In concluding the speaker stated that many successful men give the credit for their success to the reading of good books.

Miss Hazel Grindell, B.A., in presenting the staff prizes to Upper School subjects, stated that a student might excel in one subject and not in others and should receive some recognition of the fact. For this reason the staff had introduced this set of prizes.

Rev. R. R. Nicholson gave an excellent address. He commended the prize winners who had achieved success by their industry and offered to other students a laudable example of what may be accomplished by sustained effort. Teaching has a three-fold purpose: to communicate knowledge, to stimulate activity and to develop character. Getting ready for real life is most important and the most important element in this preparation is a good education. More time spent in careful preparation would save many a bright young man from a humiliating failure. Industry, patience and perseverance are all essential to the obtaining of a successful education.

After the program was concluded interested parents and friends examined the pupils' work in art, geography and agriculture.

The staff of Tweed High School consists of Messrs. T. E. Moffat, B.A., Thomas Calnan, B.A., Misses H. Grindell, B.A. and E. Stuart, B.A. They are to be congratulated on the success of their annual exercises.

An epidemic of measles has decimated the ranks of Tweed High School pupils, there being 75 out of a total of 200 high school boys and girls absent on Wednesday. In the first form the class of the Consolidated school has been present on only seven of twenty-seven. Other classes suffered to a lesser degree.

Miss A. M. Rayburn received word on Sat. Sid Rayburn, a student at Queen's University and Miss Marion Nicholson of Queen's University are at home for the holidays.

Tweed High School was represented at the athletic meet held at Trenton on Saturday by Ronald Sutton, Lloyd Ketcheson, Leslie Hall, Tummon, Harold Mersw, Keith Cottle, Ina Courtney, Ana Thompson, Marion Tummon, Helen Jones, Vera Drinkwater and Corrine McDonough. They were accompanied by some of members of the staff. And Thompson was successful in placing first in the softball throw and her best throw was 100 yards. She was forced to withdraw from the final because of illness, Ronald Sayers placed first in his heat in the 100 yards and 220 yards but also withdrew from the finals because of exhaustion.

LEAD ALL—INTENSE SEARCH

Tacoma, Wash., May 25 (AP)—Presence of W. E. Dowling, United States Department of Justice agent from Seattle, here today lent credence to a persistent report that missing 18-year-old George Weyerhaeuser of the immensely wealthy timber family was kidnaped yesterday noon and that his parents have received a ransom note demanding $200,000.

OF ALL THE NERVE!

This bunch of mammouth grapes, part of the display of luscious fruit at the London office of Knox's "Fruit Salt" looked so realistic to this messenger boy that he hesitated climbing a step ladder to sample them.

POLICE SEARCH MISSING GIRL

When Kathleen Holloway, 22 East Moira St., failed to return home last night many anxious hours were spent by the 15-year-old's parents. According to playmates, Kathleen was in the company of a number of other boys and girls at her own home when the children dispersed. Kathleen promised to accompany one of the boys who volunteered to escort her home. Last seen by her chums Kathleen was walking towards the city limits on North Front St. Later the police were notified and despite the fact, that surrounding territory was thoroughly searched, no sign or trace of the girl was forthcoming. Local and Provincial police forces were both pressed into service, but no signs of the whereabouts of the girl were reported at an early hour today.

Cornier Farads Tells'

Vancouver, May 25—Vancouver's civic authorities, responsible for the past six weeks with "nuisance" parades of relief camp strikers, have turned the tables on the recalcitrants. They staged a parade of their own, while the relievers remained inactive.

Dynamic Mayor G. G. McGeer led the procession of 350 uniformed police, augmented by seven members of the Royal Canadian Mounted force, some of them with their wives. Then a Provincial Columbia Police and representatives of the city police force.

10,000 THRONG WELLINGTON FETE

Legion Program on Victoria Day is Big Success

Trenton, May 25 (Special)—Between eight and ten thousand people journeyed to Wellington yesterday to attend what, apparently by the Wellington branch of the Canadian Legion, will be the maiden program was carried out without mishap and over five hundred prizes awarded to lucky ticket holders. Before the drawing a fine troupe of high class wonderful artists gave a wonderful show to the packed house.

The proceeds of the day will be used in establishing a pilgrimage fund of the Post. It is their intention to send a comrade to the unveiling of the Canadian Memorial at Vimy Ridge. Graves of fallen comrades of the district will also be visited and data gathered for the widows and mothers of these heroes.

The feature attraction was the drawing for two new automobiles. President I. L. Bird of the Wellington Branch was the chairman for the event. A large flag-draped drum, that contained thousands of stubs, was mixed over and over before the president called a lucky ticket number 160, the winning ticket 3729. Ten radios were the next prizes awarded, the lucky persons to win were Mrs. Spencer, 463 Keele St., Toronto; Sylvia Richmond, Rathbun; R. Vandervoort, Fairclair Theatre, Toronto; Ross Watson, Trenton; Mr. Le Couter, Provincanc Arms Hotel, Toronto; Angus Murphy, Ada Sask.; Rose Doucett, Little Brook Station, Port Hope; Mrs. Magee, Canvon, B.C.; Florence Robinson, Hartford, Ont.; and Jim Hutton, Trenton.

Three door prizes of a radio each were won by Beverly Braun of Bloomfield; Julia Rowe of Carrying Place and Mrs. Pratt, Wellington.

First hundred consolation prizes of five dollars each were drawn next. Miss Juby was assisted in the drawing of these prizes by Miss Phillips Archibald, also of Belleville. Five hundred consolation gifts and the lucky ones were posted on a large board on the stage in letters "Canadian Legion Post 160," and the armed soldiers in uniform stood guard over the unlucky ones. One hour o'clock in the afternoon when the prizes were posted. Inspector Constable John Kelly and Traffic Officer Sam Evins assisted the comrades in calling the long list of consolation winners.

A great credit is due the small branch of the Legion at Wellington who have sponsored several large programs without loss. The officers of the branch are: President, Comrade I. L. Bird; Treasurer, Comrade D. S. Ainsworth; Secretary, Comrade C. Birmingham. The committees composed Comrades William Steen, Alfred Ogilvy, W. E. Davern, E. Morris, Leo Vandusen and C. J. Pierson.

THIRD AMELIASBURG

3rd Amelisburg—Miss Winnifred Blair was dinner hour guest of Miss Mary Tyler on Sunday.

Miss Marion Adams and Mr. Laird were callers at Mrs. E. Humphrey's on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Jennie Clarke of Gananoque, is spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cleave.

Mrs. John Benson and Mrs. M. Benson spent a few days this week with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Longwell, Demorestville.

The many friends of Mrs. W. Wilkinson were very sorry to hear of her recent misfortune when she fell and broke her arm. All wish her a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cleave and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Wells of Bloomfield spent Wednesday evening last with Mrs. George Ward.

ADOPTIONS

"Adopt-a-Baby" Week has been seized upon as a means of helping a social problem by drawing attention to the public service rendered the Dionne quintuplets as their first birthday draws near.

Premier Hepburn has played a prominent part in the observance as he and Mrs. Hepburn have adopted a baby boy and will adopt a little girl.

Reports from various parts of the province indicate that the appeal will not fall on deaf ears.

The Children's Aid Society with centre at Belleville reports that three adoptions have been undertaken and that inquiries in the case of other children have been made.

Married couples without children or those with children who would like to adopt a child have an opportunity now, in accepting the challenge they will be performing a duty of vast importance for whatever may be said for welfare homes they naturally cannot quite fill the place of the family.

Officers and officials of the branch societies have done noble work but even more effective work can be done in the individual homes. Care is taken that the environment will be of the best influence in the life of the child. Who can tell what it may not be accomplished by these tender babes or children of today when they have the full advantage of family life?

CONSCRIPTED WOMEN

With the maedchens and frauleins conscripted in Germany in the event of war, and with the suggestion of a similar Ontario churchman to conscript every man from forty years onward if war's alarms should sound, a new warfare would take on a unique aspect. But doubtless the Hitler measure does not intend their going into the trenches with rifles. Yet women have fought in the wars before.

So dread was the women's battalion in the ancient days of Greece that the name Amazon lives in literature, and in the press and ordinary talk of today.

Joan of Arc became the greatest woman figure of the Middle Ages for her unique personality and for the saving of France from the English. Her amazing has been her appeal to the people of all ages and races that she is the theme of countless stories. She treads the stage even in the works of so modern a mind and so great an enemy of war as George Bernard Shaw. The Roman Catholic Church has examined the testimony in her case and she is now among the canonized saints, not for her warfare, of course, but for her possession of spiritual qualifications.

Man has somehow always allowed himself to think he is the only person possessing the qualifications for a soldier. This scarcely will stand the light of fact in the light of the leadership of Joan of Arc and Elizabeth Tudor, or the soldierly spirit of numbers of women who have served in war, either in women's battalions or as in wars many years ago in disguise.

But Joan of Arc is the greatest of them even the Amazons want war, for they know its tragedies. Joan of Arc heard "voices" calling her to save France. And she did though she lost her own life through treachery. There was nothing of war for war's sake in her make-up.

Great soldiers as women have proven, it is undeniably true that if they were allowed direction of war, it would very soon disappear from off this earth.

AN OUTSTANDING WOMAN

Jane Addams, one of the outstanding women of the age, has passed after a career of activity which rivals that of those who have wrought great achievements for humanity. She was a social worker and had by no means a pacific life as she was naturally the subject of bitter attack. John Burns called her the first American saint, but while she made many friends she made many bitter foes.

Whatever one's attitude towards the viewpoints she took, she was admired for her brilliant qualities as a fighter and reformer. She knew anarchists, socialists, communists, reformers and standpatters and every shade of social and religious view. A writer in the London Advertiser says: "she was the friend of burglars, thieves, fallen women and pickpockets. Incorrigible wayward girls, failures almost past redemption, knew her and her sympathy and her tenderness stirred many to new strivings for better things."

In Hull Howe, Chicago, she set up a settlement house devoted to the work for the poor and down-trodden.

She was in 1931 awarded the Nobel prize for Peace efforts.

Many do not agree and some do not yet agree with all she advocated but all do admit that she has been one of the most influential women in the modern world, and that she was prompted by humanitarian motives in all her efforts.

A SONG AT TWILIGHT

At close of day when shadows long
Rest darkly o'er the greening earth,
Is heard an oft-repeated song,
That tells of love and joy and mirth,
And flitting fast from tree to tree
Is seen a vision of delight,
How beautiful, and wild and free
The oriole in plumage bright!

The picture I shall not forget,
The greening earth in twilight glow,
The young, unfolding leaves, the red sunset
The lake where soft the waters flow,
And then the flash of golden wing
Across the twilight greening dim,
The glamor of a long-lost Spring
Returns with his glad evening hymn!

ELEPHANTS POSSESS INTELLIGENCE

almost uncanny, according to Courtney Riley Cooper, and other students of the great pachyderms. They can be trained to do many things, but occasionally they rebel and when they do it is generally just too bad for somebody. Herd of elephants from Al. G. Barnes Circus were being put through some moving picture stunts in California when the leader became frightened and angry and the rest followed suit. Charging madly through the movie jungle the herd leader caught the trainer and infuriated by the shouting, changed with a frenzy of wrecking everything at all movable in sight. And when an elephant starts to wreck things he sure does a masterful job. William Powers' famous herd of performing elephants, familiar to Belleville old-timers, are still going strong overseas, although they must have reached a sedate old age. This same herd of elephants, originally with the Walter L. Main Circus, of which William Powers was treasurer, formed the headline attraction at the famous old Hippodrome show place in New York City for a number of years. Old timers of Manhattan and visitors from the "sticks" will remember the famous trick waterlank in the Hippodrome into which elephants, horses and humans marched and disappeared from sight, not to reappear before the audience, until the next performance—a trick tank with an exit at the bottom cleverly operated as to be invisible to the audience.

"COME UP AND SEE ME SOME TIME" Mae West's classic invitation is not intended as a personal one, the movie actor who claims that Mae married him in the dim and distant long ago—not dim to him but comparatively distant, while Mae says it was so dim and distant that it never happened at all. However, the man who claims to have been the husband of Mae West, has entered a lawsuit to determine his status in the matter. All of which raises the disturbing phantom possibility, if Mae married one and discarded him, perhaps she married more and probably many. Surely Mae hasn't been deceiving us with that coy young girl attitude as expressed best in the scene where she made a definite date with the young missionary—and sure "Did Him Wrong."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT claims to be a farmer—so does Premier Mitch. Hepburn—President Roosevelt has a thousand-acre farm to back up his claim. Premier Hepburn has a model farm, too. President Roosevelt's favorite cow is a Daisy, a real Jersey Lily. Daisy is snobbish, as becomes the favorite of a President, and it is said refuses to moo at any one lower than a Cabinet member—and Daisy is apt to exercise her veto power when asked to give milk for a White House milk punch and poker party.

The livermen reaped a harvest yesterday. Everybody who had the money seemed to be driving.

A Council of the Knights of Columbus was instituted in this city yesterday. Between 200 and 300 members of the society from Peterborough, Lindsay and other points were present to assist in the event. At 9.30 a.m. the local members and visitors assembled at the opera house where High Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Hanley of this city. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Father O'Brien of Peterboro, who is a prominent member of the Knights. In his remarks he referred to the order and its aims and objects. He admonished those who were about to become members to live up to its teachings, which would assist them in becoming better citizens in every respect. After the service the company repaired to the Oddfellows' Hall where the first degree was exemplified and administered to about eighty. In the afternoon the second and third degrees were put on and about 100 candidates were instructed. The local Council will not elect its officials until the next regular meeting which will be held shortly. In the evening the visitors were entertained at a banquet in the Oddfellows' Hall, the catering being done in a very satisfactory manner by Mr. E. F. Dickens.

LAST VOYAGEUR DIES AT AGE 80

LaPlant One of Men Who Went to Relief of Gordon

Oscoda, Mich., May 25 (AP) — James La Plant, who believed himself to be the last of the Canadian voyageurs who went to the relief of General Charles Gordon in the siege of Khartum in 1884, is dead. He was 80 years old.

La Plant, then living in Ontario, volunteered when Viscount Wolseley organized a force to rescue General Gordon's dwindling army, besieged by revolting Mahdists at Khartum, in the British Egyptian Sudan.

The assistance of the Canadian voyageurs was sought particularly because of their skill in navigating the type of boats that would be used on the River Nile.

Khartum fell just before the relief expedition arrived and the British garrison, including General Gordon, were killed.

La Plant lived near Oven Sound Ontario.

EXHIBITION STUNT HAS FATAL ENDING

Man Fails From Top of Pole To Ground 80 Feet Below

Owen Sound, Ont., May 25 (CP)—John Voloine, Toronto, suffered fatal injuries when he crashed from a 60 foot pole while attempting an exhibition stunt at Chesley's Victoria Day celebration.

The show in which Voloine participated was being held in front of the grandstand and his special act consisted of climbing to the top of the 60 foot pole, hang by his teeth from a wheel which ran several hundred feet down a wire to the ground while a large clock he wore was ignited and flamed. Investigation showed when Voloine put his weight on the flaming contraption, it broke from the wheel and he was dropped to the ground 60 feet below.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A GARDEN?

Plenty of Water is Need Of These Annual Plants

Pansies and Violas are two Garden favorites which require a continuous supply of moisture.

Some of the finest annuals commonly grown do not do their full duty because they don't get enough to drink. In other words, they do not get the required amount of moisture to give their best results. Some annuals are much more susceptible to lack of liberal moisture than others. At the top of the list might be placed the sweet pea.

You can't have good sweet peas without giving them cool, moist growing quarters. At the same time they must not be water-logged. All the annuals which like to have their roots damp dislike to have them really wet. Asters require a liberal supply of moisture and will not give the fine huge blooms of which they are capable if they are allowed to dry out and turn sprouty. The Coliness hybrid dahlias are now unusually grown as annuals and they are as brilliant as the zinnias but they must have plenty of water.

The best annuals are those like demand liberal moisture although this is a plant that will stand dry quarters. While they will live, the blooms will not be more than half the size it may be made to attain with good moisture conditions.

Every one with any experience in growing pansies knows that if they are going to be a success with them that moisture is the chief requirements and the warmer it gets the more regularly must the pansies be supplied with water.

The finest stock is another plant that is rather insistent on getting its drinks regularly. Give it good lime, soil and water and it will be one of the most satisfactory plants in the garden. But lime it must have to flourish.

WIDEN HIGHWAY PICTON-GLENORA

Picturesque County Drive Undergoes Number of Improvements

Picton, May 23.—Miss Blanche Van Geesen is seriously ill with pneumonia in Prince Edward County hospital. Her sister, Mrs. Peter Bird of Ontario came to Picton to be with her.

Mr. Stanley May of Belleville spent the week-end with his uncle, Mr. Stan May of Union Vale.

The five miles of scenic highway from Picton to Glenora has been greatly widened and newly fenced, and is now perhaps the most picturesque drive in the county, and is proving very popular with holiday motorists. A wonderful view of the Bay of Quinte is seen all along the drive which in places winds through wooded country and past interesting cottages near the ferry dock. Local men have been employed all winter widening and fencing this highway.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Kennedy of Detroit were guests on Tuesday of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley May.

Alice Sloman, eleven year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Sloman of Glenora, who had been a patient in P.E.C. hospital for the past few weeks was taken to the Belleville hospital on Saturday for X-ray and is now making progress towards recovery.

Picton has been suffering from a plague of mosquitoes caused, it is thought, from the burning of the marsh when the insects were probably driven out of their winter quarters.

On Wednesday night the Boy Scouts held a meeting at the Mission Church when plans were made for a long hike on Friday morning, May 24. Mrs. Ball, R.N., treated the boys to sandwiches and cake at the close of the meeting.

The staff of the Belleville C.D.S. were hosts at a very enjoyable party at Quinte Inn on Wednesday evening. The staff of Napanee and Picton C. D. S. stores were their guests.

A very large gathering, representative of people in every walk of life in Picton, gathered at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Thursday afternoon for the funeral service of the late Frank Minaker. Rev. S. M. Scott conducted the service and he spoke of the useful life and broad sympathies of the deceased. The funeral was under Masonic auspices, and was attended by a large number of Masons. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. Miss Frances Buchanan of Toronto, Mrs. Mitchell of Winnipeg, Mrs. Bogart of Napanee and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Minaker of Adolphustown were among those from out of town present at the funeral. Interment was made in the family plot at Glenwood.

BUSINESS OF TO-DAY NEEDS MODERN WAYS

Be On Constant Watch For New Ideas

(By Louis E. Isaac, M.D., Ph.D.)
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The progressive business man is not the one who shuts himself up considers himself all-sufficient. Therefore, keep an open mind if you would achieve results above the average. Struggle against any unnatural unwillingness to receive useful information about your business from your subordinates.

The fact that a man's ego rarely admires and trusts other people completely and thoroughly supplies an additional obstacle to open-mindedness. This distrust makes him resistant to what others have to say. More than that, by barring his mind to others, he checks the easy outward flow of his own ideas and abilities.

Keep that door open to your humblest employee. Keep your mind open to his suggestions. Nowadays the head of a business must serve the people, and, no matter at what he may be skilled, he understand how the people are thinking, he must be ready to feel what they want.

It is your task to adapt yourself and your business to the change and growth of public opinion in every field of activity in which such changing opinion may affect your business, and the public you serve.

Regard yourself as the representative of your customers bound by obligations to make your business and your product meet their convenience, tastes, and demands.

To do this, keep up with local developments. Identify yourself with civic trade bodies and the social life of your community. Acquire yourself in the public will end by having you high and dry.

Captains of industry today use their knowledge of human nature and current events to make their advertising attractive and attractive. No business man who wants to be up-to-date and progressive should ever feel that he is above learning from books or from the experience of other men.

Success in living and working is, after all, nothing but the acquisition of knowledges and the energetic application of knowledge.

Keep up with the literature and the best trade journals of your particular line; make it a rule to associate as much as possible with other successful men.

By keeping up with modern business and developments, a feeling of self-confidence is engendered which widens your field of vision, making you more and more a spot new opportunities and feasible plans for their realization before the foresight.

It is in this way that leadership is achieved.

DR. BISCH'S DAILY TIP: HINT Prepare to do not get down in getting water supply from community reservoir, which are filtering plants and other means of removing disease-producing substances, and better that the water before drinking. Chilling the water does not destroy any dangerous germs, nor does it mean that water that is kept in free from disease-producing germs.

Legal Steps to Child Adoption Are Defined by Children's Aid

Adoption Found So Successful More Have Followed

Married couples to whom the idea of adoption never occurred until the approaching first birthday of the completed home made the occasion to focus public attention on the plight of a thousand parentless children, are responding now in hundreds to Hon. David Croll's "Adopt a Baby Week."

To many thinking of the step, for the first time a host of questions arise such as the procedure to be followed, the qualifications expected of the adoptive parents and the results from the point of view of success and happiness of the policy of adoptions.

The first step in the procedure of adoption, it is pointed out by the Department of Welfare, is to call or write to the local Children's Aid Society, where an application form will be provided. After certain confidential inquiries as to the ability of the adoptive parents to care for the child, their mental and physical health and character, they will be shown all the available data regarding the children they wish to adopt. This information includes the reports of child specialists, psychologists and at the end of that "infants' background of heredity as is available.

The entire purpose of these inquiries, which are strictly confidential, is to have the adoption as happy and suitable as possible both from the point of view of the adoptive parents and the child. The success of these precautions is shown by the hundreds of letters of satisfaction from adoptive parents on the files of the Children's Aid Branch as compared to the extremely rare instances where once an adoption has been made it has proved a failure and the child repurchased as a ward of the society.

"Would not part with little Bonald for any money."

"His Daddy's worshipping him."

"My husband and I have long since forgotten that we were not foster children. We are very fortunate in having two such splendid children."

Quotations such as these are to be found in the memories of sheet after sheet of case histories of adoptions in the files of the Children's Aid Branch and are eloquent testimony as to the marked success which attends the vast majority of adoptions.

Further evidence of the success of adoptions is large number of couples who have found their first experience so happy that they have adopted two and even three children.

OBSERVE C. S. S. ANNIVERSARY

Rev. Bert Howard is The Special Preacher at Service

Northport Sunday School held a very successful anniversary on Sunday, May 19th. Services were conducted at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m. The Rev. Bert Howard, Principal of Albert College, Belleville, was the special speaker for the day. Mr. Howard centered his remarks on the text "Life is not our own, we are bought with a price." This was a challenge to the young folk not to waste or abuse his or her life, but to mould it into a life like God would have you be.

Special music was supplied by the children of the Sunday School in the morning. Miss M. Pickard of Bannerville contributed a very pleasing solo. These messages in song were a large contribution to our service. Miss Winnifred Robinson presided at the piano.

Rev. Howard brought another inspiring message in the evening taking for his text Romans 12:1 verse. "I beseech you therefore brethren by the mercies of God that you present your bodies a living sacrifice holy, acceptable unto God which is your reasonable service." Mr. Howard gave his audience much food for thought and his message to us will not soon be forgotten.

The choir under the able leadership of Mrs. W. G. Crothers rendered two very fine anthems. C. H. Ferguson took the lead part in their own anthem. Miss Donna Barker rendered a very pleasing solo "Hour of Sharing" during the evening service.

While in the village Rev. Bert Howard was the guest of Rev. C. H. Ferguson and Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson.

Organist Trends Club

A number of trends enthusiasts met in the W. A. Hall on Thursday evening at the close of the regular Y.P.S. meeting and organized a trends club to be known as "Trends Club." A number of rules and regulations were drawn up and the fee was set at 10c a month for the season. The officers elected as follows:

President—Miss Trends Wallbridge.
Vice President—Miss Winnifred Robinson.

Secretary—Mr. Geo. Carlisle.

A number of young people had a very enjoyable night to get the court in readiness.

WILL ENTERTAIN COMMUNITY CLUB

Belleville Chamber of Commerce And Rotary Will Be Hosts

Mr. W. A. Parker, a past president of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, now President of the Rotary Club of Belleville and District was a guest at the meeting of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at their regular weekly meeting on Thursday. Mr. Parker informed the members that plans were being satisfactorily put into execution for bringing to the attention of tourists the many attractive features of the Bay of Quinte District, and he felt confident that some benefit would result from the efforts of the work of the association.

On the evening of Wednesday, May 30th, the meeting of the Stirling Community Club and the Tweed Community Club will pay a return visit to the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and the Bellerilld Rotary Club and will be entertained by these organizations at a dinner which will be served in the Christ Church Parish Hall. It is expected that a large number will be present from these two places and, no doubt, a large representation of the Rotary Club and the Chamber of Commerce will attend the dinner to be held in honour of their visitors. The evening promises to be entertaining and a very good programme has been secured in the person of Dr. Edmund T. Guest, who occupies the honorable position of chairman of the Toronto School Board.

Considerable routine business was transacted at the meeting at which the following were present: President, J. B. Boyce, W. H. Morton, H. W. Adams, W. G. Springer, Leo B. Riggs, H. R. Fairfield, E. P. Bernhardt, and the secretary-manager J. O. Herity.

KING IS CAPTAIN TO THIS OLD TAR

Aged Ex-Sailor in Chat Tells George V He Knew Mum, Dad

Eastbourne, May 25.—King George heard man of the world's mightiest seamanship last day of Jubilee visit to Dusty Mathews, Eastbourne's oldest boatman.

Where the average Englishman would first be frightened speechless, and then murmur "Your Majesty," if he should bump into the King suddenly, old Dusty took such a chance encounter right in his stride.

The 86-year-old veteran, with mutton-chop whiskers and small gold rings in his ears, still doesn't consider himself a landsman of the famous ones. "Captain," he still thinks, was a very nice, sociable title for anybody to have.

"I told him," Dusty chuckles, "that I knew his mum and dad."

The old seaman was in the office of His Eastbourne Occupational Centre for Unemployed when the King, spending a brief vacation here after the Silver Jubilee celebrations at Windsor, was dropped in for one of his unexpected visits. The general opinion is that the average monarch enjoyed Dusty more than he did his trip through the institution.

"So we gets talking," Dusty expands in telling about his experience, "and I says, 'Captain, I was in Plymouth when your dad was in a wedding day. Union street was full from end to end with soldiers and sailors playing and singing. That was a day,' I says, 'and how many tar barrels do you think they burned for burning on the beach?' And he says, 'No?' And I says, 'Twelve.'

"Then I says I was in Plymouth, and King Edward comes and opened the new Guildhall,' and I nice time it was.

26th Annual W. C. T. U. Meeting Is Held at Picton United Church

Picton, May 25—There was a splendid attendance at the Women's Christian Temperance Union convention which opened its ten day session here.

This is the 26th annual convention of the W.C.T.U.'s of Prince Edward, Hastings, Lennox and Addington. Sessions were held in Picton United Church. The altar was bathed with flowers.

Mrs. John Wartman of Napanee presided, being elected at this time. A hymn, Psalm 146, the temperance doxology and the Lord's Prayer preceded the worship service which was conducted by Miss L. Candler. Several departmental reports preceded the memorial service to departed members, this service was conducted by Miss Duff, World's Secretary, Toronto. A vocal solo by Miss Harold Thompson of Bloomfield was much appreciated.

The ladies of the church served a fine dinner to the visiting delegates.

The afternoon session opened with a worship service in charge of Mrs. Chandler and a women's hour on behalf of the Picton W.C.T.U. given by Mrs. Geo. Ward, Mrs. Wm. Haggerty of Cherry Valley brought greetings from the W.M.S. (presbyterial of which Mrs. Parkyard and Mrs. Charles Fraleigh of Bloomfield, were delegates. Greetings also replied to by Mrs. George Hale of Belleville. Departmental reports were given by the superintendents, the treasurer and the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Miller of Napanee reported for the press committee.

In her presidential address, Mrs. John Wartman of Napanee reviewed the work of the past year and stated that there had been a revival of interest in temperance work. She urged the ladies to double their efforts on behalf of the cause as there was never a time when more activity was needed. Mrs. Wartman thanked all those who had long been a prominent worker for the temperance cause, was introduced and spoke briefly. A vocal duet by Mrs. Orr and Mrs. Claire Newman of Picton was much appreciated.

An interesting report on moral education, mothers' meetings, health and heredity was given by Mrs. C. Kleinsteiber of Tweed. Several members took part in a discussion on this subject which was led by Mrs. A. Pringle of Belleville. Miss Rosamond Hall, Provincial Secretary, dealt in an interesting way with Y work. Following a report on Little White Ribboners by Mrs. E. M. Rattan of Picton, which showed that there had been no increase in membership in this department, there was a reception service for Little White Ribboners. Miss Mabel Cannon of Picton gave the report of Mrs. Tennant, one of the responsibility of the Ws to the Red Cross. Following a vote of presidents were presented by Mrs. Wartman to Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. B. F. Dennison of Napanee for Addington and Mrs. R. M. Button of Picton for Prince Edward conference led by Mrs. G. H. Jones of Picton, and Mrs. Ward, chairman of Napanee for the presidents, and Mrs. Haggerty for the superintendents by Mrs. George Cole, Belleville, closed the afternoon session.

The evening session featured by an address by Rev. Norman Lockhart, Prof. F. J. Walden of Picton led in sing-song and the worship service was under the direction of Rev. Wm. Ferguson, M.A., B.D., of Picton United Church. Picton Loyal Temperance Legion presented a play, "Mother" and Mrs. (Dr.) Baker of Belleville presented the monthly temperance prizes. Miss Bettie Unger of Picton gave a splendid reading "Cherokee Roses" and the male quartet was composed of Messrs. Ward, Walden, Collings and Vanduzer.

The session continued being devotional in character and the installation of officers will be in charge of Mrs. J. McCaffray of Picton. Life membership pins were awarded at the session.

The Young Mother

Has her health problems

Happy and fortunate is the bride
Who enters married life
In full health and vigor of mind and body.
Perhaps the importance of robust health
At the time of marriage is sometimes overlooked.
But the cares and worries of the household
And the tremendous strain of baby coming
Demand an abundance of rich, red blood
And a healthy, buoyant nervous system.
Modern life with its many financial exigencies
Tend to make the life of the woman in the home
More difficult and more nerve racking.
Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can be of very great benefit to you
Both before and after baby's coming.
By restoring health of body and mind
It will save you from the irritabilities
Which tend to destroy the happiness of the home.
It will restore hope and confidence
At a time when ill health lets you see only the dark side of things.

Library Corner

"Francis The First" by Francis Hackett. The author of the popular "Henry VIII" has now given us one on Francis I of France who was born at the time that Columbus sailed for America and reigned concurrently with Henry. The book was similarly five years in the making and presents a picture of a well compiled picture of the life of the king, brought to take for granted some previous knowledge of the history, the politics and events on the part of the reader.

Mr. Hackett was previously literary and dramatic critic on the New Republic and is an Irishman by birth. He writes easily and in delightful style. Though the book can not be considered unadulterated history since many scenes are reconstructed and many imaginary characters appear in the plot, the story is confined to historical fact and these interludes lend themselves well to lightening the colour and interest of the biography.

Francis I, known as the Valiant and Rabelais, who moulded French people into a well-knit nation is undoubtedly the outstanding figure of Imperial France. Hackett's literary style, though he can not be considered unadulterated history since many scenes are reconstructed and many imaginary characters appear in the plot, the story is confined to historical fact and these interludes lend themselves well to lightening the colour and interest of the biography.

Red Cross Teaches Mothers The Art of Handling Food

Teaching mothers and other women in charge of homes the important art of handling food—how to buy foods from the standpoint of their value, how to cook them, and how to balance meals so as to get the maximum of health value out of them—has been the object of extensive nutrition and dietetic instruction given throughout Ontario during the past three years under the auspices of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

"There has been no time in the history of the world when the need for knowledge of food and food value has been more necessary," observed Miss Margaret McCready, supervisor of the Red Cross nutrition work in Ontario, in speaking of this work recently.

"With drastically reduced amounts of money available for food, mothers everywhere are asking what they shall buy in order to get the best nourishment for their families for the money expended," she said, "and moreover, nutritional diseases are a large percentage of those prevalent today."

Demonstration Method Used

"To meet this emergency, the Red Cross has given extensive nutrition instruction during the past three years," Miss McCready said. "Through the facilities of the Red Cross, 1,671 Ontario mothers last year received practical instruction in adequate diets prepared at a minimum of cost. Trained dietitians from the Province of Ontario undertook their services, free of charge, to teach Red Cross nutrition courses. In all, fifty-seven courses of seven lessons each were conducted in twenty-seven Ontario centres.

"It is within comparatively recent years that carefully conducting research work has given us the science of nutrition, which simply preaches that good food is fundamental to good health. Are we going to practice what we know to be proved scientific facts about bodily health?" asked the supervisor. "For instance, every child and adult needs a certain daily intake of whole milk, as well as cod-liver oil or the equivalent in vitamin D from the sun's rays to say nothing of the whole milk, as well as cod-liver oil or the equivalent in vitamin D from the sun's rays to say nothing of the whole milk, as well as cod-liver oil or the equivalent in vitamin D from the sun's rays to say nothing of the whole milk, as well as cod-liver oil or the equivalent in vitamin D from the sun's rays to say nothing and she should therefore, take it in addition to our normal diet, not only for protection against tooth decay (and up against rickets in the infant and young child), but to increase our resistance to infection," she explained.

Course is Simple

"The nutrition course is conducted as simply as possible," continued Miss McCready. "And the women taught by practical demonstration. At each lesson, a meal is prepared by members of five or six; members of the class sample it, and the costs are worked out. Each food used has its food value, and its relation to bodily health explained. In general, the women who attend become keenly interested in this newer knowledge of nutrition, and the simple cooking and good buying principles thrown out. In the past three years' experience, the dietitians have learned much of the conditions and problems with which many of the mothers have been confronted, and will be able to give even more constructive help in the future."

Weddings

HOSKIN—WHITTEN

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this afternoon, May 25th, at 2.30 o'clock, by the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, at St. Thomas' Church, when Elizabeth Julia, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Whitten, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to William James Hoskin, of Bowmanville, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Hoskin, of Oshawa.

The church was beautifully decorated with Calla lillies and ferns, while the guests' seats were marked with the usual white bows. Mrs. As Lohengrin's Wedding March was played by Mrs. Hunter, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, wearing a gorgeous gown of white satin, fashioned in the lace designed on princess lines. Her lovely silk net veil was caught with a cluster of orange blossoms and she carried a bridal bouquet of Butterfly roses and maiden hair fern. The bride also carried a novel lace handkerchief sent to her by her bridegroom's mother, and had been worn by her on her wedding day thirty-three years ago.

The bridesmaid, Miss Clara Mellon, wore a pea green Parisian net dress over green satin with Regency bonnet and dainty mutt to match. She carried a basket of little corsage of sweet peas.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. R. Hoskin. During the signing of the register, Miss Rose Hunter sang "I Love and Love."

After the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents and a luncheon was served to about thirty-five guests. The bride's mother, Mrs. J. Whitten, received in a dress of navy blue crepe sheer with matching hat, and Mrs. Hoskin, mother of the groom, wore a navy blue figured crepe dress with hat to match. They both wore a corsage of Talisman rose.

The bride's table was covered with the wedding cake and pale pink and white streamers fell from a Royal Blue crepe dress with English monotone tweed coat and Silver fox fur with grey accessories.

Upon their return they will take up residence in Bowmanville.

BOWERS—EDWARDS

A very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. J. H. Stephens, 66 South John Street, on the evening of May 23, when Mrs. Edna Bowers, of Belleville, was united in marriage to Everett Bowers, of Quinte.

The couple were attended by Miss Helen Stephens who wore a gown of pale blue crepe and white floral scories and assisted by Mr. Milton Bowers, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony a dainty lunch was served.

The couple will reside in Belleville.

CALLAGHAN—BASLIP

At St. Michael's Church at eight o'clock this morning a pretty wedding took place when Miss Marguerite Pauline, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Baslip became the bride of Mr. Kenneth Thomas Callaghan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Callaghan of Hamilton, and the late Mrs. Callaghan. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. E. Baker.

The bride was beautifully decorated with the Calla lillies and ferns, while the guests' seats were marked with the usual white bows.

FAMILY BELIEVE MAN MURDERED

Carried Large Amount of Money When He Left Home

Ottawa, May 25.—(CP)—Members of the family of Joseph L. Belanger, 56, lost since last Sunday in the vicinity of Aylmer, Que., today expressed belief Bellanger might have been murdered. They said he carried a large amount of money when he left here.

Bellanger left Ottawa May 15 to join his son, Lucien, to work on six hundred Chinkley Lake claims established last fall in Northern Ontario's newest gold-rush area.

The wife and 10 children live here and in Hull Que. J. Adelard Belanger of Hull said the missing man, his brother, had been ill for several years and that he had gone north partly in the hope work would restore his health.

SISTER DISCOVERS BROTHER ON 'CHAIN'

Chain letters are proving harder to figure out to some people than crossword puzzles.

On Thursday a young man went to a local resident whose name happened to be at the top of his list to pay him the dollar that he owed him. He paid the dollar and then talked so enthusiastically about the chain letter craze that the sister of the man to whom he had paid the dollar decided to buy one of his letters. After having a dollar in his possession she turned to her brother and borrowed the dollar that he had received. She opened her letter and looked at the first name to see to whom she would pay the dollar. Her brother's name was the first on the list. She gave him the dollar.

The puzzle is, does she owe her brother a dollar or has she paid off her debt?

France Seeks to Curb Speculation in France

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer
London, May 25—(CP) Called
The gold bloc is moving rapidly from one pitfall to another.

London today echoed with fears of further currency devaluation with the French franc as the storm-centre. Its effects were felt throughout the world to the pound sterling, as against its present valuation of approximately 76 cents.

More gold is leaving France and in a week the Bank of France has lost gold to the tune of nearly $60,000,000. But the French franc should go, despite the strenuous effort promised by the Flandin government to protect it, is believed in London the Dutch and Swiss currencies will be forced to follow suit. In Belgian Franc, only other gold standard currency, has already been devalued.

"Although early devaluation reports are denied no better evidence of the speculative drive against the French franc could be provided," said the Financial Times, "than by the extraordinary grilling in the clutters market in which at large a business was done as in spot trading. Then they grew strange and reserved, and Jim pushed the face of the girl.

They had died from Joyce's heart. She looked white and very tired. Her fingers were icy as they touched his hand for a moment in goodbye.

Slowly the man returned to the room, which seemed strangely empty now that his guests had left. The flash of something on the floor caught his eye. He stooped and picked it up.

The snapshot of himself and Natalie Cameron. He remembered the moment Joyce had turned and called to Kitty; remembered how her dress had whirled with the quick motion. Undoubtedly that had taken him, Jim Keith to the floor, where it fell unheeded.

Across the pictured faces was the imprint of a small, slight heel.

Lying awake that night, long after Kitty's regular breathing showed that she had fallen asleep, Joyce reviewed that scene in Jim Keith's cabin.

Why should it matter to her, that Jim Keith should know Natalie Cameron? Why should it matter that Natalie was willing to kiss a man?

That picture . . . instead of the dark cabin, lifting and falling with the sea, Joyce seemed to be looking at a lighted, gay room. There was lots white dress and a bright three-cornered scarf, standing out as the man . . . even a: she had smiled up at Norman Wade in Riverton.

Natalie must like the handsome young officer of the Neptune, to smile like that. Joyce suddenly recalled cynically if she was attracted by Belleville society, Mr. Barnesly or Orme Wilson, or Norman Wade. Or was it merely the dark good looks of Jim Keith himself— that half amused, half impudent smile in his eyes? Some women would find that attractive. Joyce knew that she hated it! Joyce thought hotly. A man who could kiss one girl and would think no more about him Jim Keith was nothing to her . . . he would go to hell . . .

Joyce turned over and lay with wakeful eyes staring.

All the next day, sitting on deck talking to Roger—playing bridge with Kitty and two of the other women in the party, Joyce was acutely aware of Jim Keith's absence.

He was avoiding them that evening. Nor later was he at the motion picture show given on the boat deck.

The ship was due in Honolulu the next day. Tonight was the night of the dance.

As she dressed, Joyce found herself thinking of Jim Keith. Her knowledge made her angry. She determined that she would not speak of him, and promptly did so.

"You've been deserted by your boy friend, haven't you, Kitty? Have your evening's going to be spoiled!"

Kitty's eyes flashed. "Don't be absurd. "Never you think it! When I'm ready for him, lady, they stay captivated; I'm not going to be there! Don't you be snappin' his ears off at dinner if he asks you for a dance."

"He won't ask me—" Joyce spoke lightly, but there was a strange brooding look in the eyes which stared out of the mirror before her.

She was wrong. Jim Keith came to the door of her cabin before the ship was half over. Joyce caught sight of his tall white figure as he entered and stood for a moment looking around the room.

She saw one woman nudge another. They strolled with apparent nonchalance to the doorway. The little flame of scorn leaped in the girl's heart. Women would make fools of themselves for him in any uniform . . . for a tall figure and a handsome face.

She saw . . . with a dreary little shaking of the heart, that a Mr. Person, who was plain and unknown, and of good deal of a bore, was coming over to claim her for a dance.

She saw—with a leap of her pulses—that Jim Keith was watching the room, evading all attempts to stop him. . . . Something almost ruthless in the way he swept through the crowd—coming over here to her.

MOON MADNESS

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

"You will dance this, Mrs. Warren?" A faint, mocking smile in his smile stamped on his lips, as Jim Keith put the question. . . . There was no smile in the dark eyes. They were watchful, hostile, even. Something was looking him over, and looking him in spite of his pride.

Confusion, panic battling in Joyce's heart. Heady excitement, shaking at heart, then a sudden, strange unrest which this man could always stir in her. Her cool poise had deserted her. She was glad to be here to save the day with her hearty acceptance. . . . Jim was over on the other side of the saloon. . . . There were two or three watchful dark eyes before her . . . just his intent tanned face—waiting . . .

Then, suddenly, he was in the man's arms without a word.

They danced badly. Both were rigid — strangely tense, like two strange dogs on leash. Keith felt the girl's slender body stiffen as he put his arm about her. She moved with the music, but not with him. Her dancing feet seemed flying from him.

Both good dancers—both, as a rule, swayed by rhythm, they were not at all in accord. They moved strangely each other—each unconsciously struggling for the lead.

The man found a vague anger mounting in him, and a strange excitement. Heady, the fragrance which rose from her hair and from her bare white shoulders. Heady the feeling of her pliant, slender body in his arms. They had spoken no word since their strange dance started, just that shadowy struggle. I am playing between them — that curious comfy, Keith felt that the flame of her spirit was encased in snow. That she had withdrawn into herself out of the circle of his arms.

Obituary

HERBERT AYLSWORTH

Napanee, May 25—The death occurred at his home one mile east of Deseronto on Thursday afternoon of Herbert Aylsworth, a member of one of the best known families in Eastern Ontario. He was 68 years of age, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Aylsworth, and was born near the village of Tamworth. W. R. Aylsworth was a brother of the late J. B. Aylsworth of Newburg, father of the eminent Liberal statesman and member of the Senate, Sir Allen B. Aylsworth, and George Anthony Aylsworth, who resides in Newburg.

Mr. Aylsworth suffered a stroke on Saturday night, while assisting in the chores on the farm, which was originally purchased by W. R. Aylsworth, and at present occupied by Herbert Aylsworth, a son of the deceased.

Fourteen years ago Mr. Aylsworth left the farm, having secured a position with the mail service in Belleville, which position he held for 12 years when he retired. Shortly after the death of Mrs. Aylsworth which occurred two years ago, he returned to the home of his son.

Mr. Aylsworth was a lifelong Liberal, a member of the Deseronto United Church, and in his earlier days took an active interest in church work and sporadic work. He leaves two sons, Herbert and Byron.

LATE JAMES MORGAN

The funeral of James Morgan, late of 101 Pinnacle Street, took place Friday afternoon from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. S. McMullen.

The bearers were Messrs. G. Vandervoort, D. Frederick, C. Reid, J. Munro, L. Rushlow and D. Kenny.

WILLIAM GILES ANDERSON

After a lengthy illness, having been a patient in the Belleville General Hospital since last September, William Giles Anderson passed away in that institution on Friday, May 24th.

In his passing the County of Prince Edward has lost one of its oldest residents, Mr. Anderson having been born in the township of Ameliasburgh in that county 94 years ago last December, being thus in his 95th year. His parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. George Anderson. All his life was passed in the township where he was born and when age and health permitted he was engaged in farming. He was married. He attended the Massassaga United Church and a large circle of friends and acquaintances he will most highly esteemed.

Surviving him are two brothers, Mr. Shelley Anderson of the township of Thurlow and Mr. Morley Anderson of Detroit, Mich.

LATE WILLIAM CROSS

Madoc, Ont., May 25.—Friday morning May twenty-fourth in the village of Madoc there passed away an esteemed resident in the person of William Cross.

The late Mr. Cross was born in Ocean, Rosshire, Scotland seventy-nine years ago and came to Canada at the age of seventeen years, making his home with his brother in the lumbering business with his cousin the late Thomas Cross in Madoc. Mr. Cross married Miss Annetta Mouncey of Madoc and moved to Peterboro for a short time latterly taking a responsible position in Ay, Ontario where he spent a number of years also at Woodstock, Ontario. At the opening of the Cross, West, Mr. and Mrs. Cross moved to Bruce, Alberta where they made their home until the death of his wife. Some four years ago he returned to Madoc and has made his home with Miss Josephine Mahoney. Mr. Cross was very fond of music and a keen reader of good books and literature. In religion he was a staunch Presbyterian and in politics a Liberal. The funeral will be held on Sunday under the auspices of the Independent Order of Oddfellows and which he was a member for over fifty years. Rev. W. A. Hunter will conduct the service with interment at Lakeview Cemetery, Peterboro and Ayr papers please copy.

LATE JAMES ARBUCKLE

Many friends from the city and district were present at the funeral of James Arbuckle which took place Friday afternoon from his late residence, 182 Dundas street, to St. Thomas' Church where the burial office of the Church of England was conducted by the vicar, the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, assisted by the Rev. T. C. Davis of Bury, Quebec.

At the conclusion of the service the funeral party left for Trenton where interment was made in St. James' cemetery, the committal service being conducted by the Rev. T. C. Lewis.

The Belleville bearers were Messrs. George Stokes, John Houston, R. C. Stiver, S. Hibbard, O. C. Brickman and B. F. Jennings.

At Tweed the bearers were Messrs. Chas. Bath, John Brown, J. Porritt, A. Mouck, Georgs Stokes and John Houston.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful.

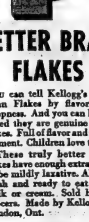
MRS. EDWARD J. PEPPER

(Of Deseronto)

Early Sunday morning, May 19th, there passed away at the home of her son, 239 Davenport Road, Toronto, Mrs. Edward J. Pepper, formerly of Ottawa and Prescott Ontario. Many friends attended the impressive service conducted at the Nash Funeral Parlours, 942 St. Clair Ave. West, Toronto Monday morning at 11 o'clock by Rev. C. O. Despard of the Church of the Epiphany assisted by Rev. Canon H. B. Patton, retired and formerly rector of St. John's church, Deseronto and Rev. A. R. Towner of St. Alban's Cathedral.

The remains were escorted to Ottawa and resting at the funeral parlour on E. R. Yetich and Son, 433 Parkdale Ave., where the rite was conducted at St. John's Church, Eight Street by Rev. Canon J. F. Gorman, assisted by Rev. N. R. Hughes. Interment was in Beechwood—cemetery.

Mrs. Pepper, who was well beloved by many friends and relatives in the several places of her residence had not been well for some time but her condition was not considered critical at the moment of her death, and her sudden death came to these as a shock. Deceased was born in Ottawa and for the past nine or so years resided in Deseronto with her son, J. R. Pepper.



Besides her son she has two sons, Rev. A. E. Pepper of Shawbonville, and J. R. Pepper of Toronto, and the late Mrs. Allan of Kemptville, and two sisters, Mrs. Fred Kennedy and Mrs. Hugh Kelso of Prescott.

In religion Mrs. Pepper was an Anglican, and was closely identified with the congregations of the following churches in Ottawa, Ont., St. John's, Prescott, St. Peter's Deseronto, St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, taking an active part in their different organizations.

Among the many beautiful floral offerings were pieces from St. John's Anglican Church, Point Anne and St. John's A. Y. P. A., Point Anne, the Staff of the Junior Vocational School, Toronto and Retired Women's Auxiliary of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto.

ONLY ONE FIRE BY FIREWORKS

General Decorum of Boys Firing Crackers Good

Only one fire was reported in Belleville on the 24th of May attributed to fireworks' displays. A shed in the rear of 141 Pinnacle street actually answered three calls during the past 24 hours.
The lone fire caused by fire crackers igniting a building occurred at 6.00 p. m. last evening, when the roof of the dwelling at 218 George St. caught fire. The department soon had the blaze under control with little damage being reported. It is believed, that a firework display was shot to the roof and with a slight breeze the sparks soon ignited the dry shingles.
"We had the quietest 24th of May experienced in years. Why we always look for numerous calls on that day, but due to the carefulness and decorum now used in Belleville yesterday, we only had the one call, which is worthy of note", stated Fire Chief Lynch today.
Later in the evening the fire department was called to extinguish a small fire on the top of Charles St., while at 2.00 a. m. today a wood sedan burned near the corner of Coleman and West Bridge Sts. The car had been parked there by its Frankford owner, while there procured a light lunch at a local restaurant, the party being enroute home from Wellington. The car was badly damaged before the department arrived, due to the lateness of the information being received.
The general destruction of property and fish, unfortunately attributed to fireworks on the 24th of May

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, May 25 (CP)—Trading slackened off on the mining section of Toronto Exchange today with lower prices ruling for the silvers and some of the golds and base metals.
Noranda held firm at $43 and Falconbridge displayed strength at $4. Little Long Lac went to $5.70 but at $5.60 closed unchanged.
A small drop in the price of bar silver on the London market gave an opening for the selling of the silver stocks. Bear at 58 was off about three points while Hollinger dropped to $2.10, off about 12 cents on Dome Mines and a couple of cents. Announcement the White Eagle property had closed down brought in some selling in that zone and the price weakened 10-12c.
Gold shares were steady except for a loss of 40 cents by Dome.
Oil stocks displayed practically no action and shares in the group were mainly unchanged.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 25 (AP)—Continental Europe's gold standard troubles put a damper on stock market bullishness today and prices staged an orderly retreat. A few issues bucked the trend but the list closed easy. Transfers approximated 1,500,000 shares.
Among specialty shares that managed to buck the trend with modest gains were Wilson and Co., Standard Brands, International Nickel, Gliddon. An early steady tone was exhibited by General Motors, consolidated Gas, Western Pacific, Sears Roebuck and American Tobacco "B". Rails were unchanged to off a point or so included American Telephone, Pennsy, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Seaboard Oil, U. S. Steel, American Smelting, Corn Prod. Texas Corporation, Chrysler and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

TRADING BRISK ON LOCAL MART

Large Display of Plants For Transplanting is Seen

Sellers and purchasers were largely represented on Saturday's market which was one of the largest for some time and in consequence trading was brisk. A feature on the outside market was the display of plants in boxes for flower beds, also tomatoes, cucumber and onion plants. Potted plants were also much in evidence.
There were very few changes to note in prices which prevailed a week ago. A feature was made a fine display of lake salmon, white fish, muskies and coarse fish and a slightly lower price prevailed. The ruling price for salmon and white fish was 20c per pound.
During the past week the hog market has been very strong with live hogs at $8.75 per cwt. and dressed hogs at $11.50.
In the interior of the market building the various tables were laden with dairy and other products. The ruling price for butter was 25 cents per pound and eggs 18 cents per dozen. Home cooking was also a feature with considerable trading in progress.
Chickens ranged in price from 60 cents to 80 cents, each according to quality. Broilers sold at 30 and 60 cents a pair.

INGRID MARRIES DANISH PRINCE

18th Century Church is Scene of Swedish Nuptials

Stockholm, May 25—In the 13th century church where all kings of the Bernadotte lineage in Sweden have been crowned, Princess Ingrid became the wife yesterday of Crown-Prince Frederick of Denmark and Iceland. By the same token she became a future queen.
It was a royal wedding, born of tradition, and executed with pomp and ceremony. But it had an air of romance amid the glitter of polished uniforms, tarnished books, and the formality of court ritual.
The bride, Ingrid, took you, Frederick, my lawful husband, to your lives through sorrow and pleasure, and as a symbol of this union I give you this ring."
With these words and the recital of the Lord's Prayer the 18th century marriage service, two people in love were wed—a blue-eyed young woman and a tall, dark-haired, studious young man.
The wedding service was conducted in the Stockholm Cathedral by Archbishop Ekman, assisted, with its restored Gothic, architecture and 18th century furnishings.
Princess Ingrid wore a white satin, colorful parade of nobility, high officialdom and royalty filling a full parade dress, government leaders and foreign diplomatic representatives. Outside the church a long line of soldiers formed a lane to the royal coach.
Visiting royalty, headed by King Leopold and Queen Astrid of Belgium, entered through a special door to take their places in the royal pew on the left side of the altar.
Crown Prince Frederik, escorted by his father, Prince Carl, and his brother, Prince Knud, came slowly up the aisle. She walked to the accompaniment of swelling organ music, followed by her royal lover-groom, the little Princesses Reginild and Astrid of Denmark. Ingrid wore a simply cut white silk gown with a 20-foot train and a tiny green crown of myrtle. Her tall, dark-haired, studious Frederik, wore a Danish uniform with a blue sash.

Responses Are Made

"Before God and the omniscient," intoned the archbishop, "and in the presence of this gathering, I ask you, Frederik, if you accept as you choose this woman, Princess Ingrid, to be your lawful bride, to cherish her in both sorrow and happiness."
On Frederik's response the same question was put to Princess Ingrid.
The wedding ring, a thin band of gold, was then blessed and blessed by the archbishop. In the final response, Frederik, the wedding vows, Frederik and Ingrid held their hands together before the crown prince and princess and the band of future queen.
With the blessings of the state church upon them, the royal couple stood before the altar while the national hymn, in the singing of Danish and Swedish songs and a Danish choir climaxed a wedding.
In Gluckstein harbor, ships of the Swedish navy, quit in full array.
A stately, colorful procession from the church followed, the royal newlyweds stepping into their carriage, in which they were driven under cavalry escort for a short distance from the church to the royal palace.
From a palace balcony the newlyweds heard a Danish choir serenade them with special wedding songs composed for the occasion.

Williams Hurls Two Hit Game Stewart-Warners Win Opener From Kingston Ponies 1-0

Lone Run Scored by Locals Without Semblance of Hit

FINE FIELDING

Teams Banqueted by Management After The Contest

Scoring their lone run in the sixth frame without the semblance of a hit, Belleville Stewart-Warners defeated Kingston Ponies 1-0 in the opening O.B.M.L. game in this city on the holiday before one of the largest crowds ever to see an opening fray in this city and sent the fans home in good spirits by the fine display given. Jack Williams, hurler was the hero of the contest, he turning in a two hit performance on his first appearance and appears headed for his finest season in a Belleville uniform. Although the cool weather was slightly chilly, the crowd was enthused and from the class of ball played, a real season is in prospect.

As at all openings there were the usual ceremonies but they were of short duration. The parade which left under the direction of Reg. Hinchey marched through the streets to the stadium where the strains of the Canadian National Anthem with teams and officials grouped about the flag-pole were won by the team in years past was raised by the top. Following this, Mayor George O. Tice, ascended the hurling heap with Ernie Keweenol president of the O.B.M.A.—donning the catcher's paraphernalia and Newton Thompson, secretary of the league, acting as the hitter. The umpire, Corrigan, Kingston, then called the line-ups to the fans and the 1935 season was underway.

The game was not fast and could be called exciting, it being a straight contest with the batting of Williams slight edge on the hitting. Williams and Jamieson hooked up in the battery with the Indian southpaw being worth the better especially in the pinches. He struck out six and issued two and allowed but one man to reach third base and two only to reach second base. He was in trouble in only one frame, the second, when he walked two but forced her but got the next one. St. Louis then hit behind the runner, Williams pulling up at third with St. Louis stealing second on the next pitch. Williams then went to work after making the batter pop to second and whiffing Stone to end the inning. It was smart pitching.

Run Without Hit.

Jamieson was not so lucky. He struck out but three and allowed only five singles, one coming in each of the same frame. The sixth proved his Jonah and the frame was done after two had been retired. "Sonny" Green bounced to Stone at short who made a swift peg but could not throw first to allow Green to go to second. A low drive to right went to the same fielder and Stone made the same play, allowing Green to score the only run of the game. Scrutton carried off the fielding honors with a fine catch in left garden and Hewitt Smith shagged a tough one back of third. Ken Mellor, Belleville lead his team mates in a fielding way with five chances handled at third base while "Sonny" Green was hot around second base. Barclay, the new receiver, turned in a fine game, his handling of Williams being nearly perfect. Every member of the local team went well and the fans will see a team this summer with a great deal of class in the defensive basball.

The teams and officials gathered at the Queens Hotel following the game for a banquet, the Kingston club being guests of the Belleville Association. Raymond Carr acted as toastmaster with Mayor Tice, Reeves as song leader and Leo B. Rigg at the piano. Harry Corrigan, Kingston athletic lady, much appreciated. Mayor Tice welcomed the guests on behalf of the city and Fred Rowe, some, president of the association, spoke briefly on sportsmanship and the value of clean playing. James F. Bowards, president of the Kingston club, replied. Newton Thompson, secretary of the league, praised the players for the fine display of baseball and clearly interpreted the new rules in force in the league. Dinner.

F. Symons, chairman of the Parks Board, told the gathering the efforts being made by the board to provide a recreation centre for Belleville. The singing of the National Anthem three cheers for the teams brought the splendid function to a close.

Aylmer Steps Up Doing Well In Senior Company

By the Canadian Press

Newcomers to the big Intercounty Senior Baseball League, Aylmer's team is doing right well. It already has an unbroken string of three victories and yesterday it acquired the administration of Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario.

Mr. Hepburn came to Aylmer to see the small-town team play Galt Terriers in a Victoria Day attraction. When the home team upset the Terriers 7-4, the premier was so pleased with the local 220 to the club coffers, "earmarked for new bats. He was convinced the Aylmer boys would know what to do with them.

The Intercounty splashed itself pretty well all over western Ontario on the holiday with games in virtually every league city. It was an especially profitable day for Stratford, 1934 Ontario Senior champions, Preston and London, each with two games.

Stratford defeated the luckless Guelph Leafs 10-1 and Kitchener Waterloo 5-2. Preston edged out two close wins over Hamilton 4-3 and Brantford 5-4 over Dundas.

The London brigade used high-explosive both morning and afternoon, thumping Brantford 12-4 and Guelph 15-2. London won satisfied pitching, which it scarcely needed, since she boys were gathering a wallop with the bat.

Wilkins Hurls B.A.B.A. Entry To 5-1 Victory

Behind the superb hurling of "Red" Wilkins, the Belleville entry in the Bay of Quinte loop opened the opening day ceremonies for the Gananoque club in that town yesterday, when the locals pounded out a 9 to 1 victory over the "Gananoque team, placing them a tie with the Picton team who defeated the Gilbert A.C. 16 Napanee. Wilkins was in rare form allowing the Gananoque batsmen two hits, of a rather scratchy nature.

Ringing hits in every conceivable corner of the ball park, the Belleville intermediates pounded out 13 solid base hits from the deliveries of Dorey, who laboured on the hillstop for the homesters. Gerald Sharpe, local outfielder led all hitters of the day with three safe blows. Mel Little, just up from the junior ranks, counted two safeties as did Ty Barriage and Harry Morgan. Wilkins and Brennan were the clickers for the home team. Score by innings:

In a close finish race with B.C.I., Queen Mary and O.S.S. all bunched coming down the home stretch Clare of the Collegiate team had enough left to hold his lead and finish a few feet ahead of the Queen Mary runner, O.S.S. finishing in third place was right on the heels of Burns of Queen Mary. The other two entrants, St. Michael's and Queen Victoria finished in that order in the annual junior school relay race for the Deacon trophy. Running the half mile instead of the usual mile relay, the winners made good time in completing the distance in two minutes, one and two-fifths seconds.

The teams:

Queen Mary—Dick Burns, Clayton Fitzgerald, Roger Mallory, Jack Lambert.

O.S.S.—Russell Manning, George Train, Clifford Bolle, William Elliott.

St. Michael's—Tom Feeta, Don Ciceri, Frank Robertson, J. Wilson.

Queen Victoria—Norman Yerrow, Ronald Warren, Bill Boyle, Eric Cook.

TENNIS

A large number of tennis enthusiasts turned out at the Bay of Quinte Country Club for the first tournament of the year and a most successful afternoon of sport was the result. The tennis club is a thriving sporting organization and with the influx of new members, it is expected, that members will win their share of awards at the various tournaments throughout the district. There were three events and a consolation competed for at the tourney and the winners will be given cresta. There were sixteen entries in the men's singles with Norman Clarke and W. Johnston reaching the final round, the latter winning 6-4, 6-3. In the men's doubles, Fred Fisher and W. Johnston defeated Norman Clarke and Murray Mitchell in the final round 6-3, 6-4. Miss Betty Illsley and William Hurst won the mixed doubles from Miss Jack and W. Johnston by a score of 6-2 and in the consolation mixed doubles, Miss Jocelyn Jones and Mr. Wickerson defeated Miss Louis Waldridge and Murray Mitchell. At the conclusion of the games, tea was served in the spacious club house.

McLARNIN MAULED IN TRAINING

McLARNIN AND ROSS IN TRAINING FOR WELTER TITLE FRAY

Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin are here seen in informal shots taken at their training camps as they go through grooming exercises for the welterweight title scrap on May 28. The Vancouver Celt, polishing up his boxing skill until he resembles the McLarnin of many years ago, rather than the lethal slugger of later bouts, demonstrates that his nerves are quite in form as he does a light rope act, at left. Right shows Ross in the rough during a round of golf between sparring bouts. In centre Barney clowns a bit taking a slide down a play chute constructed in his training camp.

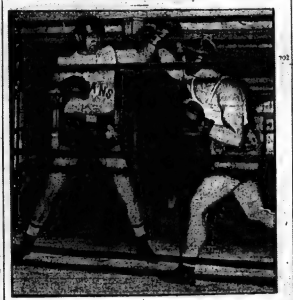
SYDNEY WOOD IN ACTION



This spectacular action picture of Sydney Wood, high-ranking U. S. Davis Cup star, was made as he played a ball with his newly-developed "pole-vault" shot, one of the most thrilling plays ever shown on a tennis court. He worked up his bit of acrobatics while training for cup matches and intends to use it when the ball is out of reach. He springs heading for the sphere, balances momentarily on his racket, then lights—himself and hurls his body into the drive. The camera caught him at the peak of his attack as the ball flew towards him.

GIVING HIS SON A FEW POINTERS

Some day Wally Halley, left, may be a contender for world lightweight honors, for experts who have seen the youngster in action think him a second Ace Hudkins. His meteoric rise began in amateur ranks, where he stopped all his opponents with apparent ease. Now the money he gets from his fights goes to buy—his first store. His father is Rev. R. Halliwell of Los Angeles, who fought as an amateur in England for many years. He is shown giving his son a few hints on ring stance and style.

CHALLENGER HARD AT WORK

MAXIE BAER SITS DOWN TO WORK OUT

Boring or clowning it's all the same to the heavyweight champion. Maxie Baer, so often does he mix the two, it's hard to say which he is doing here, as he batters the punching bag from a sitting posture in training for his title defence against Jimmy Braddock. Perhaps he thinks it will be just as easy as that beating the Irishman. The patch over Maxie's heart covers the burn caused when a blank cartridge revolver exploded during rehearsals for a movie short.

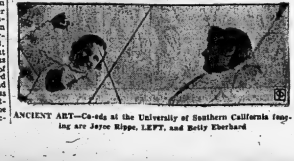
GOLF

BY ALEX MORRISON



A child is unafraid of many things until he is taught to fear them. Usually a person taking up golf is not afraid of such errors as slicing and topping. These mistakes are committed many times before they prompt fear.

In time the player's fear of doing something wrong becomes an obsession. He doesn't strive to do the correct thing half as hard as he does to minimize his errors. For miles every move he makes. Such is the mental attitude of many experienced golfers.

The few who have attained consistent success are those with the means of overcoming their fears. In fact, their success is really a conquest of fear. It isn't wise to say that you aren't afraid when results prove otherwise.

First of all, admit your fears Then go to work on them one by one. It will do much to lower your scores.

Daily Short Story

A JOB

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Alice Lord, neatly attired in her new spring ensemble, presented a smart appearance as she stepped into the outer office of the Acme Publishing Company. Jet-black hair peeped from a perky Breton sailor, dark-blue eyes lighted up an intelligent face, a slim, graceful figure that endeared her to the anti-Alice West faction—Alice was the smartly turned out maid of Manhattan—1935 model.

There was a briskness and efficiency too, in her department. Alice wanted this job more than anything she could think of—had wanted it for months and months. But nothing had been forthcoming. To show her husband, Tom, and her family that she could be independent of them, she had unsuccessfully applied at advertising agencies and public utility offices all over the town.

And now this job as secretary in Acme Publishing that promised to be a weak and probably advancement! She had to get it...

As Alice glanced about the office her eyes took in a sign: "No Married Women Need Apply." Well, she was prepared for that.

A most bored looking young man came forward to interrupt her thoughts.

"Applicant for secretary, Miss?" he said, not even looking at her.

Miner Office

"Miss Lord," she replied, coloring. "Yes, I'd like to apply for the position."

He ushered her into a inner office, seated her at a desk, poised by his. He acted like a junior executive, so bored, conceited, sure of himself. Asked her routine questions—how old she was, previous experience, how fast she took dictation.

"Good heavens, he's acting strangely, she thought, not even looking at me. Maybe I am saying the wrong things. Maybe it's hopeless.

"You can use a typewriter, I presume," he inquired, raising his eyes to look at her face for the first time. "How many words a minute."

"I can do about 120."

"All right, Miss Lord, sit over there at that machine and take some dictation. I don't do the hiring, merely the interviewing. If your work is satisfactory, I'll talk to Mr. Hodges, our president, whose secretary, for some other appointment will be."

Nervous at first, Alice mastered her work, and even had time to glance hastily at the young man dictating to her. All through the ordeal his manner toward her was brusque, sharp, almost impolite, as that several stenographers sitting nearby glanced more than once in his direction with curious stares.

Finally he was through. Alice handed him her work. He seemed to be impressed she thought, giving herself a figurative pat on the back. And...she knew she was looking particularly nice today.

The Great Hodges

In his inner sanctum, William F. Hodges, president of the Acme Publishing Company, leaned back wearily in his swivel chair. Before him stood the young man with Alice's work in his hand.

"What's on your mind now," the great Hodges growled. Rogers never spoke. He growled, barked or snapped. He was certain that his manner of speaking helped to help build his business into a successful one.

"Well sir there's another applicant for secretarial job of yours out there. I'm sure you wouldn't like her."

"H'mm, bemused the president. "She's about the thirtieth I've clicked in the past few days. I don't think she would get along in that job She is very good looking"—this aloud—"and very emphatic—and would ordinarily be an attractive asset to any office. But—here" he shrugged his shoulders.

Tells time the answer was a rasp instead of a bark as Hodges stood up to shake a finger at the presumptuous young man.

"Listen here young man, don't tell me how to run my business and who is to be my secretary. I'm not so hard to get along with as you may think. Now, get out."

"Wait a minute. Hire that girl. Give her $25 instead of $30. Tell her there's a good chance she may succeed to something with me."

That night the presumptuous

young man, who had boarded the linen in his den, walked into the apartment he and Alice had shared since there marriage a year ago.

"Oh, then darling" Alice said, rushing into his arms. "How did you ever make it?"

He smiled. "Well, dear, I figured rightly after that Hodges had heard the same song and dance from me about countless other applicants that he'd eventually go into reverse English. You see, honey, it worked, and that added income is going to help. But remember, young one, you are Miss Lord!"

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Puds Simkins was sitting on Mary Watkinses front steps, yawning in her and looking at her in her new blue dress, and we started to smell a awful smell coming out of her house. Puds saying, O boy, whoever eats supper here today is lucky guys.

It's ony roast beef, Mary Watkins said, and I said, it's a wonder you even know what it is, I bet you dont even think of food, do you?

Well no, hardly to tell the truth I just happened to look in the oven to see if anything was burning, she said. To tell the truth I dont injoy the smell of cooking. I much prefer the smell of flowers, she said, and I said, Sure, O, wonickers, what you awt to eat is nightingale tung injoyed like the princesses in the fairy tales.

My, what a lovely thawt, but I dont think I could injoy them much when I thawt of the poor little nightingales without any tongues. Mary Watkins said, and Puds Simkins said, It's a wonder to me you can eat anything always, er than butterfly wings and honey.

What a sweet thawt, Mary Watkins said. To tell the truth, sometimes I dont eat anything at all, I just sit there and think, she said, and I said, Just rose leaves and a little powdered sugar, that's all I'd think you ever ate.

Mercy, hee hee, I'm not quite that delikit, Mary Watkins said, and just then Maud Jonson went passed, saying, Hello Mary, I heard you had a grate time at the high day school Frankfurter roast. I heard you ate 8 frankfurters and rolls.

And she kept on going. Mary Watkins saying, She's just saying that to be funny, the idear of people making up such things about people.

Saying it with a gitty expression and proving no matter how beautiful you are you're proberly human.

Daily Short Story

LUCKY RING

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Of course I don't believe a word it. But I gave up my dime and the story. And, which should off the record, I paid an additional two-bits after it was over. felt the story, even though I didn't believe it, was worth the full thirty-five cents expended. The whole affair, if it may be lled that, occurred the other orning not far from the Bowery. gentleman of the stage slounded to me.

"Dive maudlisofacropdcrofite," said like that. While I don't nt it to be said that I am not nerous, nevertheless there are such appeals that get direct y attention or my dime. This peared to be the exception hile I was digging up the dime, a mudcoat (a good word for ding). Why they persist in doing it, I never can understand. ad salesman knows enough to pipe em when he has made his sale. Bowery bum ever does. However, that's the story.

Wouldn't think five years ago, had the words at my feet," he id.

I tried to freeze him with a nce, but he was shock proof. continued to talk.

"Yes, sir, I had the world at my ," he went on, "it was a ring." ne thing changed hands and I ided him.

"You had the world at your feet it was a ring," I said half-kingly. "That doesn't make nse."

He pawed at my coat lapel, but I ded away.

"That's just it," he said. "It sn't make sense, but it's as true you can't buy 10-cents coffee on Bowery."

I shrugged my shoulders.

"I'm listening," I told him.

Fool a Bum

"You see, back five years ago, I as a bum, like I am now. Maybe little cleaner then, maybe a little ager, It doesn't matter. Anyay, I was sleeping in a bed that ne. In a bed in a flop house. Well sleeping in the cot 'along- of mine for about a week was ller with the worst cough you r heard. He used to keep me ake nights when I wasn't drunk coughing. And he took a kinda ne to me, because I didn't say thing about his coughing. Although it kept me awake some

"He told you so?, I told him.

"Right, and he kinda grinned. ell, it's true. It won't be the Winter out, I betcha.' ' s something soothing to him, t he just grinned, 'And I won't e had about going either,' he id, 'Ma, I had my big chance.' I didn't ask for details, and didn't get none for a couple days, when he coughed so hard I ought he'd break himself. Then calls me over to his cot. 'Listen, says. I'm gunna give you something that will make you a million.' 'Yeah?' I tells him and his. 'Don't act like that, man,' ays between gasps. 'Here's a ng.' And he hands me a dopey ding ring that has dragon's and ches all carved over it. 'Funny, takes it in my hand and looks it.

'Now, that ring will make you hickiest man in the world,' he s. 'Only you got to know what to ask about.'

'Then he tells me the craziest y you ever heard in your life. a wishing ring aid anyone who med it could have one wish, proding that he be the best thing r him. According to this fellow, ring was a thousand years old so, and was handed down from person to another, each one ting just one wish. And none ishing for the right thing that uld be the thing for them. ot understand. The joker about ring was that it would disappear when someone wished for e right thing. Zingo, just like at.

'I takes the thing, and says quick, wish I had a million dollars.' And e ring was still in my hand. hat's what I wished for,' he says, d now I'm dead broke. It all out hat I should have wished for was life. We went into a terrific cough- spell then, and I never did rn. However, I put the ring in pocket, figuring that I'd sell it ext day.

'The fellow died that night. Well, en I watched them carry out body, I thought of the ring, d went down the street to a pawn op. But could I get a nickle for it? s a penny. 'It ain't gold,' says e uncle, and I goes away.

Bridal Gift

"And I forgets the ring for a ek, when I'm passing the Little unch Around the Corner. Funny, here's some people walking out- de, and I sticks around. I'm not ving no place special to go. And he comes out, sudden, but the test little bride you ever saw.

All smiles and golden hair and blushing cheeks. Sweet. And I remembers the ring.

"I pushes forward and shoved it in her hand. 'It's a wishing ring! I tells her quick. 'You can have one wish.' She takes it kinda automatic-like, and looks up at the man at her side. She laughs, like a bell, almost. 'I wish for happiness forever and ever,' she says, and then cries. Oh, I must have dropped it.' The ring had disappeared just like trickling through her fingers. The man with her grinned and pushed a five-spot in my hand and helped her to a car.'

The bum smiled in a famous way.

"Golly, she was beautiful," he said.

I started to move away.

"But you ain't heard the end," he told me. 'The other day I was walking up the Avenue and I sees her, all dressed different. And she sees me and stops. She fumbles in her purse.

"'Don't know whether that ring was honest-to-goodness,' she told me, 'but I am happy.' And with that she shoves a hundred dollar bill in my hand and trips away.

"And me, I goe on a hundred-dollar drunk, and now I'm just collecting an open-eye, cause all the money went last night."

With that he looked at me. And I gave him that quarter.

Little Benny's Note Book

Saturday morning ma went down town shopping, and when she can home for lunch I said, May ma, there's a new Kut Up (Komed) around at the Little Grand this afternoon, can I go and see it? Mrs. Simkins wants to know, I said.

It's very nice of him to take such an interist in you, ma said. Now please don't ask me a thousand and fifty questions eyes all day you have I've got my foot in the front door and my hat off my head, she said.

No mam, yes, mam, can't I see it? I said, and she said, I'm a grate deel better in reciprocity, so let's find out feral if you remembered the various things I asked you to do for me this morning. Did you remember to get my brown shoes back from the shoemaker? she said.

Yes mam, I said, and ma said, Well I'm glad to hear, that, because there shoes hert with torpures of the damned in spite of the flattering compliments. I've received on their gastric appearans. Did you remember to put all your nick nacks and what nots away in your closet so Nora could do your room with some lots of thoroughness? she said.

Yes mam, I said, and ma said, Good, except my compliments and I'm glad and bring me my brown shoes. I want to change into them before I even go upstairs.

Well gosh, ma, O, I didn't say I actuall went to the shoemaker's and got them, I said, and ma said, Then what did you say for Ian sakes?

I just said I remembered to get them, I didn't actually quite reach the point of going and doing it. I said, and ma said, And the same thing applies to tidying up my room, I suppose?

Mam? Yes mam, I said, and ma said, Then I'll remember about giving you money for the movies, and if I'm careless enough to forget it please remind me and I'll remember it again, the idear, sush a boy.

Meening me and meening to tell Fuds no.

HIGHLY PRAISED

TOMMY WALKER

Football's highest priced player is Tommy Walker, above, who plays inside right for the Heart of Midlothian eleven. Walker is a member of the all-star Scottish team playing matches against U.S. and Canadian football teams. Hearts recently hirried down offers of $60,000 for the transfer of the player. Walker is an international of top-notch ranking. He is shown above as the team arrived in New York.

NEWLIFE SPAN IS GIVEN NRA

Great Britain's social security program which was passed in 1908 and amended by every subsequent parliament.

President Moves For Extension of Time of Blue Eagle

Washington, May 25.—President Roosevelt has come out flatly for a two-year extension of NRA as organized labor brought its threat of a general strike to his front door.

Even while the President was making his decision known, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the man who helped create the recovery act and nurse it through its fledgling days, went before the House ways and means committee to plead for the life of the blue eagle.

Spurred by their President, Speaker Joseph W. Byrns left the White House announcing that a bill to extend NRA two years would be introduced in the House Thursday and passed by Wednesday night. The Senate already has passed a resolution extending NRA for 9½ months. Byrns believes the Senate will accept the House bill.

Something must be done quickly, NRA dies on June 18 unless Congress passes extending legislation. Bill Senator Johnson, hard-boiled and candid as ever, appeared before the House committee, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor testified.

He reiterated the threat he uttered in New York—that if NRA is not extended for two years there will be strikes on a national scale.

At his press conference to-day Mr. Roosevelt was asked why he selected two years as the time limit for which NRA should be extended. He replied that the recovery agency still was in a re-as an evolutionary stage that might have to be changed from time to time. As an example, he cited burned.

Grey Nuns Decline Under Order Rules

North Bay, May 25.—Not from any personal with, but because they are forbidden by the rules of their order, the Grey Nuns of Manitwa hospital, in the Pembroke diocese, have declined to take over the duties of nursing the Dionne quintuplets in the Dafoe hospital, Judge J. A. Valin, one of the guardians, announced.

The Grey Nuns offered to furnish a home for the babies in the Manitwa hospital, but were forbidden to care for them in the Dafoe hospital, it was explained.

The guardians were reluctant to accept the counter-order. They, in turn, offered transportation to take the nuns to daily Mass at Corbeil, but Father Valin and Rev. Father A. T. McNally, pastor of Sacred Heart Church at Corbeil, offered to say Mass daily at the hospital, but this offer, was turned down also.

Gettas Suffers Burns in Pavilion Fire

Peter Gettas, of Peterborough, formerly of Belleville, who is a patient in Peterborough hospital suffering from severe burns received when the dancing pavilion in Chemong Park burned recently, is reported as being slightly improved. Mr. Gettas was co-proprietor in the park concession which was burned. It is reported loss of $7,000. As new pavilion has been built on the site of the one

Weekly Crop Report

Winnipeg, Man., May 25.—Over Western Canada crop growing regions cool cloudy weather with scattered showers prevailed during the early part of the week. Some districts also had very high winds which caused soil movement but the last few days have been warmer and growth has been good. Many fields are now showing from two to three inches of growth with stands even and strong. Grasshoppers are commencing to hatch and control methods are being practiced in infested areas. Wheat seeding is practically completed while oats and barley vary from about fifty percent., the Northern districts to total completion in the more southerly areas, according to the weekly crop report of the agricultural department Canadian National Railways.

In Manitoba, weather has been ideal for crop growth, being warm with no frost at night. Seeding is almost completed and from some of the lighter soil areas come reports that good rains will be required early in June to assist in profuse stooling.

In the Dauphin and Swan River territories a few thunder showers fell and from West of Swan River come reports that an early soaking is desirable to overcome soil drifting. Along the Lewvan, Lampman, Avonlea, Gravelbourg, Central Butte, Riverhurst Bengough Subdivisions in Southern Saskatchewan weather has been cool and cloudy with light showers. Land is in good condition and seeding is progressing rapidly. Early wheat is showing nice growth but warmer days are needed this up. Fall rye fields are looking well and there is sufficient moisture for all crop requirements for some time. Some soil drifting has occurred on land which has not been worked but no damage is reported.

From Yorkton West through the Watrous, Biggar, Dodsland Rosetown, Elrose, subdivisions weather has been variable being rainy with high winds followed by good soaking rains which stopped all semblance of soil drifting. Seeding should be practically completed by the end of this week. Conditions at present are promising.

Weather Turns Warmer

From all points along the subdivisions constituting the Prince Albert division come reports that conditions are very good.

Was some rain during the week but weather has turned warmer. Practically all wheat is seeded and good advancement is being made with coarse grains.

Along the Drumheller Oyen, Stettler, Three Hills Red Deer subdivisions in Alberta, weather has been mostly warm with beneficial showers which partially delayed seeding. Early wheat is now showing green. The moisture supply is ample for the present and prospects are considered good. Grasshoppers are now hatching fast but control measures are in full swing.

In North Central Alberta and in the Peace River country, wheat seeding is fast completed and about thirty per cent of coarst grains have reached the seed bed. Weather has been warmer but a heavy rain again delayed work, so that all this territory will finish seeding considerably later than in past years.

A slowing up in demand on American markets for our good heavy cattle is naturally reacted by forcing prices to lower levels on our better offerings. Small finished cattle also are not finding much ready reception and price is somewhat easier. The hog market showed good strength and this strength should be maintained.

PEACE ROLE OF ENGLAND STATED

Premier Ramsay MacDonald Speaks Before New Governor-General

London, May 25.—Proclaiming a renewed declaration of the British Empire's role in the pursuit of peace, Premier Ramsay MacDonald today welcomed Canada's Governor-General designate of Canada, the Premier last night asserted if there was one thing for which the empire could stand in the world's present unsettlement and turmoil, it was peace.

At the same time, it was announced Mr. Buchan, recently created a viscount, received a further honor or. The King has approved his appointment as a Knight Grand Cross of the order of St. Michael and St. George. He is expected to take the oath of office as Knight Grand Cross of the order of St. Michael and St. George. He is expected to take the oath of office as Governor-General at a meeting of the Privy Council.

The dinner was tendered by the United Empire Societies to the Empire Prime Ministers in London for the royal jubilee ceremonies. Sir Archibald Weigall, chairman of the Royal Empire Society, presided.

The Empire, said Prime Minister MacDonald, stood "not for a peace of surrender, not a peace which gives everything because it is afraid to claim the rights to a peace which can come when a people like ours stand as custodians for justice and demand recognition of justice for all other peoples on earth."

1200 Persons Wear National Costumes in Crowland Fete

Crowland, May 25.—More than 1,200 persons in national costume took part in a record crowd-drawing Birthday demonstration and pageant here on Empire Day. Harmony reigned everywhere. National flags and the Union Jack flew over Crowland municipal building with streamers of red, white and blue.

The whole idea for the demonstration was originated by Chief of Police Daniel 'T. Boyd.

Mrs. Jane Grime, 104, was the guest of honor.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"Our Little Girl"
Shirley, It's Good to Know You've Come Back to Cheer Our Hearts

Glorious Shirley Temple, whose natural art is second to none, and who has, in the words of Irwin S. Cobb, "Made more people happy and made more children laugh than any child your age in the history of the world", is here again.

This is said to be Shirley's most touching picture. She plunges into an emotional adventure that sings in the heart as she bravely meets a bewildering crisis while those who are nearest and dearest to her grope in the shadows of misunderstanding.

Shirley's brave smile revives a waning love, when she pleads for her mother to return, and runs away from home to reunite her parents.

In addition to acting, the child wonder sings.

This powerful story again brings to the screen beloved Shirley Temple, and again she is said to prove herself a dramatic star second to none. And as no time does she step below a real child dear to the hearts of millions. Shirley plays almost every scene in the picture.

"Our Little Girl" is said to have all the appeal for young and old, for the young in heart as well as in years. There is a thrilling dramatic sequence between Lionel Butcher spared no expense in bringing a complete circus, big tent, wild animals, elephants and all: "Poodles" Hanneford world-famed clown and rider, Lucio, comedy clowning, riding, falling, thrilling. Other circus attractions are "The Clark Contains" in a swinging act, and the clever Hamboos, a Japanese troupe of balancers.

A fitting cast has been assembled to support the production. Rosemary Ames plays the mother, and Joel McCrea the father. Others are Lyle Talbot as "the other man", Erin O'Brien Moore, Jack Rutherford, Hobart Bosworth, Dorothy Van, Margaret Armstrong, Rita Owen, Leona Carey, J. Farrell MacDonald and Jack Baxley.

Four Short Treats

A very funny Star personality comedy featuring Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson, the Sailor in "Two Alarm Fire", Hollywood Rhythm, introducing a brilliant array of stars and screen headliners, and the Belle Latest Fashion Review, completes a splendid varied array of short treats.

Les Miserables, Coming

Fredric March and Charles Laughton are featured in Victor Hugo's immortal novel "Les Miserables" coming to the Belle Saturday and Sat. Ist. Cedric Hardwicke, Rochelle Hudson, Frances Drake and John Beal appear in important roles in this outstanding screen triumph.

FOUR FATALITIES ON VICTORIA DAY

Holiday Passes With Less Tragedy and Ceremonial Than Formerly

(By The Canadian Press)

Victoria Day passed in Canada with less of tragedy and mishap than usually accompanies one of the most Empire holidays during the warm weather.

In a lake near Halifax, two young boys were reported to have leaped into the water from a leaky, sinking punt and were drowned. At a level crossing near Simcoe, Ont., a farmer's automobile was struck by a railroad train and he was killed. At Ingersoll, Ont., a woman died from drowning herself. In a number of cities children were reported to have been injured or burned from fireworks, but this phase of the day's observance produced no fatalities.

In numerous of the larger and smaller communities throughout the Dominion there were baseball, softball games, cricket, lacrosse matches, and other athletics usually associated with Empire Day, which public officials participated.

Fine weather prevailed in the east, and in Toronto, where the Canadian race track in Toronto, but in Saskatchewan and Alberta there was rain. Boy Scouts paraded at Montreal for the Scouts Lord Baden-Powell, National societies in Montreal joined in the ceremony of placing wreaths at Victoria, Victoria's statue in Victoria Square.

DEBTS NOTICE POSTED

BY JOHN BARRYMORE

Los Angeles, May 25—Oft-repeated rumors that John Barrymore, screen actor, and his wife, Dolores Costello, have separated, appeared to be substantiated as a notice appeared in a legal publication, signed "John Barrymore," giving notice of indebtedness incurred by his wife.

Recently Mrs. Barrymore gave up the family home and went with her children to an apartment to live.

BURIAL CAVERN FOUND AT MIZPAH

Discovery in Biblical City Explains Story of Abraham

Ramallah, Palestine, May 25. — Discovery of a large burial cave in the biblical city of Mizpah, making plain the customs described in the burial of Sarah and Abraham as told in the Old Testament, is announced by Professor William F. Bade, director of the Pacific School of Religion.

The very important materials from this cave are now being studied at Berkeley, Calif.

From the badly crushed and disturbed skeletons, Professor Bade and Miss Bronze and iron ornaments worn by the Bible age people, the archaeologists had found, dated to the years 1200 and 900 B.C. The sixty or more burials included a child. Finally his discovery explained, and illustrate the story of Abraham's purchase of the cave of Machpelah in which to bury his wife Sarah. Certain Cave Canaanites, and the archaeologist explains that Abraham purchased a cave long used as a burial place, and not the one now found at Mizpah.

The cave at Mizpah is revealed as a burying ground used even by the people of Canaan before the Israelite Age, 2000 to 2000 B. C., before they were expelled by invading Israelites in the conquest and settlement of the land. Pottery mingled with human bones in the cave confirms.

Israelite burials in this family cave are also revealed, dated as shown by bracelets and anklets still encircling the bones of the arms and legs. Flying dishes of bronze held in place the garments that have long since disappeared.

The part of Mizpah, or Tell en-Nasbeh, where the excavations are occupied by the more prosperous class. It is inferred from the spacious houses. The cave had been cisterns belonging to some house, and the Israelites had used it for the handles marked with ownership seals. Two of these are those of Ishaiy those of Shebna, official scribe during the reign of King Hezekiah, Professor Bade believes.

Army Control in Austria

Vienna, Austria, May 25.—(UP)—Vice Chancellor Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg attained practically unlimited dictatorial powers today when he was given command of all of Austria's armed forces.

An official announcement said that Austrian army would be incorporated in the "fatherland front" under von Starhemberg's leadership.

VANCOUVER WILL PROTECT WATERFRONT—McGEER

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Wheeling, May 27 (CP)—Five-year-old Marilyn Lou Cantrell is today, victim of fire that lighted her clothing as she held a sparkler at a fireworks display.

Tuscumbia, Mass., May 27 (CP)—Night court was in session in police today, a woman in hospital and two other persons were held for questioning, and quiz on results of picketers standing on automobile near the dam of the Colorado Power Company where a strike has been in progress a week.

Albany, N.Y., May 27 (CP)—Try the game of "Who shot the sheriff in the handsome deer?" Albany police are working "within state the look out" for the unknown guns.

The gash is an iron one in the corridor leading to police court. What's more the padlock was pilfered while court was in session.

Dallas, Tex., May 27 (CP)—The quickest way to get a professional watch in the University Park is to a spouting motor car. Mayor E. Cowan Polk of the fashionable city has decided all youthful traffic law offenders will be given keys and sent to the weed patches to work out their fines.

Albany, N.Y., May 27 (CP)—Two robbers started to build a mine dropped the plunger and two feet along the rather and started again, but only this time they left and started a third, and then a fourth, completing both of the last two.

Then to cap the climax Mrs. Edith Smith (at the age old privilege of changing her mind) told four cops in one need, reversed the field and dropped them on the other.

"Here men" interested, Hilda two of the cops from one of the mens and left Mrs. Hobbs apparently unaware. Chief's handling the other four.

New York, May 27 (CP)—There isn't any romance in the French Foreign Legion—at least not in the case of Corporal Clayton Hoyle Henry Nicolaus De Barnon as he arrived here today.

The red-bearded French officer portrayed his life in the boundroom and dress with slight modesty, long spent touring the desert on police work and fear on virtual leave. He said the Legionaries in the camel corps rarely see or shoot because the animals' noses are so delicate.

Grand Falls, Man., May 27 — (CP)—Lorne Tanner, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Tanner, drowned in a ditch filled with running water near his home during the night.

Calgary, May 27 (CP)—A colt without front legs but otherwise normal and healthy was foaled on the farm of Jack Wells, near Chestermere Lake, 15 miles east of here, this week. Its intends to raise it on a bottle.

Sudbury, Ont., May 27 (CP)—Walter Snider has recovered his 1926 vision in the eye he thought to pay it for at least two years. Stolen last Labor Day, the watch was found in the bush recently. Experts informed him it would be his years before the works was sufficiently dry to repair.

Goderich, Ont., May 27 (CP)—Five Chief George Beacon was fined $10 and costs or one month in Clerks act Saturday in the magistrates room at the Dominion Matching Company. A spark from a large ignited some sawdust. He turned in an alarm. Three jolted the basket brigade and had the fire under control before the fire truck put in an appearance.

Chicago, May 27 (CP)—Nathan Leopold, serving a life sentence for the slaying of 14 years boy of Bobby Franks, hopes to win a scholarship from the University of Chicago through his prison research work.

Professor Perth Lenze, member of the State Board of Parole, said the Leopold case, with "thrill" slayer's ambition, disclosing Leopold's hope for a master's degree in Geology on his query of the questioner: "Do paroled convicts make good?"

Leopold who joined Richard Loeb also serving a life sentence for the thrill motivated slaying of a "perfect crime" by slaying the Franks boy, is a gifted mathematician and linguist. Home his imprisonment he studied at the correspondence course of the University of Chicago.

MOBILIZE 10,000 IF NECESSARY TO PROTECT WORKERS

Mayor McGeer Plans to Accept Challenge of Communists

QUITE OUTSPOKEN

Waterfront Operations to be Carried on at All Costs

Vancouver, May 27 (CP)—Work along Vancouver's waterfront must go on and, if necessary, 10,000 men will be mobilized to keep the waterfront in operation, Mayor Gerald G. McGeer in accepting a challenge which he said came from organized Communism.

The fiery Mayor assailed both international Communists and dictatorships by money in an address last night Mayor McGeer anticipated a state of strife on the waterfront today when longshoremen put into operation the dispatch of their own ships instead of instead of permitting the shipping federation of British Columbia to select those who get the jobs.

"International bankers had worked hand in hand with radicals before to create a condition where martial law had to be declared and a dictatorship established," said Mayor McGeer.

The same thing could occur in Vancouver and "certainly there is no reason on the part of international bankers to complain of revolution and chaos as a part of the road need for a military dictatorship," he said.

Mr. Who want to work on the waterfront, said Mayor McGeer are going to be protected in their work.

Unhealthy For Agitator

"Since I came into office," the Mayor continued, "sentences in penal servitude amounting to more than 60 years have been meted out to white slavers. I consider the Communist agitator of the type to have to deal with in Vancouver is a parasite on society and I propose to make this city just as unhealthy for Communistic agitators as the unfair dealers in white slave and rebellion as we have made it unhealthy for the underworld."

The international bankers know a change of government in Canada is imminent and that both Liberals and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation parties are pledged to policy, which provides for establishment of a publicly-owned and publicly-controlled National Bank. They have every reason to fear the results of the coming election, he continued.

Therefore," said Mayor McGeer, "it is not beyond the limit of possibility that the Price Spread Commission (which inquired into mass buying activities) and all the conflict and disagreements that has developed about it constitutes but a plan to create a feeling of unrest that is being drawn across the trail of the Bank of Canada as an effective means of concealing the establishment of that institution, as the first constructive act of the government of this nation."

KIDNAP THREATS SERIOUS PROBLEM

Many Notes Sent to Boys And Girls Under 21

Washington, May 27 (AP)—J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal bureau now confronts attention of the $200,000 ransom demand for little George Weyerhaeuser of Tacoma, Wash., says a wave of kidnap threats and extortion letters by United States juveniles has become a serious federal problem.

In 32 cases in the last three years reported to the bureau, Hoover says, have closed in on some suspect lured by a decoy ransom package, or the writers and senders were given the questioner: "Do paroled convicts make good?"

Leopold who joined Richard Loeb also serving a life sentence for the thrill motivated slaying of a "perfect crime" by slaying the Franks boy, is a gifted mathematician and linguist. Home his imprisonment he studied at the correspondence course of the University of Chicago.

PRINCESS INGRID

Princess Ingrid of Sweden, bride of Crown Prince Frederik of Denmark, is pictured above in a gown that was worn by her great-great-grandmother, Queen Josephine, step-daughter of Napoleon. Princess Ingrid, the most sought of all European princesses, has been linked by court gossip with more than half a dozen potential royal blooded husbands. But it took her own heart to find Frederik, with her love. They were married on May 24.

RESCUE ATTEMPT ENDS IN DEATH

Child Falls Off Shore and Man Drowned Assisting

Sudbury, Ont., May 27 (CP)—In a courageous but unsuccessful attempt to save the life of Joyce Hornsby, aged 6, A. Masterton, of Sigmond, and child were drowned Sunday in the French River, about one mile east of the French River bridge.

The double drowning occurred about 3.30 o'clock.

Mrs. J. Hornsby, wife of the C.P.R. station agent at Sigmond her three daughters, Joyce, Marilyn and Nancy, aged six, eight and twelve respectively, Miss McNeily, school teacher, and Mr. Masterton, went for a boat ride on the French River. While on the main channel it was found the boat was leaking and the party made for shore and bailed the water out of the craft. In the meantime the children wander-ed along the shore and while playing, Joyce fell off a rock into ten feet of water.

On hearing the alarm Mrs. Hornsby and Mr. Masterton rushed to the rescue. Neither could swim and in his frantic efforts, Masterton went down, the child going under shortly.

The bodies were not recovered until 2 o'clock this morning by Harold Elder and Tom Silver, of Sigwood.

Mr. Masterton is survived by his wife, three sons and a daughter.

Boy's Kerchief May be Clue In Kidnapping

Tacoma, Wash., May 27 (AP)—Finding of a boy's pocket handkerchief, bearing the monogram "G." in hand-embroidered blue yarn, in a trampled patch of grass beside the path which the boy would take in a short-cut to his home, Friends said the boy frequently used the path on his trips to and from school.

Scars on the smooth bark and a broken branch of a Madrona tree bole six feet away from the handkerchief, suggested the possibility that the kidnapper had used the tree to raise himself above a tall hedge to watch for the lad.

PREACHES GOSPEL ONCE RAN HORSES

T. J. Ellis Once Staged Riderless Horses Here in 1925

In September, 1921, he staged the greatest harness race ever in a small place when the "Galloping Single T" the world's greatest paper and the "Single T" together in bowl village, Coeterville, at a cost of $3,000 when a city of people attended. He paid the veteran Pop Geers, world's greatest reinsman, $1250 to bring his champion "Sanford" to Toronto Exhibition Track for one day. The Exhibition paid him $400 to bring four of his guideless racing horses to the Picton Fair in Belleville for exhibition one afternoon when they were raced around the track without drivers in 1925. Now he is preaching the Gospel. Speaks at Alliance Tabernacle, Tuesday, 8 p.m.

BISHOP VISITS CHRIST CHURCH AT ANNIVERSARY

Light Standards Are Dedicated As Memorials

PARISH PRAISED

Canon W. G. Swayne is Preacher at Morning Service

His Lordship Bishop John Lyons of the diocese of Ontario, brought to a close the five-Sunday observance of the seventieth anniversary of Christ Church when he delivered the closing sermon of the series on Sunday evening. Rev. Dr. R. G. Macgregor of Peterborough and Rev. C. E. Clarke of Toronto, former rectors of the church had preached the first two Sundays of the observance of the anniversary and Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne of Rawdon, was the special preacher yesterday.

Sanctuary Memorials Dedicated

Dedication of two brass sanctuary light standards, placed at the corners and some distance forward from the altar were dedicated at evensong. These memorials are the gifts of members of the congregation of the parish.

The standard on the left bears the inscription:

"Presented by Rosa Scott Cockburn, Edith Grace Dorland, Ula Leah Millard to the Glory of God and in loving remembrance of their father and mother, Percy McCrea Millard and Susan Millard, "Ready to every good work". Titus TII-1."

The standard on the north side of the sanctuary carries the inscription:

"Presented by Rosa Scott Cockburn, Edith Grace Dorland, Ula Leah Millard to the Glory of God and in loving memory of their brother Ed sister, Frederick Wellington Millard, and Percy Hawley. "I will see you again". St. John XVI.22."

Dionne Hospital In No Danger From Bush Fires

(By Dale C. Harrison)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Callander, Ont., May 27.—(AP)—Bush fires crackling today along a zig zag front in the direction of the little hospital where the Dionne quintuplets and their parents and a nurse and a physician are sleeping, were declared under control tomorrow.

Fifteen miles away from the fire burning second growth stand of spruce, birch and poplar where the five babies were born.

Because there was no wind during the night to whip it forward, the fire moved slowly. Officials in charge of the fire fighting said there was not the slightest danger to the quintuplets or to any of the babies themselves, for they could be quickly moved if an emergency required.

Men Fight Fire

A dozen or more men fought to check the fire throughout the night, seemingly with little success. Fire breaks were made by setting new fires in the path of the flames. Forces of men were put in these and huge bars are at least 200 yards from the timbered areas and a shorter mile from the fire.

Last evening one could stand on the Argyll Light Infantry pipe and brass bands. The concert was attended by a large number residents from throughout the district.

HOUSE MAY CLOSE BY END OF JUNE

May Authorize Spending of 15 Millions on Two Railways

Ottawa, May 27 (CP)—Fortified by a long week end, members of parliament will today resume consideration of the government's public works bill which has for its early object the furnishing of employment to Canadians who need it most. When the House rose on Thursday night that part of the bill which provides $12,000,000 for public works and undertakings, had passed. Its career through the Commons was a stormy one but finally after holding up votes for the month the House decided Mon. J. P. Pyerchaser, parents of the victim.

In an advertisement in the personal columns of a Seattle Sunday newspaper, the parents asked the kidnappers indicate "another method of reaching you" because of publicity beyond our control."

The army of Federal, State, county and city authorities seeking the boy's safe return meanwhile redoubled their efforts in an attempt to communicate with the parents.

Two Federal men in a fast automobile left the office of Detective Captain Colbert in Seattle on special courses of action relating to "tips" in the case. Others also scoured the Pacific Northwest.

Late last night all lights in the Weyerhaeuser Tacoma residence overlooking Commencement Bay remained burned in one room on the second story.

Jeweler Reports Car

L. H. Burnett, prominent Tacoma jeweler, reported he saw a man in a parked late model coupe with California license plates near the Weyerhaeuser home at 4 a.m. when the lad disappeared as he was on his way home from the school bus junction.

Previously 16-year-old Jean Constance daughter of A. B. Comfort, Tacoma business man, had disclosed that a car followed her as she was watching the school for four or five days. However, she did not see the car the day George disappeared.

Miss Lucille Berg, teacher of George Weyerhaeuser, said she was turning to teach her class today when the lad disappeared. "I could be dreadful," she said.

In response to directions for "The Tacoma Weyerhaeusers inserted two notes in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. The first was expected to be ready to come Monday, the second Tuesday, it was said.

The second asking for a new mode of communication was inserted.

Hideout Some Distance

One police official surmised the hideout of the kidnappers was at least 100 miles away because the ransom note was not received until six hours after the lad disappeared, allowing time to drive to some isolated spot in the mountains or wooded sections of this area and back in return.

Part of the kidnap note was reported "related" to Tacoma police, but they said it was a slip. We don't want to hurt anyone."

Meanwhile the kidnapping might have a connection with the un-

Note Threatening Death Unless Ransom Paid in Two Days Sent Parents

Publicity Beyond Control Causes New Arrangements

TWO NOTES SENT

Police Believe Hideout Some Distance From Child's Home

Tacoma, Wash., May 27—(AP)—Fearful for the life or George Weyerhaeuser, all law enforcement agencies today headed the plea of the boy's distracted family and gave the kidnappers every opportunity to return him unharmed.

The family pleaded with officials apparently because of the sinister warning in the ransom note, which gave them five days to comply with demands.

This was the third day since the child was kidnapped and the note gave detailed instruction on how he would be returned.

The family indicated its willingness "to make the $200,000 ransom payment immediately and sought a new means of contacting the kidnappers.

The kidnappers gave the immensely wealthy lumber family five days to comply with the ransom demand, which contained 21 specific instructions for payment of the money. The boy was kidnapped Friday.

Tacoma, Wash., May 27 (AP)—New contact with the kidnappers of nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser was sought today by the distraught parents in the face of an ominous warning the boy would be killed unless $200,000 ransom was paid. A threat, that death awaits the boy unless the kidnappers are paid within two days was in the words of the note sent Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser, parents of the vic-

Police believed the hideout of the boy's safe return meanwhile remained in the area in which originally the abductors release the young member of the wealthy Weyerhaeuser lumber family.

Detectives grimly paced though the Tacoma Post Office in the hope "The Egoist" who sent his first ransom demand would call for delivery which might again use this means to communicate with the parents.

Two Federal men in a fast automobile left the office of Detective Captain Colbert in Seattle on special courses of action relating to "tips" in the case. Others also scoured the Pacific Northwest.

Late last night all lights in the Weyerhaeuser Tacoma residence overlooking Commencement Bay remained burned in one room on the second story.

The plant was brought to the Editorial Office by Mr. Pearce for examination and it is certainly a freak of nature.

200 Knives, Forks Stolen From Church

Gaining entrance by means of forcing a side window in the basement, robbers broke over 200 silver knives and forks from the basement kitchen of the Albemarle Church over the week end. The thieves apparently broke into the building there early Saturday morning, as the robbery was discovered by the sexton on Saturday afternoon. Inspector Izard investigated the burglary and discovered, where the robbers had forced their way through one east window, making their escape through a basement window, at the north side of the building. The police are of the opinion that the robbery was completed under the cover of darkness as the silverware was removed from the building in a large basket, in which the knives and forks were stored. No definite clues were left by the robbers, police stated today. The knives and forks were the property of the Tabernacle Church and were used for social functions in the church.

INTRODUCTION

"Arabs could be swung on an idea as on a rope for the completed allegiance of their minds made them obedient servants. None of them would escape the bond till process had come, and with it responsibility and duty and engagements. Then the idea was grown and the work ended—in ruins. Without a creed they could be taken to the four corners of the world (but not to heaven) by being shown the riches of earth and the pleasures of it; but if on the road, led in this fashion, they met the prophet of an idea, who had had nowhere to lay his head and who depended for his food on charity or birds, then they would all leave their wealth for his inspiration.

Incorrigibly children of the idea, fickleness and coloured, to whom body and spirit were for ever inviolably opposed. Their mind was strange and dark, full of depredation and exaltations, lacking in rule, but with more of ardour and more perfidie in belief than any other in the world. They were a people of starts. For whom the moment was the strongest motive, the process of intuition courage and variety, and the end nothing. They were as unstable as water, and like water would permit no finality anywhere. Their view of life, in successive waves they had been dashing themselves against the coasts of flesh. Flesh wave was broken, but, like the sea, were away never an inch of the granite on which it failed, and some day, ages yet, might undermine and bring to place where the material world had been, and God would come upon the face of those waters. One such wave (and not the last) I raised and rolled forward. The Arabian world in which I was operating was that which till it reached its crest, and toppled over and fell in confusion. The upwash of that wave, thrown back by the resistance of vested things, will provide the matter of the following wave, when in fullness of time the sea shall be raised once more."

The strange and still mysterious figure of T. E. Lawrence has become, if not the best known, certainly one of the most famous in all the annals of fame during the past the war. An unimpressive, rather

Lawrence (he was only twenty-eight years old) had never regarded himself as a soldier; he liked to make maps and running a secret Arab newspaper, and he felt it meaningless to him to pretend to be a man of action. Yet his Arab revolt was in serious difficulties. The Turks had sent out a formal attacking column from Medina, and the British were in full retreat, being jammed—by the inapplicable principles of orthodox war—into the area around Mecca, instead of using their dash and mobility in the irregular combat for which they were supremely fitted. Meanwhile Lawrence found himself in danger of being politely eliminated, as an upstart, while other men ruined the prospects of his revolt by simply responsible.

His reply was, first to make himself as obnoxious as possible to his military superiors, and then to wait for leave. It was granted with alacrity, in the hope that he could be gently put out of the way on his return. But he did not intend to be put out of the way. He boarded a naval vessel on the way down the Red Sea, ostensibly as a "joy-ride" by Sir Ronald Storrs, member of the "Intrusives", who was making an official trip to Jidda. He was without authority or passes, and Feisal, the principal commander, was in the interior, from which any Christian he was debarred by order. But it was his peculiar talent always to see what he, a staff-captain on the spot, could do for the confused armies of Arabia.

"Storrs and I then marched off together," he says, "to the Amir, and swore that by three sides was the desert way across a square; and my trick to escape from this sense oriental. But I justified myself by my confidence in the final success of the Arab revolt if properly advised. I had been a mover in its conception, and hung my lot in it. The fatalistic subordination of a professional soldier (intrigue being unknown in the British army) would have made a proper officer sit down and watch his plan of campaign wrecked by men who thought nothing of it, and to whose spirit it made no appeal. WEEKEND DEATH TOLL NUMBERS 5

Quebec Plane Crash Causes Death of Pilot

Montreal, May 27—(CP)— The weekend death toll in the Province of Quebec today stood at five. A plane crash at Ville St. Laurent, Que., caused the death of Henri Vien, 26, an employee of the City of Montreal, and the injured pilot, Leiden Gauthier, 30, cousin of the dead man.

James Rudolphs Schults, 28, engineer on a merry-go-round, died from burns received when his clothing caught fire after he had filled a tank with gasoline and then lit a cigarette. Henriette Raymond, 9, of Ste. Genevieve De Pierrefond, Que., met a similar fate when she fell into a bonfire prepared by her brothers and sisters.

A fourth victim, was P. Mocyzcha, 58, window cleaner, killed, when he fell 35 feet from the skylight of an uptown hotel.

Philippe Brodner, 11, was killed and George Geddes, 10 critically injured at South Stukely, Que., when they were struck by an automobile as they ran from behind a street car. Police recovered from the St. Lawrence River the body of a man believed to be Patrick Hughes.

FRANK KENT DIES, WAS LUMBERMAN

President of Firm of Seaman-Kent Well Known

Toronto, May 27—Frank Kent, pioneer Canadian lumberman, died yesterday at his home on Chatsworth Drive. During his career, he founded and built the largest hardwood flooring business in the British Empire—the Seaman-Kent Company of which he was president and general manager for 36 years.

Not content with the limits of Canadian trade, Mr. Kent sought overseas fields and was instrumental in the development of block flooring trade with England.

He was born in Northern Ontario, and as a young man, started his business life in Meaford, Ontario. He opened the first plant in that town and became a leading figure in the life of that community. He was elected mayor there for a number of years.

In developing his business immediately after the war, Mr. Kent came to Toronto to set up a head office in this city, he continued to take an active interest in outside interests. He was president of the Ontario Tourist Association and was particularly keen on the development of tourist business for Ontario. He grew attached to Muskoka Beach Inn and introduced Winter sports there as an annual feature to draw tourists.

He was a member of Timothy Eaton Memorial Church and belonged to the Masonic Order. He was a member of the Lake Shore Golf Club and was formerly a member of the Rotary Club and the Old Colony Club.

SAYS U. S. GIRLS MOST BEAUTIFUL

M. Chevalier Puts Kay Francis 'in Capital Letters'

Paris, May 25.—Maurice Chevalier stage and screen star, said he was convinced after several weeks back in his own country, that "American girls are the most beautiful thing in creation."

He said he would put Kay Francis at the head of his list of beauties "in capital letters".

Chevalier made these comments while packing before leaving for London to fulfil stage and movie contracts. He admitted he was home sick for Hollywood already.

"Don't mention this to my country women—but since I've been back in Europe I am more than ever convinced that American girls are the most beautiful thing in creation," the actor said.

"She has the most beautiful body and face. And when she knows how to dress, she achieves a picture of greater classical beauty than any woman of any nation."

Chevalier was asked to select the six most beautiful women in Hollywood. He shrugged his expressive shoulders and replied:

"I would take me five years. But I can give you a list of the six most attractive women in Hollywood, although some people may not agree. I would put Kay Francis —in capital letters—at the head of the list, followed by Norma Shearer, Ann Sothern, Claudette Colbert, Jean Harlow and Clara Bow, who is still a very appealing woman."

Sudbury, Ont., May 27 (CP)—Turtle weighing 36 pounds and stronger than a bear, a 240 pound man on his back, has been found near Hanmer Valley Village. The turtle is five feet long and 18 inches wide, the largest ever found in this district.

CANDID CAMERA REVEALS FACIAL MOODS OF DYNAMIC RADIO PRIEST

Candid camera portraits by Arthur Sasse, artist-photographer, reveal swiftly changing moods of Rev. Father C. E. Coughlin of Detroit, as he faced barrage of New York newspaper questioners before addressing minister gathering in Madison Square Garden on purposes of his National Union for Social Justice. In opening his campaign in the eastern U.S. Father Coughlin uttered a scathing denunciation of President Roosevelt's action in vetoing the Bonus Bill.

HOLE IN CEILING LETS THREE OUT

Mysterious Break at L'Original is Reported

L'Original, Ontario, May 27.—Forcing a hole through the ceiling of the building in which they were confined, three men, two of them awaiting removal to Portsmouth Penitentiary and the third to be tried today, figured in a mystery jail delivery here over the week-end. Today they were still at large.

The men are: Jack McAuley, Ottawa, sentenced May 14 to seven years' imprisonment on conviction of breaking, entering and theft; Edward Clarke, Chatham, N.B., sentenced to five years at the same time as McAuley, and on similar charges; Leopold Desjardins, who was to appear before Judge A. Constantineau in county court today, charged with assaulting a police officer.

Provincial and county police today were combing the countryside for the escaped men. Late reports were that they had headed in the direction of Vankleek Hill, and this, as well as other clues were being followed up.

Although it is known the fugitives gained their freedom by making an opening in the ceiling, preliminaries to the actual escape are a mystery, according to jail and county officials.

Each was locked in a separate cell at the usual hour Saturday evening. Their absence remained undetected until breakfast time Sunday morning, and when cells were examined the men were missing.

St. Johns, Que., May 27 (CP)—Police are searching here for a large dog believed to be responsible for a raid on a chicken coop when 39 chickens were slaughtered.

FRIENDS HONOR ROSLIN NEWLYWEDS

ROSLIN.— On Thursday evening neighbours and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Suttle to honor them on the occasion of their recent marriage and to present them with a miscellaneous shower. When all had assembled the gathering was called to order and Miss Elsie Rutherford read an address to the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Suttle thanked all their friends and neighbours for their lovely gifts. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

Dr. H. E. Welsh has returned to his home here, having spent the past week on a motor trip to Florida.

Miss Elsie Rutherford and relatives of Maberley spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Donald Leslie.

Miss Jean Logan spent the past week at her home in Dunville.

Mrs. W. Sherry of Thomasburg, spent Thursday evening with her sister Mrs. Welsh.

Masters Donald and Clare Chisholm spent the past week with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Delyea.

TORONTO MINISTER OPPOSES EXECUTION

Toronto, May 27—If society puts the mentally ill in mental hospitals is it not reasonable to expect the same moral ill to be cared for in moral hospitals, asked Rev. Philip Dunlop last night when he spoke upon "What is the attitude of the church to capital punishment."

"That is what our penitentiaries ultimately must become, moral hospitals," he said. "For the life of me I cannot see why we now save a mortally ill man but kill a sane man who has become morally ill."

He referred to the difficulties now being experienced in Vancouver and pointed to the case with which people who feel they are being unjustly used may be fanned to fever pitch by agitators It was the duty of Christians to rise in revolt against injustices and thus remove the danger of unrest which now upsets society and makes victims of its members.

DIONNE STORY IS GIVEN DENIAL

Mrs. Dionne Not Warned Off Steps of The Nursery

Callander, Ont., May 25.—(CP)—Dr. A. R. Dafoe issued an emphatic denial today of reports Mrs. Oliva Dionne, mother of the quintuplets was warned off her daughters' hospital steps Sunday.

The parents of the quintuplets always have and always will have perfect freedom in and around the Dafoe Hospital, he said.

The incident in which Nurse Louise de Kiriline is reported to have stood on the hospital verandah and said "Don't you come up those steps," to Mrs. Dionne never occurred, the quintuplets doctor declared.

What did happen, he said, was that Mr. and Mrs. Dionne came over to the hospital Sunday afternoon with some visitors. Mrs. Dionne walked on to the verandah and looked at the youngsters in their perambulators. Their friends mindful of the regulations barring visitors from contact with the babies did not attempt to come near the infants, he said.

According to Dr. Dafoe there was no friction between Mrs. Dionne and Nurse de Kiriline during the visit.

CARE OF FIRES

Raging forest fires in the wooded country point a moral for those who will be going into the country soon on their vacations. It is the absolute requirement of care in handling fire in the woods or in the grassy areas. Cities may be distant from wooded areas yet many of its inhabitants will be going out into the woodland and lake and river country for their holidays and there will be many camp fires. If there is not care exercised there may be serious conflagrations.

Fires of this character destroy an important source of wealth, the timber may burn down power and telephone communications and hazard cottages and farmhouses and buildings as well as the lives of persons.

Fire is ever a very unruly master, but a good servant. The man in the woods must be the master.

BRITISH PRESTIGE GROWS

Britishers have reason to be proud of the efforts which are constantly being put forth to assure peace to the world. Last week saw another example of the importance of tireless effort to prevent anything which looks like international outbreak.

In a world which has heard recently much of armament building, and which is witnessing strengthening of defences, the peace effort of the greatest of the Great Powers proceeds with insistence. The cry "Peace" does not go unheard. The Britain which has announced its intention of tripling the strength of its air force knows that it must be prepared under present conditions of international fear to meet menace from whatever source such may arise, but nevertheless the Empire moves towards that peace ideal. Armament is today the insurance even the sincerest powers possess in order to assure that these peace efforts may have their fullest opportunity.

The British way is the practical and the ideal outlook. Britishers believe, in the most perfect combination, which Britishers have reason to believe is the most common-sense method of dealing with international fears. They believe that the longer nations can live together without fighting, the greater will be the acceleration of speed to that day when nations will find that peace is the greatest security and guarantee of continuance of peace. The longer peace lasts the greater the feeling of safety.

GOVERNING IN HARD TIMES

The reviewers will be telling us a great deal for the next few weeks about the sociology of the Italian Pareto, which, though published in Italian and French nearly twenty years ago, has just been translated into English. In this great four-volumed work Pareto tells us that he is not trying to reform society or to make any "great invention" of his theories, but only merely to describe things as they are. Some of this description will strike many readers.

There is, for example, a passage in which Pareto remarks that "in periods of rapidly mounting economic prosperity, governing is much easier than in periods of depression." He illustrates this by pointing out that the successful period of the Second Empire in France coincided with the period of prosperity that began in 1854. Difficulties began appearing later on, and he believes that even had there been no war in 1870, the empire would have encountered very serious dangers. There were plenty of troubles for the later Governments not only in France but in other countries. "More or less everywhere in Europe, that was the heroic age of socialism and anarchism." Even Bismarck had to take exceptional measures to deal with the Socialists. In Italy the period culminated in the revolt of 1898, which was quelled only by force. From 1898 down to 1913 (the year he was writing), Pareto found another period of comparatively good government.

He concluded also that the democratic Governments which were keeping in power at that time "less and less by resort to force and more by a very lavish and expensive art of government" had a very urgent need of prosperity in order to carry on their activities. He conceded that even the older Governments which relied mainly on force began to totter whenever want cruelly asserted itself, for then their force was met by another and greater force born of despair. But "to drive a despot's subjects to revolt, economic sufferings far more serious were required than are required to cause a Government nowadays to lose an election."

Had Pareto lived until the present day he would have found abundant confirmation of these generalities. The rise of dictatorships in recent years, it seem probable, has been less a return to that "age of Caesarism" predicted by Spengler than a comparatively short-lived response to an unusually long and intense depression.—New York Times.

MAN OF MYSTERY

THE TRAGIC DEATH of T. E. Lawrence, (Lawrence of Arabia), has caused a wave of regret to flow 'round the world. No more interesting or mysterious character adorns the pages of history than this modest Englishman who went boldly out in the desert during the Great War and became an Arab to all intents and purposes in order to swing the fierce fighting desert tribes to the side of the Allies. He lived as an Arab, looked like an Arab and became an Arab to all intents and purposes, winning the respect and esteem of these fierce fighting men of the desert, at the same time removing an ominous threat to Allied aim, and bringing welcome assistance in places where it was sorely needed.

Lawrence of Arabia has always shunned publicity, and one of the books written by him was restricted to a limited subscription edition of one hundred copies and eagerly snapped up at ten thousand dollars each, but at no profit to himself.

Lowell Thomas, traveller, author, and radio commentator, a personal friend and associate of Lawrence in the Far East, wrote a Best Seller in "With Lawrence in Arabia." Since the death of Lawrence, a London, England, newspaper cabled Lowell Thomas an offer of five thousand dollars for the second newspaper serial rights of his book on Lawrence. This offer was refused out of consideration for the relatives of Lawrence, who, Mr. Thomas thought, should be the beneficiaries of any such commercialization. The offer was renewed with the result that Lowell Thomas finally agreed to grant the London paper second serial rights to his narrative, "With Lawrence in Arabia" on condition that the remuneration agreed upon should be paid over, not to Lowell Thomas, but to the aged mother of "Lawrence of Arabia," who left little or nothing of those tangible things which can be readily exchanged for the comforts, necessities and luxuries of this world—and this despite the fact that Lawrence had been offered huge sums for intimate stories of his experiences and achievements.

Lawrence was the author of several books, published without profit to himself, including "Revolt in the Desert" which describes his successful efforts to organize the Arab tribes hostile to each other in opposition to the Turks, during the Great War, which resulted in Allenby's great campaign in Palestine, the capture of Jerusalem and Damascus, and the complete defeat of the Turks and their elimination from the Great War as allies of Germany.

All this is the more interesting to the readers of The Ontario Intelligencer in view of the fact that the management of this newspaper has secured the rights of publication of Lawrence's own book, "Revolt in the Desert," which will appear in serial form in this newspaper, beginning today (Monday).

QUEEN VICTORIA THE GOOD is still remembered with affection, although she long since exchanged her earthly throne for a greater and grander one up yonder, if there are thrones and graduations of rank in the Never-Never Land. General observance of Victoria Day is one of the finest things in history and an event which stands out alone and unique of its kind, going to prove that the good folks do lives after them eclipsing the evil rightly buried with their bones philosophers to the contrary, notwithstanding. How eagerly the "Old Gang" used to look forward to the 24th of May, the first summer holiday and how fiercely did we sing "Twenty-fourth of May is the Queen's Birthday, if they don't give us a holiday we'll all run away."

HUGE BUYING WAVE IS PREDICTED in the United States, with repercussions in Canada, no doubt. This hint comes from the convention of National Association of Purchasing Agents, and what that body don't know about buying is nobody's business. Why if the members of the association just step up their own buying a notch or two the general effect is tremendous. Of course, the germ behind the prophesied big buying is the proposed two or more billion dollars bonus payment to war veterans bill, which Congress has passed but which President Roosevelt and the United States Senate are determined shall not become law.

MANY PERSONS IMAGINE THAT THEY ARE ILL

Those Who Suffer Imaginary Ills Are Called Hypochondriacs

(By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D)
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Every person numbers among his acquaintances one or more individuals who seem to be continually sick—at least they claim they are. These persons are designated as victims of hypochondriasis, a chronic state of mild depression characterized chiefly by anxiety concerning health.

An outstanding trait of all hypochondriacs is the shifting of anxiety and attention from one organ to another, first they worry about the heart then they think they are short of breath and must be developing tuberculosis; a digestive disturbance may rise to the notion that they have cancers of the stomach, possibly cancer. And so it goes. One thing after another harasses them almost beyond belief.

The hypochondriac certainly suffers mentally, and he must not treat his complaints lightly nor joke about him. The interesting feature in all such cases is of course the fact that nothing whatever is wrong with the organs they believe to be diseased.

When a hypochondriac complains of pain in the chest for example, there is no organic difficulty of any kind present; careful examination and tests will demonstrate that fact. This makes the average person jump to the conclusion that the diseases complained of are purely imaginary.

Nevertheless, the patient suffers just as much as if the lungs were diseased, or whatever the organ may be that is supposed to be affected. The trouble, you see, is in the mind, not in the actual physical structure.

In every case of hypochondriasis, there is some maladjustment, some disorder of thinking which convinces the individual that he is physically ill.

When we think of an hypochondriac as being a mental case and not a physical one, we must not judge him to be a candidate for an asylum. However, hypochondriasis and insanity are not identical conditions by any means. Nor can the hypochondriac eventually become insane.

It is true that certain forms of insanity are accompanied by delusions that the body is diseased. The rest of the mental picture, nevertheless—for other symptoms the patients presents — is quiet different from the mental picture which the hypochondriac presents.

Hypochondriasis is really only a symptom of functional nervous disorders which scientists call "neuroses". And, as in all neurotic states, the fundamental cause lies in the unconscious or subconscious mind, in impressions, troubles, shocks, fears self-depreciation in inferiority and guilt. There may be any number of variety or disordered ideas responsible. The person transmits itself into pains and symptoms of disease that simulate the real thing to an astonishing degree.

The hypochondriac is, therefore, a sick person. He is not physically sick, but his mind is ailing. Telling such an individual to forget it or exert his will power avails nothing. It merely makes him feel more different and more stigmatized than ever.

The thing to do is to encourage the man or woman with so-called "imaginary ills" to seek the help which modern analytic psychology can give.

DR. BISCH'S DAILY DIET HINT

Buttermilk should be carefully to eat food that is readily digestible. After all, increased assimilation of food products is needed for conversion into milk. Overeating should be avoided, however. The extra nourishment can readily be obtained from drinking two pints of additional fluid each day, preferably milk.

Three-Cornered Battle for Next Best Place in Standing Holding New York Giants Up

Dodgers, Cubs and Cards Are in Merry Tusle

TIGERS LOSE

Shoved Back Into Second Division by Win of Yankees

If anyone wonders what is holding the Giants up at the head of the National League despite the plague of injuries that has hit them a simple answer is found in the three cornered battle for the next best spot in the standing.

Since starting and losing most of their infield enroute, the Giants have won two out of three games each in Cincinnati, Pittsburg and Chicago and yesterday continued their triumphant progress with a 5-4 victory over the Cardinals and both famous Deans. Meanwhile the Dodgers, Cubs and Cards are engaged in so keen a dogfight that not one of them has been able to threaten the leaders and Pittsburg Pirates have been threatened likewise up to the end of each of them down into the second division.

New York had to go to the ninth inning to collect four runs off Paul Dean and brother Dizzy who relieved him when the going got tough and nicked for a walk and a hit that meant the ruin of Brooklyn's 8-3 triumph over Philadelphia Leafs behind the pitching and four Dodger errors. That put them a few points in front of Chicago by a half game up on St. Louis.

Pirates Cut Margin.

The Pirates, meanwhile, cut the St. Louis margin to a half game as Cy Blanton pitched them a 3-2 victory over the Phillies for his seventh triumph of the season. He granted only seven hits and fanned nine to beat the six-hit flinging of Rookie Ray Prim and Curt Davis. Babe Ruth, who belied three home runs at Pittsburg Saturday, couldn't repeat against St Johnson at Cincinnati and the Reds won 6-3. The Babe fanned three times and fouled out once.

The almost-daily exchange of fourth and fifth places between Detroit and Boston was the only alteration in the American League standing. The Red Sox moved back into the first division by downing St. Louis Browns 8-7 after Wes Ferrell had been pounded for six runs in the first two innings. The Tigers could not cope with the left-handed pitching of Rookie Vito Tamulis and took a 2-0 shutout from the second-place Yankees. Joe Sullivan also pitched brilliantly but was tagged for a homer by Bill Dickey and wildpitched the second run home.

The victory enabled the Yankees to increase their margin over Cleveland to 1½ games as the Indians took a 5-4 setback from Washington. Walter Stewart, former Senator, was pounded freely by his ex-teammates and went out after the third. Chicago's pace-setting White Sox were carried to ten innings and won only when Manager Jimmy Dykes took charge and belted his second homer of the game with one on base to give "Silent" Bill Dietrich a 6-5 decision. Second scrapper, his seventh successive triumph. Bob Johnson smashed his tenth circuit blow for the A's to capture the major league lead.

JACK WILSON IS JUNIOR TITLIST

Student of St. Michaels Wins Three Events at Kingston

Jack Wilson of St. Michael's Academy won all three junior events at the district track and field meet of the Ontario Athletic meet held at Richardson Stadium in Kingston on Saturday and also was awarded the Canadian Legion Trophy, emblematic to the best work of the day and also the right to compete in the provincial finals in Toronto next month.

Wally Hilton, of the B.C.I. & V.S., took first honors in the senior shot put, javelin throw and discus while F. O'Neil of the same school won two events in the intermediate class, neither coming up to the standard set by the commission and therefore failing to qualify to compete in the provincial finals as did Wilson. Trenton athletes competed well at the meet, especially in the intermediate events.

Commissioners W. J. Mills of Belleville, and A. E. Lyon of Perth, were in attendance at the meet, which was handled by Charles Hicks, secretary of the Athletic Board of District or Queen's University. The results—

CURRENT SPORT
DAY BY DAY

The management of the Stewart-Warners announced over the week-end the postponement of Wednesday's regularly scheduled Oshawa at Belleville O.B.L. fixture. The local ads felt that there being no daylight saving and the half holiday not going into effect until next month, it would serve the purpose just as well to postpone this till until later in the season. The game will be played as part of a proposed two game set Civic Holiday, and a double-ender as a twilight fixture later in the season. Incidentally with this change the "Radios" will not have another home-game until June 3 when the league champion Peterboro "Sea Horses" drift into town. In the meantime the locals journey to Oshawa on Saturday next and to Kingston on the King's birthday.

During the progress of Friday morning's game Mayor Tice accepted a fine large trophy, donated by the National Billiard Parlors, and to be given annually by the Belleville latter after the best batting average during the season. "Jimmie and George", the two lads who operate the National Billiards, are well known sportsmen in Belleville, always behind good clean athletics...For instance the trophy in the well worth winning...It is a silver cup standing 26 inches high and set the boys back over a quarter of a century bank note...The cup is donated for annual competition. Incidentally "Soxy" Gray won the 50 cigarettes put up by Eddie Thomas for hitting the first single of the game...Eddie's offer of an additional 50 cigarettes for each extra base went wanting, however, as there were no extra base hits registered, the pitchers being rather stingy with base hits on the hollday.

B. A. Fanning's intermediates bested their fangs at Gananoque to dampen the home club's open day set-up when Bud Wilkins buried two in the ball on Friday. Maybe Wilkins took in the morning game here and saw Jack Williams silence the Belleville-Smith-Daly aggregation's bats by hurling a two hitter. At any rate Wilkins was not to be outdone as he stepped right into "Gay" and duplicated this feat. While the Gananoque and the intermediate ballsters were making merry on the holiday the newly organized Kiwanis Junior League opened hostilities with a double header at the Exhibition Park. Reports from the scene of activities inform us there is plenty of good raw baseball material among the four teams composing the local junior loop. Apparently the kids are interested in baseball and it is our humble opinion that they should be afforded more opportunities to learn the rudiments of the game in a more lengthy schedule than has been adopted. Of course this local town league idea among the juniors has not been successfully carried out locally since 1931 but then there seems to be plenty of enthusiasm among the players and if the B.A.R.A. expect to retain that enthusiasm, they must assure the kids plenty of baseball games. There were nearly sixty kids, all under 20 years of age, who took part in the opening games on Friday. All they need is a chance to play.

The Kingston sport scribe Bellamy Johnnie Kerr's mighty smash to centre field in Kingston certainly went for a homer, and a clean one, by saying that Kerr must have shut his eyes and swung. That's a laugh because Kerr had worked Clancy into the well-known "three and two" hole, forcing Clancy to "groove" the last one. How Kerr plastered that one in the centre is now history, but if Johnnie shut his eyes, what has the Kingston writer to say about the Pony batters who could only garner two hits off the deliveries of Williams, one of them being of a rather scrubby nature? They must have all had their eyes shut and then again the Kingston writer recently penned a notation something about "Williams not being fussy regarding batting against the Ponies". Maybe's forgotten the reverses Williams handed the Ponies last season right at home.

Conditions in the local wrestling circles are becoming worse, insofar as procuring an opponent to beat Al Dunlop is concerned. Ever since last Thursday night, when Dunlop showed poor sportsmanship in taking the advantage over the injured Johnnie Cyrzfty to gain a fall and incidentally badly injured the Hungarian, the local Kiwanis promoters have been literally burning the wires to procure a suitable opponent for Dunlop. Some want to match him with Dan Petroff, which would not be a bad idea, while others lean towards Jack Kogut, the ex-Canadian light-heavyweight champion, who is still known and liked among local wrestling fans. At any rate the local promoters are left in the lurch for a suitable opponent for Dunlop before Friday night, as they feel the fans want the Cleveland badman "done up".

Judging from the turnout at Friday night's bout wrestling game local fans cannot just warm up to Canada's national game, and why, we cannot say as box lacrosse carries as much excitement as any sport in the land, while there is plenty of speed and science to the pastime as well. Of course, the Saturday night was much too good for the Ajaxian team, but then it was a treat to watch such a smooth-working team as the "Grads" in action. The future of box lacrosse in Belleville is very uncertain, that is after the poor turn out of fans on Friday.

The Belleville and District Senior Softball League swung open on the holiday with all local teams winning, but not before three tight smart games had been played. For instance the Alemites downed the Tweed entry 10 to 3 right in Sam Curry's stamping ground, but the score does not altogether indicate the play, as a tidy battle ensued. Glen Bowyer was touched for only 7 to 3 victory over at Redneryville while the home game saw the Young Canada Club easily down the St. Paul's A. C. in the openers. Tonight Tweed comes to town while on Thursday a double header will be staged, one game at Central Park and the other at the Alemite field. While only a subject of outlook we might inform those interested in the elevation of the pastime, that it is practically impossible for us to attend or report, in person, all these games but if the score cards are left at Bill Cook's cigar store the night of the games we will gladly publish a full account of all games played.

What's this we hear—"Babe" Ruth has to his credit? Yeah, it's a fact. Big Bam surely went to town in a big way on Saturday when he thrilled the Pittsburg fans with three home runs. "There's life in the old dog yet."

Kingston Ponies were the only club in the C.O.B.L. to fall in winning its initial home game, as the Oshawa "Brewers" turned tables on the Peterboro "Puddlers" on Saturday to win 8 to 1, quite a reverse after having a ten to four drubbing the day previous, but in reality it only goes to show the relative strength of the clubs in the C.O.B.L. this year. As one old fan stated Saturday and Friday to be exact, "we're going to see some of the best baseball in years in the C.O.B.L. this season." And take it from us, fans, the old cooger was absolutely right. "Baseball days are here again, for the old Central League."

COUNTRY CLUB

The Bay of Quinte Country Club members took full advantage of the ideal weather which prevailed during the Victoria Day holiday and turned out in large numbers to participate in the golf sections Hit and Hole Ball sweepstakes competitions which was won by Mr. F. Greer Roberts. The tennis courts were also well filled with members participating in an open tournament which resulted in the following winners:

Men's singles—Mr. W. C. Johnstone.

Men's doubles—Mr. Fred Fisher and Mr. W. C. Johnstone.

Mixed doubles—Mr. William Hurst and Miss Betty Hisey.

The Kinsmen's dance which was held in the club house on the preceding evening was a most enjoyable affair, guests to the number of 200 enjoyed the music by the Commodores until the small hours of the morning.

FORGOTTEN CITY

● If newspapers were to stop, this city would practically be forgotten.

You would quickly realize how much we all depend upon our daily publication. If daily newspapers throughout Canada were stopped, communities would be upset and disorganized—ordinary trade paralyzed — the populace panicky and easily misled.

The universal communication maintained by the Daily Newspapers nourishes and stimulates our social, business and economic structures in countless ways—and is necessary to their healthy functioning. Daily Newspapers have established and have sustained spot markets everywhere—that all may contact the publicand cultivate its goodwill.

TANGLED LIVES

By ANN FORESTER

Her will was battling with his own—refusing to be guided by him, by what she got out of time. She stumbled.

"I'm sorry—" murmured Jim Keith automatically.

He had a glimpse of violet eyes dazed by a jab. She was furious that he should apologize for her mistake. Little fury—she would not even allow him her mistakes!

It was ridiculous . . . absurd, the man told himself. They were acting like a couple of badly behaved children. He must be imagining this unreasoning antagonism.

Then a hot gust of anger swept away his cool reasoning. His face went white and his eyes blazed. A surge of primitive masculine wrath surged over him. Little devil—fight him, would she? . . .

He tightened his arms, almost lifting her to him, forcing her to his own step. Holding her close, so that the rhythm of the music coursed through both of them, and they moved to its measure as one.

Her eyes flashed to his, eyes gone black with smoldering excitement—was it anger?

Pater—Sander —the jungle-beat of the music pounding through his blood, making him all the more acutely aware of the woman in his arms.

Thrilling—glorious to make her obey like this . . . His will imposed on this slender, maddening creature. . . .

The music stopped with a wail. Stopped abruptly, dropping them back with a sickening reaction into the crowded social hall of the Neptune. Babbling conversation rising on all sides of them.

Joyce found herself bowing and smiling automatically to the slick Mr. Peters. Mrs. Gordon-Ray. She caught Jim Keith's eye and archly smiled.

Stay in here and listen to Inanity for the rest of the evening! . . .

The man swore under his breath.

"It's beautiful on deck . . . Want to get a breath of air?"

Jim Keith never knew whether she answered or whether she simply turned and walked up the stairs with him.

col 1 co'RIght? nyeugn-otius ryt

Out onto the deck—where a tropic wind breathed on their faces soft as a kiss, a mysterious moonlight sea stretched away to infinity. Out on the deck, where the steamer chairs were crowded and dark figures lined up at the rail.

Maddened exasperation leaped in Jim Keith's soul. In a sort of stiff daze he turned to the girl beside him.

People confounded people everywhere! Want to come down to the bow? . . . At last we'll be by ourselves.

A mad thing to say—but it was a mad night. Still in that strange silence, Joyce turned and went with him.

Strange and dreamlike, to be walking down the deck with her like this; dream-like to be held so close and back on his family tree— there had been a Celtic grandmother who had endowed Jim with something of her own mystic half-sad nature.

This night was touched with magic— and touched with magic, too, the girl who walked beside him. Joyce had chosen to wear a dress of this blue—the far-off mysterious blue of the sea. In this light it faded into the tone of the water and the sky so that she seemed of a piece with them.

The moon was so bright that it filled even the shadows with an underlying misty light. The ring could not tell where water ended and sky began. It seemed to the man that they moved through the heart of a gigantic opal. A strange, dreamlike exhilaration, which they floated in dizzy light.

Joyce and then the man steadied the girl against the movement of the boat. He dropping his hand quickly. She was trembling.

Still without a word, except a curt warning to mind her step, Jim Keith unhooked the chain across the companionway leading to the steerage deck when again he drew his hand away.

A different world . . . down here so close to the water that the silver moon-beam-black flash of it seemed surging over the rail, and the moist smell of it twitching at one's nose.

A dim light in the passage which led to the steerage cabins, but back did form portholes on the deck, on steamer chairs, on the closed hatches told of the steerage's fight for cool sleep.

Standing among the sleeping coolies —the emigrants of many nations, swapped cocoon-like in their blankets. Joyce was like the visitor from another planet. On her impulsive way she had caught up the chiffon cloak which matched her dress. This swathed her in misty chiffon. Above it was her face, pearly white and very sweet in this half-light.

"Don't weaken—we're nearly there —" Jim Keith did not recognize the voice which he tried to make light and reassuring.

He took her hand and helped her over a pile of chains, up the temporary ladder . . . They were in the low—dim! away from the rest of the seething world— alone in with the night.

Strangely still, save for the rush of water across the bow. Even the engines did not throb out her; and the music of the social hall was all swallowed up in the immensity of the night.

A dim strange world—dizzy with opal light. The space was crowded with bulky forms— scores of steamer chairs—rolls of canvas—coils of rope.

By tilting her head Joyce could make out the bridge and the tops of the ship's funnels bulked black against the sky.

Suddenly, gone strangely weak, she leaned on the rail beside him. MOON AND THE TIDE

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

A moment filled with the rush of water and the smell of brine. Above the wide dim space of the sea bent the opal dome of the sky, the full moon stroked with the silver fire of falling stars. A heady moment . . . a moment without space and time . . .

"It's different planets!" Joyce heard him say hoarsely. "It's an entirely different world."

"I feel that way when I come down here," the man assented.

Standing close to her, Jim Keith's face was so intense of perspective that you know. We're all so close to the moon. Like—like being held suddenly with his face too close to the little protuberances. Like clutching to step back and see things in proportion. What we call reality is only a picture composed to that—"

Joyce felt, rather than saw Keith turn his head to look at her. Frowned. She—

His words were coolly philosophical but a slight tremble ran through them as though his heart shook his voice. Joyce felt that he was taking refuge in speech; not daring to be silent alone with her here in the wind and the night. Silence, she realized, would be dangerous.

"Look— we're sailing right into the stars—" She pointed ahead to the horizon. The slight movement caused the chiffon cloak to slip down from her head, fall on Keith's own hand where it rested on the rail. Soft and clinging . . . like a spiderweb, thought the man.

"What planet are we sailing for?" he asked in a studiedly light tone.

"That bright star, of course—the brightest of all—"

A sweet and dangerous sense of his nearness throbbing through her. She felt that her light laugh was too high pitched for naturalness.

"I picked the largest and brightest one . . . Suppose we landed on it in some miraculous fashion . . . like the hero of a Jules Verne story."

"I remember a book I read as a boy . . . about a visitor from Mars. And all the inhabitants of Venus —pictured it as a man- marshy twilight sort of country peopled by a race of gentle giants. I used to play at acting out the book, with my cousins. We'd be Martians for days at a time—unsuspected by any one else, of course—"

Keith broke off abruptly as though memory rushed down upon him. Memory too bitter-sweet to be spoken of, even casually.

Then the silence was upon them, the silence which Joyce had dreaded. The flimsy barrier of their words was crumbling. Crumbling too, the sense of ease between them —the light friendliness.

The old feeling, half fascination, half dread was swaying her. The thought of the other life—of Jim Keith on the salon deck, that safe, trivial life, encroached —breathed up the solitary beauty of the night. This was madness—to come away with him like this! Fearful anger shook her . . . she was like those other women—he was making a slave of her. Speak! she commanded herself. Say something cool and graceful—pull him to his place and then stroll back to that world where she belonged. . . .

She remained limply leaning on the rail and silence like a dark pool grew between them.

Rush of wind and water, Dark water swirling past the ship down there below her own clasped hands on the rail. Dark water—lifting to the sky . . . the moon, calling the tide. Her heart was . . . lifting on a deep strong tide which she could not control—her blood —surging to this man's . . .

Even though she was staring straight ahead, Joyce knew that Keith was watching her. And as though she saw herself through his eyes, she was somehow aware of the wind sweeping her hair back so that the cameo-line of her profile was blocked against the night.

This silence between them was prolonged beyond safe limits. And she was trembling . . . Say something—anything—

She lifted her head sharply, and her startled eyes found a face much nearer than she had thought. Dim white face . . . dark intent eyes . . . A lightning play of emotion between them, then all of her barriers went down.

She heard what sounded like a sob as he gathered her in his arms, and only afterward did she realize it was her own voice.

The night was a tangle of black and silver fire . . . sweet high fire surging through her as his mouth crushed on her own.

Something avid, in that first kiss . . . something of the savage beast a man dying of thirst would gulp water. After a moment he held her face slightly away to watch her. Her eyes were closed the lashes making dark shadows on her cheek. He saw the sweet tortured line of her mouth, and knew he felt that hurricane sense of power leap in his heart.

"Look at me," he ordered.

Her lashes lifted. Her eyes looked up into his own, and there was torture in this dim light. Then he saw that they were filled with tears and he kissed her again.

She clung to him, tense and desperate. Swept away from her moorings of pride and antagonism, her heart lifting as blindly and surely as the moon draws the tide.

"Tried to hate me, couldn't you?" And I tried to hate you, . . . I'm sure I don't yet, . . . Do you hate me, Joyce?"

Keith's low voice beat through her as the music had done through her when they danced. "Answer." me, Joyce. . . .

"Oh . . . I don't know . . . I don't know. . . ."

"I've fought you, Joyce. Since the first time I laid eyes on you. Fought the thought of you—like the devil. I've felt the antagonism between us. Your will—and my will clashing, like a sword duel. You hated me—haven't you? Haven't you?"

Jim Keith felt the slight nod of her head.

"Do you hate me now?" Close against her cheek.

"I love you . . . Oh, yes . . . God! I love you . . ." A low inaudible voice which she did not recognize as her own, which seemed to be around his neck, drew his lips hard to her own. Keith and herself, closed away from the world. Keith and herself, closed away from the world. Rushing on the wild glad surge of joy when he felt her kiss.

The swirling black and silver world . . . the wild tide that was in her heart. Her own voice: "I love you . . . God, I love you!"

She had never done that—spoken with such passionate intensity. Her cry had been the hurt wan detachment to life—gone in a mad moment. Another conquest . . . and he would be nothing to her when she had flung herself upon this bed.

Her mind went groping back—whimpered back—seeking comfort and finding only shame.

"I tried to hate you . . ." he had said. "I'm not sure I don't yet. . ." He had fought the thought of her. A stab of joy in her heart at that. She had some power over him then! He had had to fight the thought of her . . . Then her own tense voice beating through memory: "I love you . . ."

She writhed silently in the dark. She covered face with her cold hands. She was suddenly crying, bitterly but quietly. The hot sweet tears of self-pity poured hot and in her heart. Cold loneliness was growing here—growing—

"Ready for breakfast, Joyce?" "I don't want any—"

"What's the matter?"

"Nothing's the matter, I just don't want any breakfast."

Kitty's sharp blue eyes went over the girl. "You'd better have a cup of coffee. You look pale."

"I didn't sleep well last night ..." Joyce stole a look at the mirror. She did look pale. Shadows under her eyes, and a red droop to her mouth. She patted on some rouge and powder. "I'll be right down."

"You go on down alone. Kitty I'll have the stewardess bring me some coffee right here—"

But when Kitty had gone, Joyce sat quite still for a long time. Then

Nature Builds Your Body—
but you supply the materials.
Health suffers if you run short of iron

Your food and drink are the only materials Nature gets to maintain your health strength and well-being. But the tragedy of modern foods is their shortage of iron. Sooner or later this has an effect upon the health. It causes, at first, a run-down feeling and then ill-health. Finally it develops into serious ailments, if not checked.

40 out of 45 people in a recent test were short of Iron
One month's treatment helped them back to health and vigour

A tiny drop of blood from each individual in the above group was carefully analysed under a powerful microscope. In 40 instances the blood was found pale and paler than it should have been, owing to the shortage of iron. The authority who conducted the test recorded the exact amount of the shortage in each person, then put every one of them on a 30-day treatment. The preparation he gave them was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (called pink because they have a pink sugar coating). When in one month they returned and their blood was examined again.

Rich supplies of iron for 30 days had greatly improved their health. Blood tests proved value of the treatment

When an authority counts the number of red corpuscles and finds the exact amount of iron in the blood . . . no doubt can exist as to the value of microscope proves it! And the gains made by the 40 persons under the 30-day treatment were all recorded! By definitely increasing both the red corpuscles and the iron, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills proved a most reliable tonic and blood builder. This test is a demonstration of what this fine old remedy can do for you, if . . . as is likely . . . you need iron.

Wouldn't you like to feel really strong and vigorous again? Wouldn't you like to rid yourself of that tired, listless feeling? Wouldn't you like to be full of energy and vitality? Then get a 50c box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from your druggist or direct from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Start the treatment today. Remember, you can get Pink Pills in Canada only. Don't be misled by substitutes. Insist on Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Price 50c. 2461

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, May 27 (CP)—Gold issues turned soft, base metals merely held their ground while the silver were mildly irregular despite the firmer price ruling for bar silver on the London market.

McWatters was a feature on the down side, selling off to 1.17, high for the day, and Lake Shore dropped 7.50 to $1.25 but recovered most of the loss.

Perron Gold Mines Ltd. appeared on the board for the first time today, selling at 73 at the opening and drifting down a couple of cents, but later. The company's property is in Quebec.

Trade was slow in the oils. Mid-val showed some action on an advance of half a point to 38.

Selling of McWatters brought a drop of about 15 cents but the issue came back and part of the loss was erased. Little Long Lac sold down to 8.35 while recoveries up to 9 cents were boarded for Pickle Crow, San Antonio, Sisco, Sylvanite and Central Patricia.

Noranda chalked up a gain of close to half a dollar but failed to hold. Sherritt and Falconbridge registered minor losses.

The oils were mainly steady. Anglo selling at 94, Home Oil at 46¾ and Midval at 38½.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 27 (AP)—The stock market again responded to selective buying today and the trend was upward in a hesitant and disjointed profit-taking was well absorbed without forcing further recessions over Europe's gold standard difficulties.

The rally sugars and a number of specialties received the most attention. Allied Chemical and Associated Crystal Sugar Preferred got up about three points each. Others, fractionally up in a point higher, included Union Pacific, Santa Fe, U. S. Steel, Consolidated Gas, Liggett and Myers "B", U. S. Smelting and Public. The last named was among the firms. Transfers approximated 850,000 shares.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, May 27—(AP)—Stocks got a good standard struggle today and the standard rally in the general sentiment refused to be depressed over price trends, generally, were irregular. In the Canadian section of the list, International Nickel rose to a new high for the year, while Pomeroy and Canadian Pacific ruled about unchanged. On the curb, Lake Shore and Hiram Walker were easier. Dominion government bonds were practically unchanged. Funds held even at 100 1-8 cents.

Shares getting up 1 to around 3 points included Allied Chemical, Liggett and Myers "B", Southern Pacific, U.S. Smelting, American Can, Eastman Kodak, Union Pacific and Santa Fe.

The majority of the stocks, oils, rails and coppers were also on the rising a shade in either direction. The utilities were a shade lower. Gas and Electric Service of New Jersey were slightly improved.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 27 (CP)—British American and International Petroleum reported a good deal of market morning advance and Imperial finished unchanged. The Montreal issues and Internet ordinary dropped small fractions.

Brazilian closed above the 10 mark for a gain of about 1-4, O.P.R. and International 1-8 and unchanged and Consolidated-Smelters had something to the good. The minor issues closed about a half point down.

The Agricultural Implement shares recorded moderate recessions.

The oils, Brazilian and Consolidated Smelters presented a firm front on good volume while the general conditions was one of steadiness. International Nickel traded actively without moving away from Saturday's previous close. Base issues gained 1 1-2 to 1st 1-2.

Golds were off the open up gains of 1-4 to 3-8 appearing for imperial. International Petroleum and British American. Liquids on the other hand were weak with Industrial Alcohol A, Hiram Walker and Distillers Seagrams off 1-4 to 1-2 each. O.P.R. was steady and Brazilian gained 3-8, selling above 10. Other strong spots included Canada Bread, Steel of Canada and Canada Malting.

BONDS

Toronto, May 27 (CP)—Saxon hog prices showed further gains and no issues at eight reporting market points showed a decline showed the highest price gain with a 30-cent advance. Chatham was up 20 cents and Peterborough unchanged 100 cars than a week ago, 14 counties. All other prices were unchanged.

Today's prices:

Abitibi 5's: Brantford $9.13; Chatham $8.75; Hull $9.00; Kitchener $8.75; London $8.75; Peterborough $8.75; Stratford $8.75.

Abitibi 5½: MacLaren Que 79

BISHOP VISITS CHRIST CHURCH AT ANNIVERSARY

Lamps Lighted

Rev. G. O. Wright, rector of the church announced the presentation of the memorials and read the inscriptions after which he requested the bishop to dedicate the memorials.

The service was brief, the congregation standing while the bishop conducted the service. The lights which had been relighted up to this time, were lighted and remained burning during the service of evensong.

The standards situated at the northeast and northeast of the altar and some distance forward form a very beautiful memorial.

The rector referred to the kindness of His Lordship in visiting Christ Church for the anniversary service and expressed the gratitude of the congregation and himself to the bishop and read greetings from the Bishop of Niagara.

Church's Record

Bishop Lyons paid to the past record of the church as an encouragement for the congregation in facing the problems of the present and the future. The backward look he pointed out is of little value unless it is as a means of developing the personality to cope with the problems of this age. The congregation he said could not but be gripped by the long history of sacrifice that the past becomes dangerous if we merely drug ourselves in the magnificence of the present and future. We cannot close our eyes to the facts at our present day. He said "The outlook will be better if we have a true view on the past, but must profit by experience. Lack of historical background means lack of balanced judgment.

Spirit of Early Church

"Now the gap is so extensive that the future will be of equal greatness," the Bishop continued. "Christianity must fight to be a light shining from behind out into the future distinctive of Christianity."

Bishop Lyons referred to the Ekklesia church of the first century which had been able to turn the world upside down. He said that to capture the spirit of that church, the modern church with all its resources must be temporarily lost.

"The bishop pointed to the heritage of the Church of England which after one hundred and fifty years in Ontario had accomplished amazing things.

"The Church of England's untold benefit would result from the bringing to the front of the New Testament St. Thomas and Christ Church parishes believed.

"As Lord Bishop I bring you greetings of the Diocese of Ontario, with sincere prayers that you receive your accomplishments."

Holy Communion

Bishop Lyons saw the need of "world outlook" and he scoffed at "nothing short of that will suffice to meet the problems".

Holy Communion followed with a general top of $2.00 cwt.

Prices were steady on handyweight butcher cattle. Weighty steer prices were firm and cows were steady on all other grades of heifers. The few weighty steers in the early sales sold for $7.40 cwt. A few Choice butcher cattle went at $6.25 to $6.75 with plain and ordinary to $5.00. Good cows sold firm at $4.50 to $5.00. Bulls were steady at $3.25 to $4.50. Choice fed calves sold at $7.25 to $8.00 with medium ranging down to $6.00. Common to medium stockers sold from $4.00 to $5.50.

The call on the hog yards was firm at $7.00 to $7.50. Common vealers sold mostly at $4.00 to $5.00 with some at $5.00.

JAMES PATRICK MARREN

Marmora—The death occurred on Thursday afternoon of J. P. Marren at his home here. While he has been in poor health for the past couple of years, his death came as a shock to his many friends.

The late J. P. Marrin was born in Belleville, a son of the late Patrick Marrin and Mrs. Marrin, both of whom were later residents of Belleville and Marmora for some years.

After leaving High School he went for a short time to R. Clement's hardware store in Madoc, and then took a position in a drug store in the same village. Later he entered the College of Pharmacy and graduated in 1904. Following his graduation he held a position in Rochester for a couple of years and later purchased a drug business in Tweed.

In 1908 the deceased sold his Tweed store and bought the drug business in Marmora from the late Dr. Oliver. He was most progressive and successful in business and won the esteem of all who knew him. In November, 1909, he married Jane Rayburn of Tweed and they first took up residence in the home now owned by Mr. J. A. Rose. A year or two later he erected the fine brick residence owned by Mr. W. E. Gould and moved into the house where he resided until his death.

The deceased took a very active interest in all that concerned Marmora and was a member of the town council as president, then secretary of the Marmora Bowling Club. He was also a member of the Village Council at the time of his death and served on the Separate School Board. He was a most devout member of the Roman Catholic Church, and in politics was an ardent Liberal.

Finding his health was being undermined by his indoor occupation the deceased sold his block and drug business to Mr. W. E. Gould in 1928.

The deceased is survived by his wife, his aged mother, now over 90 years of age who resides in Madoc; two sisters, Mrs. Geo. Walsh, Madoc, and Mrs. Thos. Hogan, Windsor, and one brother, Thos. H. Marren of Toronto. Mrs. Frances Marrin, has lived with them since she was a child.

The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon, May 23rd, from Roman Catholic Church at 9 a.m. Interment in Sacred Heart Cemetery.

MRS. MARTHA JONES

Marmora—Following a stroke, which occurred on Sunday and from which she never rallied, Mrs. Martha Jones, widow of the late Orin Riley Jones, passed away on Tuesday. She was born in Glen Ross in 1858 and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Green. Following their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Jones resided in Trenton for a few days and then moved to Marmora where they lived years ago.

During her long residence in Marmora the late Mrs. Jones was highly esteemed by all who knew her and was a member of the Methodist and United Church and until recent years took an active part in the Ladies' Aid and other church activities. She was a member of Marmora Council C.O.C.F. and also of the Women's Institute. Always ready to help in any deputation, yet very friendly and kindly disposed to trouble.

The deceased was predeceased by her husband, Orin Riley Jones, who died years ago and passed away in infancy, one son and one daughter and left to mourn her loss. They are Clifford of Marmora; Mrs. Dorothy Mitchell of Toronto; Ray of Wellington, and Murvis at home. She is survived by two brothers, Morgan Green of Rochester, and Smith Green of Trenton.

The funeral services were conducted in St. Andrew's United Church on Thursday afternoon by Rev. C W. Hollingsworth. Interment took place in the family plot in Marmora Protestant cemetery.

Daily Short Story

HOSPITAL ROMANCE

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Bill Hyde laid down his book and reached for the jangling phone.

"Hello". His face drew into a frown. "Sure I'll go right over. No, it's no trouble at all," he replied as he replaced the instrument in its cradle. "I'll have to hurry back. If I am to get any studying done tonight," he murmured, struggling into his coat.

This night's episode was a repetition of many others, but Bill did not begrudge giving his services to the firm for how they would not go unappreciated.

Several days later he received the welcome though unexpected news that he had been appointed superintendent of one of the large mills owned by his company. However, his joy was short-lived, for he was forced from his work with a nervous breakdown.

Two months he lay in his hospital bed, berating the trick fate had played upon him. He pictured his lost chance to become a still executive after laboring unthinkingly for eight years. His thoughts were interrupted by the opening of his door.

"Is that you, Miss Thomas?" he asked, not bothering to look.

"No, I am Miss Oakley, the new nurse on this floor. Miss Thomas has left us," replied a sweet young voice.

Bill turned to see a beautiful apparition in white smiling down upon him.

"Can I be of any assistance, Mr. Hyde?"

New Comfort

Bill immediately felt a new comfort in his lonely abode. He could only stare at her young attractiveness.

Two weeks passed by, finding them on intimate terms and knowing each other as Betty and Bill. Betty's sympathies were with Bill for he had told her of his long hours of hard labor and ceaseless study to reach his goal, and then oh have it snatched away when he could glean any profit from it. Betty comforted him by optimistically pointing to his come-back although she herself knew it could never be.

The remaining four months of internment served to heighten the love for each other and upon receiving his discharge from the hospital, Bill asked Betty if she cared enough to wait for him till he could secure a position drawing a salary sufficient to support her. She had been too happy to reply well and waved by a nod of her head.

Several days later, Betty realised that Bill could not summon any hard labor for a considerable length of time and said to him, "You couldn't be married on my salary!"

"Absolutely not. I wouldn't think of such a thing," he had rallied angrily.

The next day, Mr. Bennett, the man under whom Bill had worked, visited Bill at his home and after inquiring into his health, remarked seriously, "How long will it be before you can come back to work?"

Period of Rest

"The hospital has strictly ordered me not to exert myself for a few months at least," solemnly answered Bill.

"Thinking that would be the case, I went to Mr. Atkins, the company manager, and after explaining the way in which you worked before you fell ill, he agreed that you should remain on the payroll at your regular salary until the time that you can return to your job," Mr. Bennett continued.

Immediately Bill thought of the girl who had left the hospital and her promise to wait, which would no longer be necessary.

"I don't know how to thank you," stuttered Bill.

"That's perfectly all right," replied Mr. Bennett. "We have been responsible for your present condition and wish to make amends by offering to all expenses paid trip to Bermuda. Of course we will provide you with a nurse to look after you."

Not long after, a crowd of mill workers jammed the docks to see Betty and Bill off on not only a honeymoon.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma got a letter from Ant Fanny while we was eating breakfist this morning, and she opened it and read it, saying to pop, It's an anney to my letter day when I wrote to congradulate her and Albit on their 18th wedding anniversity and assured them that the ony reason I wasn't sending them an appropriate present was because I couldn't think of a single thing good enough to befit the occasion that wouldn't cost a king's ransom.

O yes, I remember that deckument, what does Fanny say? pop said, and ma said, I'll read you her letter.

Wich she started to, being, Dear Pawieon, Albit and I wish to thank you a thousand fold for your uncompanion letter of wich we valued. Do you think that word unaccomplanied was put in with my ulterior innsendo, Willyum? ma said.

Who can say? pop said, and ma kept on reading, saying, As Albit remarked, the spirit of a gift more than makes up for its absence, and he went on to say that if he was drowneding and you were standing on the shore with a life preserver that you valued for sentimental reasons and didn't want to throw out, he was sure that you would wave him a frendly farewell just to prove that you took an interist. And that's a way I feel myself, Pawieon. I mean the spirit is everything and if a person sitting on the lap of luxury cannot use a kindly thawt I am quite satisfied to have my hart warmed even though my purse remains unrefreshed by anything more substantial than a weddy xense. Little Jonsie is having a berthday in 2 weeks and Albit says I ant to remind you in case you have time to send him a picture postcard, even if it's an old one that's just lying around gathering dust as sometimes happen. Your grateful sister Fanny. Does it seem to you there's a veled sarcastic tone about that letter, Willyum? ma said.

Shear imagination, there's nothing veiled in that letter, pop said, and he folded up his paper and left for his office.

TARZAN THE UNTAMED— (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As Tarzan saw the tightly bound Englishman, he half smiled, saying: "They will fill their bellies tonight!" Jerry Cecil grinned: "From the fuss they made," he said, "the beggars must be hungry. They almost ate me alive when they brought me in.

"How did they get you?" Tarzan shrugged his head carelessly. "It was my own fault," he replied. "I deserve to be eaten. Falling from a broken branch, my foot caught and I came down on my head. Otherwise they would not take me alive."

"Is there no escape?" asked the Englishman. "I have escaped them before," replied Tarzan, "and I have seen another escape even when a dozen spear shafts had pierced his body, and the fire had been lighted about his feet."

Lieutenant Cecil shuddered. "Cecil!" he exclaimed. "I hope I don't have to face that. I could stand anything but the fire. I should hate to know that before the evils at the last moment," he added, whispered Tarzan.

Picton—Very successful was the W.C.T.U. convention for the counties of Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Prince Edward, held here on Tuesday and Thursday.

Mrs Candler of Napanee conducted a worship period. Mrs B. Duff, world "y" secretary had charge of a question bee. Mrs. W. A. Foster of Wellington had charge of gospel song and prayer.

The afternoon session included the installation of officers, ably conducted by Mrs. J. McCaffray of Madoc, as follows:

Honorary Presidents—Mrs. N. B. Miller, Napanee, Mrs. O. B. Rockwell, Napanee, Mrs. S. Gibson, Tweed; President—Mrs. (Dr.) Ross Wartman, Napanee; County Superintendents—Evangelistic, Mrs. L. Candler, Napanee; anti-narcotic, Mrs. C. W. Conway, Napanee; Citizenship, Mrs. (Dr.) Ross Wartman; Flower, Mission, Mrs. Fred Payne, Tweed; Exhibitions and Fairs, Mrs. J. Rose of Selby; Little White Ribboners, Mrs. M. Rattan, Picton; Medal Contest, Miss Hettie Unger, Picton; Moral Education, Mothers Meetings, Health and Heredity, Miss S. Way, Tweed; Publicity and Social, Mrs. H. C. Cory, Trenton; Social Purity, Temperance, Mrs. (Dr.) Beesmith, Temperance, Mrs. (Dr.) Keller, Belleville; Press, Mrs. George Hobson, Bloomfield; Soap Wrappers, Mrs. Wm. Emory, Cherry Valley; S. S. Temperance, Mrs. J. McCaffray, Madoc; National S. S. Contest, Mrs. S. F. Hagerman, Belleville; "Picture Bee" Art, Mrs. M. Rattan, Picton; Law and Sabbath Observance, Mrs. Gordon Finlay of Napanee.

Miss L. Candler conducted a membership period. A vocal duet by Mrs. (Dr.) A. N. Hilton and Miss Mae Killip of Picton was much appreciated. Mrs. J. McCaffray of Madoc gave an interesting report of temperance in the Public Schools and reviewed the contests which had been conducted in the county. Mrs. Ward Wartman of Napanee, in presenting the report of the Loyal Temperance Legion made an appeal for more leaders in this department of the work. The report was outlined for this coming year and it was planned to conduct a vigorous campaign along the line of temperance education. The enrolment of life members and honorary members was in charge of Miss M. Reeves of Belleville.

Miss Rosamond Neff, World Secretary, Toronto, was the guest speaker at the evening session and her address in the Presbyterian Church, Mrs. (Capt.) W. Harvey of the Salvation Army conducted devotional exercises and the L. T. L. girls gave a pretty drill. Mrs. S. F. Hagerman of Belleville conducted a contest. Miss Florence Barber of Picton gave a beautiful vocal solo and the "y" girls of Picton presented the play "We Can Build You." Mrs. Fred Pringle, Picton, presented the contest for the constitution committee. A chorus by the "y" choir was well rendered. During the evening many pupils received certificates sponsored by the W.C.T.U. during the past year were presented.

Resolutions

The following resolutions were unanimously passed by the convention:

That we deplore the action of the present government in providing for the sale of beer and wine in licensed stores without proper protection of the sale of beer and wine in licensed stores without proper protection reference of the question to the people but we commend the action of the premier in maintaining the ban and liquor advertising by radio or press and his command refusal to grant licenses to restaurants.

We hereby urge all women to see that their names are on the voters' lists and to use the privilege of the vote.

That we continue the appeal to the Censorship Board for stronger scrutiny of films on account of the demoralizing influence upon our young of many of the pictures featuring.

That we hereby express our appreciation of the press in our educational and other work, acknowledging with thanks the courtesies of the newspapers and the space accorded in advocating temperance interests and sentiment, and that we express our appreciation of those newspapers who have refused advertisements for liquor, tobacco and cigarettes and of the publications of those featuring advertisements of this nature.

We resolve to place on record our appreciation of the effort made by Dr. Marion Reid and Mrs. W. H. Suitt, members of the Toronto Board of Education, in the Educational Plays, having drink scenes out of dramas produced in the schools as reported in the press.

We sincerely regret the removal from the Dominion of Mrs. Margaret Peterson our only woman police magistrate in Canada, and we recommend that she be returned.

We recommend that a book entitled "Mothering Mother," the minutes were read and Mrs. Harold Garrison and Mrs. Bedford Reid appointed delegates to the Women's Association Convention to be held at Wellington on May 6th. Collections for the day $4.65. Closed with the National Anthem and prayer by Rev. Mr. Plant.

W.M.S.

NEW STORY STARTS TODAY

Lawrence of Arabia

The "uncrowned king of three nations," the leader of desert tribes which had been disorganized for centuries! While Luckner roved the seas like a pirate, Lawrence ruled as a mysterious, spectacular potentate in Arabia. Adventurer, poet, mystic, spy, and military genius, Lawrence, at twenty-six, rejected by the British Army as physically unfit, went to Arabia and single-handed destroyed the Turkish Empire! His career has been more eventful, more adventurous than that of any Arabian Night hero. And his great adventure had as its stake the lives of thousands and the sovereignty of great kingdoms of the East. His genius altered the destiny of nations—and beneath the triumphant glory of his adventure, beneath the desperation of his battles and the pawn of his victory, he remains at heart inscrutable, enigmatic. Read his story — told by himself with the fire and the genius of his heroism. It is the accepted classic of our time—read by 200,000 in the United States alone.

"Revolt in the Desert"

By T. E. LAWRENCE

This story as outlined above will start as a serial in this paper Monday, the rights of publication having been secured by the management, knowing as readers will give it an enthusiastic reception and eagerly read the installments—more particularly by view of the recent tragic death of the author, the most attractive and mysterious historical personage of this generation.

Publication starts today, Monday, be sure to read the first installment and you will not fail to read each succeeding one.

BARRYMORES NOW LIVING APART

Wife of Famous Actors Will Likely Sue For Divorce

Hollywood, May 27.—(AP)— The Alvex Hotel was the scene today, by master aboard a Havana-bound yacht, his mistress in seclusion in a motel home.

That the rambling residence may never be inhabited by Ethel and John Barrymore family seemed certain in view of the divorce action filed yesterday by Mrs. Dolores Costello against John Barrymore, handsome actor whose family name is among the greatest of the American stage.

Habitual intemperance and extreme cruelty were charged against the former Broadway favorite by the actress. Custody of the two Barrymore children, Dolores and John Blyth Barrymore, Jr. three, was asked as well as the monthly allowance of $2,000 monthly alimony, $10,000 lawyers' fees and all community property, valued at $500,000.

Barrymore was declared in the suit to have an earning capacity, which, in one year, 1934, exceeded $350,000.

Barrymore's cruise guests include 19-year-old Blanca Mirro who became acquainted with him after writing him a fan note when he was in a hospital recently.

The Barrymores married Nov. 24, 1928. Mrs. Barrymore charged her husband had struck her several times in the last two years, that his home last August against her, wife she said, and had not returned or communicated with her, remaining in New York after travelling in foreign countries.

PUNGENT ATTACK ON LLOYD GEORGE

Biography of Baron Wemyss Published by Widow

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 27 (CP Cable)— A pungent attack upon the attitude of David Lloyd George, then Prime Minister, towards the late Baron Wester Wemyss, first sea lord of Admiralty during the time of the Armistice, is contained in a biography of Baron Wester Wemyss by his widow, published today.

Lloyd George was represented as indignant because the news of the Armistice became public before he had announced it officially in the House of Commons Nov. 11, 1918. The Australian Premier last night denied this as a "preposterous story."

Lord Wester Wemyss became the first sea lord in 1917 in succession to Admiral Jellicoe and signed the Armistice with Foch in that capacity. He also was a member of the British delegation to the

"When the Armistice which entered into force at 11 a.m. had been signed at 5.10 a.m.," says the biography, "Wemyss was ordered by the King to whom he remained loyal, to send a telegram to the Prime Minister. On his return to the room he found Admiral Hope congratulating the Prime Minister on his victory.

"When announcing his arrival to Buckingham Palace, Wester Wemyss had the same task with the Premier, he spent all that afternoon awaiting a telegram but in vain. He deemed it beyond the limits of reason that the Premier should not desire to know what had passed in so momentous an occasion.

"His astonishment turned into amusement when the following day, attending a meeting of the War Cabinet, he received a warning the congratulations he expected, he met black looks and an icy reception.

Part Played by Canadian Militia Told by Speaker

Kingston, Ont., May 27.—(CP)— The part played by Canadian Militia in the development of Western Canada and the improvement of the Canadian Army System were outlined by C. P. Stacey, Princeton University to the Canadian Historical Association Convention today.

"The Canadian people and the Canadian Parliament have shown an active interest in National Defence only in a few great crises when threatened by imminent danger," he said. From this point of view the Fenian Raids were especially important, Mr. Stacey continued.

"The Canadian Volunteer Force was considerably increased during the troubles attending the American Civil War but despite this fact the Fenian raids at the end of the war showed its organization to be imperfect," he explained.

"In particular, the defeat of a column of volunteers in the little battle of Ridgeway in 1866 by a Fenian force, which was decidedly inferior in numbers, proved not only that the cooperation between the regular and Canadian troops was inadequate and that no real plans for defence had been made in advance, but also that the volunteers were badly equipped and insufficiently trained.

"Also half the men of the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto, who were engaged at Ridgway, had never fired a rifle before the battle, before the day of the fight, and all the volunteer regiments had been trained to mere parade-ground movements rather than those needed in actual war.

"As a result of these revelations, reforms were undertaken.

"Within a few years, the efficiency of the force had been much improved. This effective military system was one of the Dominion's greatest assets in its early years.

"It proved of value in the winning of the West, especially in Wolseley's Red River expedition of 1870 and in the organization of the Northwest Mounted Police, a force which in many ways was an offspring of the military service."

THEY MAY RULE GREECE AGAIN

A move for reconciliation between former King George and former Queen Elizabeth of Greece as a preliminary step in the restoration of the monarchy in Greece has been reported in political circles in Athens. This is one of the last photographs of the two together. They have not been in their native land since 1923 when the Greek republic was established.

OTTAWA VALLEY HISTORY RELATED

Kingston, Ont., May 27.—(CP)— Early political history of Ottawa valley was reviewed by Archibald Dr. F. J. Audet, in an address before the Canadian Historical Association in Convention here today.

After a short description of the region, he told of the division of the old province of Quebec, into two districts known as and the establishment of parliamentary institutions.

Dr. Audet in presenting a brief history of the creation of counties for purposes of representation in the new legislature, said that on the north shore and parts of the south shore, the County of York was created in 1792. Immense county extended from the County of Effingham, now Terrebonne, and including the County of Pontiac, on the North Shore, and the present counties of Vaudreuil and Soulanges, on the opposite shore.

It was subdivided by the Act of 1792 and gave birth to new ones:

A new subdivision took place in 1853. At the time of Confederation, in 1867, the old County of York formed no less than six counties, five of which fronted on the Ottawa River.

In Upper Canada, the Statute of 1788 created the counties of Prescott, Russell and Carleton. That of Renfrew only came into existence in 1853, while Bytown was granted separate representation at the time of the Union in 1841.

Dr. Audet concluded with short but detailed sketches of early members of the valley.

PASTEURIZATION RECOMMENDATION IS TURNED DOWN

Council Votes to Take No Action on Proposed By-law

LITTLE BUSINESS

Sufficient Bond Must be Furnished by Sign Company

The City Council at their regular meeting on Monday night took no action with respect to the recommendation sent that body by the Board of Health, requesting, that all milk and cream sold in the city be pasteurized after August 1st and also the petition signed by a number of dealers making the same request. Apparently the question was well debated among the members in committee on the matter, which is because there was no discussion on the matter when the recommendation was read. A spokesman for those against pasteurization only before his address to the board was read by the Mayor "are you delegates here against pasteurization" and being answered in the affirmative, the Mayor stated, "there is no need for an address on the matter, if you will wait a few minutes, you can hear the action of the City Council" When the petition and recommendation were read by Ald. Harry Hill, who was in the chair in the committee of the whole, he also read the notation on the paper, which stated "no action be taken". Asked for the vote, the council carried the measure and turned to other business.

A quarter page advertisement at a cost of $32.50 will be inserted in the Intelligencer Progress being arranged for the coming postmasters' convention to be held in this city in June. Some six hundred delegates will be in attendance at the meeting. The Y.O.M. were allowed to hear on tag day on June 15. P. G. Deeths was given the contract to make the repairs at Number Two Fire Hall at a cost of $125.00. There were several tenders received by the Chairman of Fire. The Mayor will be in attendance at the Mayors' convention to be held in Kitchener on June 11, 12 and 13 according to a recommendation passed at the council.

The Ruddy Sign Company will be notified, that they must comply with the recommendation passed on January 21st, 1935 with respect to the bond for the sign now erected on the Belvidere Hotel by June 8th next. If not the sign will be immediately removed. The Ruddy Company has entered a bond similar to that in effect in Toronto but this is not satisfactory to the City Council, who wishing more stringent regulations with respect to public liability. Miss Elizabeth Gordon was given permission to erect a building on Dundas Street, east side, for a flower stall on the sidewalk. A sewer lateral will be laid on Front Street to permit a property owner to erect a new basement, half the cost to be borne by the property owner. The council then being no further business, the council adjourned. The estimates will be brought down at the next meeting of the council.

FRANCE RAISES RATE TO SIX P. C.

Falling Gold Reserves Stir French to Action

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

By The Associated Press

Paris, May 28 — The government demand for full power to restore France's finances, Louis Germain-Martin announced today, was revealed to the Chamber of Deputies today the gold reserve of the Bank of France had been diminished by nine billion Francs—about $284,000,000 in the last two months.

His plea to parliament followed by one day the bank's announcement that the Bank of France increasing its re-discount rate to 6 per cent from 5 per cent, the bank's third raise in the rate since last Thursday.

Premier Pierre Laval announced the devaluation campaign in France and declared economies and a balanced budget as the way to restore finances. He declared it "unjustifiable and dangerous" to ask a balanced budget as the way to restore finances. He declared it "unjustifiable and dangerous" to ask a balanced budget by because the treasury is temporarily in difficulty."

"There is not a state in the world," he said, "which developed its wealth having tried to balance its budget."

Tacoma, Wash., May 28.—(AP)—Secret service for kidnapers of nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser reached across the Canadian boundary today with "remands of the Arrid Jesse and Machine Gun Kelly Gangs" as possible suspects.

In one of the few partially disclosed moves in the hunt for the gang that demanded $200,000 ransom for the return of the banker's grandson, two Tacoma detectives hurried to Vancouver, B.C.

Vancouver police aid the detectives believed the kidnappings were directed by members of the two gangs who had banded together. British Columbia officers refused to disclose the identity of the Tacoma detectives.

The officers went north in response to a woman's report of seeing a boy, who resembling the kidnapped youngster riding with four men in a travel-stained automobile last Saturday. That was less than 24 hours after George was abducted from a Tacoma street.

A similar tip met with failure today when a group of officers returned to Port Angeles, Wash., after an unsuccessful effort to trace an automobile containing a boy resembling the missing lad.

No Trace of Machine

Although they found no trace of the machine with its three men and a woman, after combing all resorts in the Lake Crescent area, Port Angeles officers remained on the alert on the possibility the kidnappers had sought refuge in the heavily settled forests of the Olympic peninsula.

Officers of the Captain of Detectives at the Tacoma Police Station were closed to all but reporters. Department of Justice investigators were conspicuously absent from police headquarters for the first time since the boy disappeared.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Weyerhaeuser, Jr., distracted parents of the youth, said today the $200,000 demanded for the boy's return was far beyond the family's present funds.

In declaring the ransom demanded was excessive friends pointed out how the lumber industry now crippled by a widespread Pacific Northwest strike, had suffered during the depression.

COUGHLIN OR HUEY OF CANADA?

William Aberhart, evangelist, who is being regarded with anxious eyes by the leaders of the existing political parties of Canada. He is looked upon as a combination of Huey Long and Father Coughlin, another Canadian-born, loose in the United States. Like Father Coughlin, he shows an interest in economics and politics. Like Huey Long he has made a "share-the-wealth" promise his leading plank in a new party, in his native province of Alberta. The party's strength will be tested in the June elections. The basic idea of the new party is to establish a "dividend" of $25 a month for everybody. As a result, foreign residents are rushing for naturalization papers to become eligible for the "dividend."

Board Will Decide Upon Tweed - Bannockburn Line

Tweed, May 28 (CP)—The Federal Board of Railway Commissioners reserved decision yesterday following the hearing to abandon the Canadian National Branch Line from Tweed to Bannockburn, a distance of 22 miles.

I. O. Rand, K.C., and J. F. Pringle, Genaral Superintendent of Transportation, pointed out the branch had been losing steadily, with an operating loss of $7,784 in 1934. "The line is not safe and we were forced to cut off the weekly service temporarily," he said.

Charles A. Moore, Reeve of Stoney township, Frank Reynolds, former Reeve of Madoc; H. P. Purdy, miling man; Reeve W. H. Sayers of Tweed; Dr. Brown, Secretary of the Tweed Board of Trade and others protested against the move to abandon the branch.

50 Gilead Farmers Battle Fire in Bush, Long Swamp

Gilead, May 28.—Considerable excitement was caused in this locality on Sunday afternoon when fire started in the swamp of Mr. Wilmo Clare. Mr. Clare owns the swamp known as the "Long Swamp" on the Shannonville sideroad. The fire built a few years ago and for the men who were employed during the winter months to cut timber was the first to burn and from it the trees were ignited. A crowd of about fifty men was on hand and managed to keep the blaze in check but not until it had burned nearly three acres of bush.

It was only the timely arrival of help which held the fire back and had it gained a few hundred feet further the swamp and valuable timber would have been in grave danger of being destroyed as there were great piles of cedar brush.

Messrs. Leonard and John Walsh were the first to notice the blaze as they were passing on the road and their quick action undoubtedly averted a disastrous fire which not only would have destroyed Mr. Clare's timber but also that of Mr. Guy Leeuwa. There is about 100 acres of valuable timber in the wood lot.

It is thought that a tramp staying in the camp had started a fire to smother mosquitoes and from that the blaze started owing to the extremely dry weather.

WAGE CUT FEARED AFTER SCRAPPING OF N.R.A. CODES

General Johnson Predicts Sweatshops Return

SEPARATE CODES

Reaction of United States to Court's Decision

Washington, May 28 (AP)—Leaders of two large unions — United Mine Workers and the United Textile Workers—say they will order strikes if employers attempt to return to long hours and wage-cut conditions which prevailed prior to NRA.

This was the reaction to the Supreme Court decision scrapping NRA codes.

William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, expected to confer shortly with union leaders.

New York, May 28 (AP)—General Hugh S. Johnson predicted today a return of sweatshops and child labor in the United States was "entirely likely" because of the Supreme Court overthrow of NRA codes.

Reference is Long

"Many concerns will cut wages today," said the former NRA administrator; "I don't know that the decision will result in the loss of all the benefits of the NRA, but there is nothing to prevent it."

The decision, he declared, added enough fuel to the feelings aroused by "Long, Coughlin, Townsend and Upton Sinclair" to just raise hell.

Johnson said one solution would be to write into the law a complete code for every industry. This, he said, he explained, would meet the court's objection to the delegation of power by Congress to the President to determine standards of "fair trade."

Stevens' View

Ottawa, May 28 (CP)—The United States Supreme Court decision that NRA codes are unconstitutional has no direct bearing on the Canadian recovery program, in the opinion of Hon. H. H. Stevens, today. "There is of course a general international significance in such a decisive action by the Washington court of last appeal but the Canadian domestic situation is not affected," the former Minister of Trade and Commerce observed.

Montreal, May 28 (CP)—Decision of the U. S. Supreme Court that the National Recovery Act is unconstitutional, voiding the 150 codes for the regulation of industry, effectively stimulating effect on United States business will not call for a similar stimulus to Canadian business, in the opinion of J. S. Webb, president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, it was learned here as a salutary effect on Canadian business," he said.

Bills To Curb Court

Washington, May 28 (AP)—Two bills to curb rulings by future United States House of Representatives Judiciary Committee to curb the power of the Supreme Court to veto Congressional Acts.

Some call for at least a 7 to 2 vote before a law can be declared

Vigorous, Healthy Quints Start Second Year Life As World Pays Homage

Birthday Same as Other Days of Five Little Tots

CEREMONY PLANNED

Mother And Father Not Likely to Attend Birthday

Callander, Ont., May 28 (CP) — One year ago today from her bed of childbirth Mrs. Oliva Dionne turned a wan, frightened face to the midwife, who stood beside her and asked wearily:

"Were they—triplets?"

"Yes, Marie, triplets—and two more."

That was the drama of the ramshackle farmhouse on the morning of May 28, 1934, that the Ontario government and, by their friendly interest, the people of the world received today with ceremonies, gifts and best wishes—the first birthday of the Dionne quintuplets.

"Triplets and two more," a prematurely, sickly infants them, vigorous, healthy babies now—awoke this morning an hour after their second year of life had started. They were born from 4:30 and 5 o'clock in the morning and it was o'clock today. Yet their cries brought the nurses with their eye-opener of orange juice.

It was to be the first all day for the youngsters—rigid adherence to their day diet and hours of sleep and play. Yvonne was the only one who had a taste of birthday cake. She slole a march on Annette, Cecile, Emilia and Marie recently, and, she slapped, dug her hands into a cake placed before her. Some of the crumbs reached the mark; yet for the normal baby in either weight or height but some of them came close. Her weight Cecile, 17.11 pounds today was nearest. She Yvonne and Emilia, at 27.12 inches, all came with 7 inch of the average height and Emilia and Marie were 1-2 inches away at 27 inches.

No Diet Change

Today she and her sisters will have orange juice, cod liver oil, milk, strained vegetables, codfish mixed all the other things that make quintuplets strong and healthy. They may see beautifully iced birthday cakes but they will be kept out of reach of eager little hands.

The only other suggestion in the nursery of the birthday celebration is flower room of the Dionne hospital will be a germ-free inclosure that will be placed there for seven minutes between 6 and 6:30 o'clock this evening.

Then, if they wish, the famous youngsters may gurgle their appreciation of all that has been done for them by an adoring world. Dr. A. R. Dafoe, physician, who by effort will be made to have them touch or cry—that the success of the operation will be shown by the babies themselves. Whether they will or not, a cable of congratulations from the doctor or the nurses—the only persons, who will be in the intimate circle.

The birthday celebrations started with the sounding of solemn bugle mass sung at Sacred Heart Church, Corbeil—the same church Oliva Dionne and her husband Edouard were married.

Ceremonies Planned

Nothing further has been planned for the day until the ceremonies in the early evening with Dr. Dafoe, Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare, Dr. Fred Routley, Ontario Director of the Red Cross and members of the hospital staff participating.

Judge J. A. Valin, North Bay, Chairman of the Board of Guardians who watch over the young quintuplets, will also will take part with others, who have had a part in the care of the babies from birth.

Whether the parents would attend the ceremonies was undecided. They bitterly resent the guardianship arrangement, claiming they should have control of their children's lives. They did not attend the opening of the quints' hospital last September.

Callander, Ont., May 28 (CP)—On the observance of the Dionne quintuplets' first birthday anniversary, Callander and district residents "speak of the past year, such as: "Isn't it wonderful, the babies, (the morning they were born): "I'm the kind of a man they ought to be," and so on.

Eldre Dionne, the mother; "I won't have any more babies for the government."

Dr. A. R. Dafoe: "The story of the quintuplets is a romance of fairy tale, with a medical flavor."

Elzire Dionne, mother, when the babies were born: "They're triplets—and two more."

Mrs. Dionne (replying): "God help me to care for them all."

Nearly Normal In Height, Weight Tho' Premature

Callander, Ont., May 28—(CP)—The Dionne quintuplets, born two months prematurely and averaging only 5.6 pounds in weight then, chose their first birthday to reveal they are almost as heavy and tall as the average girl-baby who starts life at 7.6 pounds and develops normally in her first year.

Their average weight today is 16.2 pounds, Physicians say a normal girl should weigh 19.5 pounds on her first birthday. The Dionnes, therefore, are only 2.6 pounds less than the man set for a girl born singly with normal weight and developing normally in the first year.

A comparison of their heights with the "average girl" reveals the same story. The average is 29.5 inches in height at birth. The quints were not measured until they were nearly six weeks old, when they were the 20-inch mark when they sent their first infant cries in the Dionne farmhouse.

The average girl increases from 20.5 inches to 28.3 inches in the first year. The Dionnes averaged 27.3 inches today, nine-tenths of an inch less than the average.

If records were kept of premature children the Dionnes probably would compare even more favorably. Of course none are kept of quintuplets for this five are the first of the 33 sets born in the last 400 years to live more than 81 days.

None of the quints reached the mark set for the normal baby in either weight or height but some of them came close. Her weight Cecile, 17.11 pounds today was nearest. She Yvonne and Emilia, at 27.12 inches, all came with 7 inch of the average height and Emilia and Marie were 1-2 inches away at 27 inches.

CHAIN LETTERS RULED OUT OF CITY HALL

Toronto, May 28.—(CP)—Chain letters today were ruled out of the Toronto City Hall by the Board of Control. From now on civic employees will be prohibited from using the taxpayers' time and stationery in writing chain letters, the Board decided.

McLARNIN FOOLS 'EM

New York, May 28.—(AP)—Jimmy McLarnin, world's welterweight champion, will have a 3 3-4 pound weight handicap in his 10-round title battle in the Polo Grounds tonight, McLarnin scaling 144 3-4 pounds at the official weighing-in ceremonies, while Rose came in with the surprisingly high figure of 141.

WEATHER

TORONTO, May 28.—(CP)—The weather remains comparatively cool in the Western Provinces with light showers occurring in Manitoba, and Saskatchewan, and moderately warm from Ontario eastward with showers in many districts of Ontario and Quebec.

Timmins and Sioux River—Northerly winds; partly cloudy and cool; probably light scattered showers.

Manitoba—Northerly winds; partly cloudy and cool possibly a few light showers. Saturday fine and cooler position.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Mostly fair with stationary or a little higher temperature.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO ATTEND RALLY

The annual meeting of the Association of Baptist Churches convenes at Park Street Church in Peterboro today and Wednesday. The association includes 30 churches and a large representation is expected. Wednesday evening is young people's night and every member of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church Young People's Union of this city will journey to Peterborough to attend the convention. The contingent will be in charge of Mr. Bert Orr.

FOUR MAY CONTEST THE NOMINATION

At the Village of Marmora tomorrow, a surprise will be held of the Conservative editors of Hastings-Peterboro riding, for the selection of a candidate to put against Hon. Hon. Robert Weir, Dominion Minister of Agriculture and a former principal of Marmora Public School, will be the principal speaker. Prospects are that there will be a contest for the candidature with four signifying their intention of allowing their names to go before the convention. Mr. John E. Bennett, ex-M.P., president of the association will preside.

YOUTH CAUGHT IN ACT OF THEFT

Continuing over a period of some months past local police have been confronted with reports of the personal theft of bicycles by boys. Last night a similar complaint was received, but prompt action on the part of P. C. Hall resulted in the apprehension of a local teen aged youth, caught red handed in the act of riding a stolen bicycle on Alexander St. The lad was arrested and taken to the police station, where he was detained. A further investigation is in progress and is expected to result in a general clean-up in the matter of bicycle thefts throughout the city. A great number of cases reported locally, however, the bicycles stolen were only taken for joy riding purposes, but cause no end of inconvenience to both the police and the owner of the stolen bike. The local youth was allowed his liberty over night and will be subsequently appear in a local juvenile court. Efforts to eliminate this practice of bicycle theft in the city have been promised by the police authorities.

MANY ENQUIRIES FOR TOURIST RESORTS

Tourists are increasing daily giving evidence that this year will see the greatest tourist traffic in the last few years. Daily inquiries are being made at the Chamber of Commerce for local camping spots somewhere in Hastings County. The general trend runs for a quiet place far from the noisy city life where there is good fishing and where one might enjoy peaceful solitude.

TRAFFIC OFFICERS TO CHECK HEADLIGHTS

Local traffic officers of the Highway Traffic Department have been consistently receiving complaints from motorists in relationship to glaring headlights on highways at night. Both Traffic Officer Byrne and Erwine were instructed today to make a thorough check-up in this matter, as glaring headlights are considered one of the greatest menaces on the provincial highways at night. The check-up of blinding headlights will commence immediately, the local traffic officers stated this morning.

Darkness Ends Game At End of the Fifth

On Monday evening the ballsters from the Second of Thurlow eventued up a series of ball games by defeating the Third Line on the latter's grounds. Owing to darkness the game was called at the end of the fifth inning, the score being in favor of the visitors. The Fourth Line had previously won the opening game, and a third is to be played.

After the game the young ladies served supper and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

'Mother' Iry Speaks On Chinese Missions

From bandit-ridden North China comes one of America's most consecrated and successful missionaries to that dark and far-off land, Miss Mae (Mother) Iry, Mrs. Iry, though well up in years and bearing in her body scars and marks of suffering endured in the cause of her beloved Christ, is still a firebrand for God. There is nothing tiring or tedious about her but her able ministry of the Word, spiced with her many experiences of service and suffering, makes her an interesting and forceful speaker. She is speaking at Branch Temple, Front St., Belleville, to-night (Tuesday).

WEARING APPAREL STOLEN, FOUND
Toronto Police Find Goods Taken From Sprague's Cleaners
Authentic information to the effect, that large quantity of wearing apparel stolen from the factory of the Sprague Cleaners over one month ago, had been recovered by Toronto police in that city last night. The information was received by Chief Kidd over the long distance telephone from Sergeant Detective Mulholland of the Toronto force. Immediately Detective Fred Hicks and W. C. Sprague were dispatched to Toronto to identify the stolen goods and return the same to Belleville.
According to the information received by Chief Kidd, the goods were found cached away by the Toronto authorities following a inquiry into the robbery which resulted in a successful get-away recently in Toronto, according to the message received the bulk of the wearing apparel to be recovered consisted of men's suits and ladies' wear along with other innumerable articles.
It was through identification by Toronto police, during a recent visit to Toronto by Detective Hand and Mr. Sprague, that two men had carried out the robbery of the Sprague Cleaners. It being suspected that they were the men, who stole goods from the store, crashed into a brick building as they were being chased by Toronto police. The identity of these men was established at that time, but they have successfully evaded the arm of the law. The news of the recovery of the large quantity of stolen goods was naturally received with satisfaction by Mr. Sprague and his partner, Mr. Primmer. A detailed account of the recovered goods will be announced by Mr. Sprague upon his return to the city, he stated.

Hello Bermuda!

Article No. 4.

By G. M. JAMES
Travelling Representative of
THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

This letter will complete our notes on New York first.
One day we saw a new musical show on Broadway. A man was walking up and down the street on stilts so high that he could touch second storey windows and on his white clothing was printed the advertising matter. The scheme was effective for those who saw him.

A visit to Central Park reminded us of Hyde Park in London, England, because it was so large, so beautiful and so much used by the people. One protested part many children were enjoying themselves on their roller skates. There were dressy walks for lovers, and wide paved drives for automobiles. I soo with all the usual landmarks surrounded by red tulip beds and shrubbery completes a splendid picture. The Central Park is a credit to the city and one of the best hotels and apartments in New York.

In our last letter we referred to our visit to the Metropolitan Museum but forgot to mention the chief object of our visit —that famous picture by Rosa Bonheur, "The Horse Fair". This picture portrays a team of powerful horses full size, and so true that the artist did most of her work from a step-ladder. It is a wonderful picture and well worth coming to New York to see because the artist has depicted the horses so perfectly. There are 22 horses in the picture. We visited the scenes in Paris and vicinity where Rosa Bonheur achieved her great fame.

We found no beggars in New York except the blind and crippled, but there were somewhat numerous on the sidewalks or in the underground trains. The cripples sold pencils and other small articles and in each case they were accompanied by an intelligent, faithful dog. Some of the dogs walked through the underground trains from morning to night. A great city like New York should make suitable provision for these unfortunate people to obtain present undignified appeals.

Women who work in hotels and restaurants earn on the average ten dollars a week but this amount is more or less according to the possibility of tips. In the restaurant of the best known departmental store in New York there are one hundred and fifty waitresses who make about ten per cent. of the money that is paid for food served. If a girl serves a customer with food amounting to one dollar, she earns ten cents dollar, the girl ten cents, and the customer pays one dollar and ten cents. This system provides the girls with the average salary referred to above, and is very common in New York, but in New York it is not known to the public. A rather remarkable feature of the system in both New York and Paris lies in the fact that many of the girls are more than fabulously rich they are sure of their tips and that is all that matters. The writer explains such far flung details because they show us how others live.

ELECTIONS IN CANADA.

The average American citizen, especially in New York has his own ideas about affairs in Canada. He believes that Canada never suffered much from the depression, and that she is already nearly back to normal. He is surprised when told that Canada is suffering from the depression, but for lack of argument but from lack of action. "Why is it that English currency and in fact the currency of the whole British Empire comes back so quickly and so strong while the American dollar remains so weak" so he asks. He hints rather grudgingly that the British race is made up of a superior people, and how can the writer even to be polite argue against his conscience?

GARDENIAS.

Beautiful, fragrant white gardenias (like a small rose) are sold on the streets everywhere in New York at three for ten cents. Lilacs are also plentiful and popular.

No wires of any kind are above ground in New York. The street cars obtain their power from a groove in the centre of the track.

The firemen of New York must lead a busy life as they are rushing by our car windows almost every hour of the day and night, and how they make would wake the dead. Their equipment is about the same as ours, but very shabby for a great city. Their street cars are very timeworn too.

HEADING FOR VAUDEVILLE.

A colored lad, who practices the art of shoe-shining on the sidewalk opposite our window, passes away his leisure moments by tap dancing with real artistic skill. Undoubtedly he is heading for the vaudeville circuit some day and will be given his chance on the stage. The best vaudeville men we have seen in New York are a group of coloured lads, aged by darkies. They excel in perfection of performance and also in spirited action.

WOMEN ARE HEROIC.

A mother has served as a chambermaid in a New York hotel since the Great War. Her husband was killed in that war and since then she has been supporting her family on a meagre salary. Recently she became a full fledged lawyer and to-day his heroic mother is the proudest woman in New York.

A young woman is serving as waitress in a New York restaurant, and though very young she is wearing a significant diamond ring. For some time she has been in love with a young man studying to be a dentist and soon as a dentist and then they are to be married. "I'm not too young at twenty-one, when my grandmother was sixteen," she explains with a smile. It is still true that love will find a way.

MILLIONAIRES.

"Dress up in your best this morning, that big, yellow picture hat and gloves and things to match because we are going to play millionaires as you played housekeeping or store when you were a child."

"What's the big idea?"

"Time will tell."

In due time we were on the street and at the door of a great bank with all the pomp and dignity of Cleopatra and Mark Antony. A gentleman in uniform helped us to enter.

"Where is the foreign exchange department, my good man?"

At a wicket number thirty, I shall lead the way" and the triumphal procession began not without a host of witnesses.

"Have you one hundred pounds of sterling for sale?"

"Not at present sir, but, I am sorry to say, that if you call to-morrow I shall try to assemble some more from our other branches," came the astonishing reply.

"Very good, sir."

Then the procession reformed and after a formal exit two people laughed heartily at all that they had seen. It was just innocent makebelieve but it was a lot of fun.

SALES TAX.

We have some more details about the two per cent. sales tax mentioned in our last letter. Although in force less than a year, it is proving highly remunerative. For the first three months the returns amounted to two million dollars, with an annual revenue of not less than eight dollars a year. This money is devoted to the relief of the New York unemployed. All object favour the tax because of its objective though several hundred merchants have collected the tax from their clients but have failed to pay it over to the city. Legal action will be swift and severe in all such cases.

RADIO CITY.

Very few people come to New York and fail to visit Radio City. It is the largest and grandest theatre in the world and defies description because it is so different. It has a seating capacity of sixty-two hundred, all of which are usually occupied. The ceiling, which arches like a tunnel to the floor, is full of lights in the form of parallel strips. The stage is immense and has a revolving floor making a wide range of scenic effects. The general impression is that of dreamland or fairyland. The stage show is the most entertaining and grand beyond description but strange to relate the talkie picture portrayed gangsters and gangland, entirely out of harmony with the stage performance, with the beautiful theatre and with our own conception of refined amusement. We were sadly disappointed. Our disappointment because of its subject matter, which would have passed unnoticed elsewhere.

TOILERS.

Many mornings the writer was on the streets of New York in time to see toilers going to work or to business. They were all dressed neatly, becomingly and comfortably, but they were all pearly all under thirty. Again and again I wondered about the fate or figure of those whose hair had turned to silver. What becomes of old men and women in New York or in London, England, because conditions seem to be the same everywhere. Young people will be well advised to become established in life before they grow old.

IMITATION.

The best performers in New York theatres to-day are those who can imitate famous characters like Mae West, Bing Crosby, Rudy Vallee and others. The imitation must be easily recognizable and it must also be amusing. Such performers are received more eagerly than any others. The surest way to get started on stage or radio performances would be to practise and develop this talent at home and have not less than half a dozen famous personages on your list.

COUNTERFEITER.

A few days ago a famous international swindler was arrested in New York with a block of the hotel where we have been staying. This man among other illegal material had over fifty thousand dollars in bogus American greenbacks. As a result my American money was scrutinized very carefully every time it was offered, but without bad results.

MANHATTAN COCKTAILS.

The most popular drink in New York is called a Manhattan Cocktail and consists of various brands of whiskey. A dash of Canadian whiskey in this mixture gives the best flavour, we are told, and also commands the best price, which varies from twenty to fifty cents according to the quality and the place where it is served.

LICENSED BARBERS.

A haircut in New York costs forty cents and a shave costs twenty cents. An effort is being made to have all barbers licensed in New York State including New York City similar to regulation laws in other states of the Union.

QUEEN OF BERMUDA.

At three o'clock in the afternoon of May 18 we embarked on the "Queen of Bermuda" for Hamilton, chief port of the group of 250 islands which comprise Bermuda.

There were several pairs of newly-weds to go along and a crowd of many hundred saw us off.

The "Queen of Bermuda" is the finest ocean vessel we ever saw and is operated entirely by electricity. It was built in 1933 in England and is the last word in comfort and conveniences.

Our voyage extended nearly seven hundred miles south east of New York and was easily accomplished in forty hours. The greatest depth of the Atlantic Ocean covered was 3¼ miles and the average depth about 3 miles, a little deeper than between Newfoundland and England with the result that the water was so very blue until Bermuda came in sight when it changed to the most delightful bright blue or aqua marine as they call it in these islands. There were no sea gulls in New York and none are seen around Bermuda.

The voyage was full of pleasure and entertainment of many kinds. One bride was forty and her husband was over seventy, both natives of Boston. The husband (a widower) was a business man and his bride had been his chief office help for many years. They were much liked by all who met them.

The writer wrote a letter similar to one dropped midway between England and Newfoundland in 1933, inserted in in a strong bottle as before and dropped overboard at a point south of New York. As previously the finder was asked to return the letter to Belleville. What will happen this time is unknown. The results give very definite information concerning winds and currents.

The first glimpse of Bermuda came before breakfast on Monday, May 20. The big liner anchored about three miles from shore while a small steamer in charge of pilots came alongside to take off passengers and baggage for St. George. The shore slopes up to low hills a short distance inland and many white houses are scattered among the rocks and trees. We could view such a shore line for forty miles.

While we were waiting and watching some of the ship's crew in pure white suits dived for pennies and a new stage set in a hotel here (Hamilton, Bermuda) to enjoy a holiday like ourselves.

Our next letter will give your more details about Bermuda and its interesting people.

Best wishes to all,

Albert College Institutes New Business Department

Prof. Blaind, Bachelor of Commerce Heads Course

Albert College is fortunate in securing the services of Professor J. C. D. Blaine, B. Com.,"(Queen's) to head the new department of Business Administration and Commerce, which is being instituted in September. Professor Blaine comes to Albert with five years of successful teaching experience to his credit, and his record of scholastic attainment at Queen's, as well as teaching experience, speaks in the highest terms of his marked ability.

The Business and Commerce Department of which Professor Blaine will have charge is something entirely new in the educational field. It is a course which bridges that lamentably wide gap between the ordinary business course and the highly technical course of the University, that leads to the Bachelor and Master of Commerce degrees.

The planning of the course has been in charge of Professor T.-C. McMullen, M.-A., Ph.D., Dean of Albert College, who has had the assistance of Professor C. E. Walker of the Commerce Department at Queen's University. Before approving the course Principal Bert Howard interviewed many of the leading business men of the province, submitting the proposed outline to them, and securing from them their ideas of what should be expected of a graduate. In such a course the College believes it is meeting the need of a great many young people who are looking for a thoroughly practical training in modern business, and a course that will give them a practical foundation for entering the business of their choice. Students not wishing to take the complete Business course may choose the stenographic course, the graduate of which will be capably fitted for office positions.

The Arts department for the teaching of Second Year University work (Queen's) will be continued. The record made by the Arts work of this new department instituted September 1934, was very gratifying, eighty percent of the students successfully obtaining their year's standing. It is expected that many local students will this fall avail themselves of the opportunity of beginning their Arts work while residing at home.

All courses of study are open to young ladies as well as young men although no residential accommodation for ladies is as yet provided, as in the days of Old Albert.

Interviewed in his office this morning, Principal Howard stated that indications point to a marked increase in registration this fall. A most intensive campaign has been waged for the past five months throughout the province of Ontario with the main object of making known the work and facilities of the college. The response had at conference with upwards of seventy-five representative groups of young people, and in these conferences the possibilities and place of Albert College in the educational life of youth, was thoroughly discussed. The reaction of the delegates to these conferences have given great encouragement to Principal Howard in his untiring efforts to present the work of this great educational institution.

Albert College with seventy-eight years of service in the educational field, faces the challenge of this new day, in a most progressive manner, as it has achieved success in the past, and it hopes to achieve a similar success in the future, and it is with this in view that it launches out in these new spheres of education.

NEW LEGISLATION MAY OVERCOME BANNING OF NRA

Possibility Constitution of United States May be Changed

STRIKES PROBABLE

No Sign President Has Decided on Definite Step

Washington, May 28.—(AP)—Amid the confusion of a capital figuratively strewn with the wreckage of the new deal's No. 1 experiment, the Roosevelt administration abandoned all attempts to enforce NRA speedily to the business world to observe its rules voluntarily and then sought today in a series of hurried conferences to chart the future.

Beyond Donald Richberg's announcement after a conference with President Roosevelt that compulsory enforcement of the 731 codes was in the discard and his plea to industry, there was no immediate hint as to what the United States government may do as a result of the unanimous Supreme Court decision scrapping NRA.

Steps Proposed

Speculation ranged through a bewildering maze. Tentatively and without assurance, men on Capitol Hill and in the administration appeared to be canvassing the advisability of resorting to one or more of these steps:

1. A drive for new legislation, perhaps applying the principles of minimum wages, maximum hours, collective bargaining and the Sherman child labor to purely interstate commerce. This might stretch the session of congress into August or beyond.

WAS CONSTIPATED FOR 30 YEARS

Woman's Long Search for a Remedy

The trouble with most remedies for constipation, as this woman found, is that they give only temporary relief. Having at last found a permanent corrective, she writes to tell us about it:—

"For upwards of 30 years I was a victim of acute constipation. I tried practically everything that it was possible to try. I admit I was a chronic case, and every new remedy I tried helped for a day or two—after that I was just as bad as ever. Three months ago I took my first taste of Kruschen Salts, and every morning since, and every morning so long as I live, my first duty upon rising is my Kruschen. I honestly feel a different woman. My bowels act to the clock, and my friends remark how well I am looking. My only regret is that I didn't try Kruschen years ago."—(Mrs.) A. M.

Kruschen Salts is Nature's recipe for maintaining a condition of internal cleanliness. The six salts in Kruschen stimulate your internal organs to smooth, regular action. Your system is thus kept clear of those impurities which, allowed to accumulate, lower the whole tone of the system.

2. An attempt to get states to pass supplementary laws, applying the principles to intra-state business.

3. An effort to amend the constitution in nake NRA principles legal. This, many observers feel, would be a comparatively long- term matter, plunging the whole NRA controversy into the 1936 campaign.

4. An attempt to obtain legislation enforcing some NRA principles by means of the government's taxing power.

Voluntary Agreements

5. An invitation to industry to join in voluntary agreements with the government to observe certain practices.

6. A move to get congress to declare an emergency, with a grant of temporary authority to the President to govern industry and labor relations during an indicated interment. This, like all the other suggestions, was considered tentatively, and there was no sign the President had decided on any definite plan.

While observers speculated on the possibility President Roosevelt might make an address to the people soon, the question of what industry will do now that NRA is practically just another scrap of paper was uppermost.

That the new deal is giving thought to it was shown in the statement Richberg issued last night after conferring with President Roosevelt. Attorney General Homer Cummings and Solicitor General Stanley Reed on the court's decision, which was handed down in the A. L. A. Schechter live poultry case.

Leaders Fear Strikes

"It would be most harmful to the general welfare," said the NRA head "if unfair competitive practices, unjustifiably oppressive as such, were to be revived and if the fair standards affecting labor were to be disregarded.

Leaders of the United Textile workers said immediate strikes would result if code wages and hours were scrapped while management and labor in the soft coal industry looked to a drive for special regulatory legislation. The general strike call, that has been threatened by Francis Gorman, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor called his leaders to a conference today.

PLANE LANDING

In reference to the published report that there is to be built on a field near the "Rubber Factory", the following letter has been received:

Editor The Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:

"This piece that I have enclosed is a mistake in a way, and in another it is not. The airplane came down all right but it landed in a large field of barley belonging to Mr. Roy Tracey, just north of the Rubber Plant in Thurlow Township. The reason the police were called was because the people were all in the field and tramping down the grain and we could not make them go off so we had to call the police to do so, and they stayed there to keep the people off till the plane was fixed and took off for the hangar.

RAILWAYS VOTED 15 MILLIONS FOR NEW EQUIPMENT

Works Bill Approved by Parliament and Sent on to Senate

STRONG OPPOSITION

Intended That Companies Shall Buy Needed Rolling Stock

Ottawa, May 28—(CP)—Consideration and approval of the $15,000,000 railway bill was reached today in the way of a start on the Federal Government's $33,000,000 work-providing public works plan. After seven solid days of battling the bill passed the House of Commons last night. It survived the most strenuous opposition offered by the Liberals to any government measure so far this session.

The money will be spent in variety of ways, including public buildings, construction of locomotives and cars for Canadian railway companies, and a tunnel at Toronto.

The railway equipment clauses of the bill provoked lengthy discussion yesterday. The plan is to guarantee securities of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railway Companies the proceeds of which will be used to buy new equipment. The amount of the guarantee is limited to $15,000,000 of which the Canadian National share is $8,000,000 while the Canadian Pacific may spend $7,000,000.

Hon. R. J. Manion Minister of Railways and Canals, told the House $4,000,000 of the $15,000,000 would be expended on repairs and construction in the shops owned by the railways themselves while the balance would be spent on new equipment in the plants of railway equipment companies.

Opposition members contended a larger proportion should be spent in the railway shops. But the Minister said the railways themselves had made the allotment and $8,000,000 was all they felt they could economically spend on repairs. The railways, he said, do not want to go into the business of manufacturing rolling stock. The equipment companies, already equipped to carry on the work, be maintained in a sound position.

Buy New Equipment

The railways, Dr. Manion said, will not be forced to buy new equipment "but frankly I think many railways are anxious to participate."

Replying to J. S. Woodsworth, C. C. F. leader, Dr. Manion said he believed the original request for equipment orders came from private companies. Since then the railways have agreed it was a good proposition.

Mr. Woodsworth said he understood American and Canadian railways agreed periodically what new equipment would be bought, but Mr. Manion said he had never heard of a deal like that.

The Canadian National, Dr. Manion said, would buy refrigerator cars, gondola cars, automobile cars, and cars, diesel engines and passenger cars. The Canadian Pacific would purchase box cars, refrigerator cars, mail and express cars, coal cars and locomotives, heavy and passenger.

Dr. Manion told Mr. Woodworth he did not believe the new equipment would enable the railways to lay off crews and shopmen.

He did not believe, said Dr. Manion, in the argument that had been advanced to him the new equipment might throw men out of work because of faster, newer locomotives and cars.

The Railway Minister read letters from D. C. Coleman, of the C. P. R. and S. J. Sumptord of the C.N.R. that railway shops were not equipped to build new locomotives and cars. The shops were designed for repair and construction purposes. If the private equipment companies went out of business, the railways would have to build machinery for their shops at big prices. If the companies went bankrupt, the railways would be left at the mercy of foreign equipment manufacturers.

The two loans to the Canadian Pacific to keep their shops open, said Dr. Manion, were amortized to nearly $2,500,000, and by paying the deficits of the Canadian National the government had assisted in keeping the shops of that company open.

FAULKNER OPENS NEW SANATORIUM

Fort William Has an Institution Second to None

Fort William, May 28—(CP) — Taking advantage of his presence at Fort William in connection with the session of the joint convention of the medical associations of Ontario and Manitoba, Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health, Monday formally opened the new sanatorium, built by the City of Fort William, with some aid from the province.

The ceremony of dedication followed a luncheon in honor of the Minister, given by local doctors, and was attended by a number of citizens and the advance guard of the convention, which opens here Tuesday.

In his address Dr. Faulkner said the Fort William sanatorium was the last word in efficiency and equipment. It has 100 beds, of which 56 are now complete, while the rest of the accommodation is expected to be filled within six weeks.

The X-ray equipment he pronounced to be the finest installed in any sanatorium in Canada, the committee having had a little extra funds available out of the $226,000 provided, and having invested some of that surplus in extra X-ray installation.

SIDELIGHTS

TAKE TIME

A plea for slower motoring is made in the most recent issue of the New Outlook on the ground that some of the most worthwhile things cannot be seen when a car is travelling at speed. The official organ of the United Church says:

"Some motorist has discovered that at forty miles an hour he cannot see the violets. He can see many other things which are more obtrusive, but the violets are hidden from the man travelling at high speed. Is it not most emphatically true that age, travelling at an unprecedented speed, misses some of the most charming beauties of life? We are in too much of a hurry to spend any time over things which, if we took more time, we should discover well worth the time to stop and appreciate. An art gallery cannot be visited at a mile a minute. It takes time to appreciate the beauties of any great painting, and it takes time to appreciate the beauties of any great work of literature.

"We are not arguing that speed is not useful; for it is, but the very speed which gets us the end of our journey in shortest time has the defects which we might expect, and it necessarily misses much that is well worth seeing. The man who is constantly rushing here and there may think that he is exceedingly busy but he will miss some of the chief things of life. We must take time to think, time to read, time to discover, time to meditate, time to discover God. The best things in life must be done carefully; time is essential to a proper appreciation of the virtues and values of life."

The conclusion that the editor draws is one worthy of thought—take time to enjoy the worthwhile things of life.

DIMES AND MORALS

The mathematics of the chain-letter are so simple that it is hard to see why here and there a skeptic remains unconvinced. A man writes his name at the bottom of four other names and the combination starts. When it has reached the top other people begin to send him dimes or quarters or dollars, as the case may be, until he has received 15,625 such contributions.

But what do these 15,625 contributors get out of it? Well, all that is necessary is that each of them shall send in 15,625 contributions from 15,625 persons, for which we merely need a United States population of approximately 250,000,000 souls. And since that is absurd, it is entirely unjust for these new contributors to be left holding the bag, we need only arrange that every one of them in turn receive a dime or a dollar from each of the other cheerful givers. This can be managed as soon as the population of the United States is approximately 4,000,000,000,000 souls, or not longer than a few thousand times the present population of the earth.—New York Times.

WRONG MATERIAL

H. G. Wells, who is in the United States studying men and methods, reports that in his travels over the land he has found either for communism or fascism, but will strike some sort of a compromise that will answer the purpose more effectually than either of these useless panaceas.

The United States, in this respect, bears a close relation to England and Canada. Despite the tremendous foreign influx during the years of enormous immigration, the background of the people is Anglo-Saxon. Their speech is Anglo-Saxon, and speech is a unifying and assimilative influence.

Communism does not suit the Anglo-Saxon mind. Neither, on the other hand, does fascism.

Communism in Canada has never been strong, despite much talk of a Red peril. Both militant communism and militaristic fascism arouse only the sense of humor of the root stock in this country.

And much the same applies to the United States. H. G. Wells is not far off the mark when he says that neither of the two isms will find very much support there.—Guelph Mercury.

Girls we love for what they are; young men for what they promise to be.—Goethe.

Hard are life's early steps; but that youth is buoyant, confident, and strong in hope, men would behold its threshold and despair.—Landon.

The youth of the soul is everlasting, and eternity is youth.—Jean Paul Richter.

(Youth)—my salad days when I was green in judgment.—Shakespeare.

The heart of youth is reached through the senses; the senses of age are reached through the heart.—Bretonne.

The golden age never leaves the world; it exists still, and shall exist, till love, health and poetry are no more—but only for the young.—Bulwer.

"REVOLT IN THE DESERT" by T. E. Lawrence, is a fascinating story of real happenings which had a very important bearing upon the success of the Allied effort in the Great War. The narrative starts very quietly, proceeds at a gradually accelerating pace, as Lawrence carefully explains the circumstances and the menace of the Turkish threat at the Suez Canal and Egypt. As the story proceeds it gains in thrilling interest, carried to an inevitable climax in the revolt against the Turks gains in force with the uniting of all the powerful tribes, blood enemies, of each other, but united through the efforts of Lawrence and Feisul in common cause against the Turks, acting in conjunction with Allenby and his British, Indian, Australian and New Zealand battalions in the campaign of conquest which drove the Turks from Jerusalem, Damascus and all part of the Holy Land and Arabia and to ultimate surrender as the armies prepared to attack the keys of the gates of Constantinople. "Lawrence of Arabia," the Man of Mystery, made a notable contribution to the success of the allies in the Great War and his experiences and actions furnish one of the most interesting chapters of the great struggle. "The Revolt in the Desert," written by Lawrence himself, tells the thrilling story of what happened to the Turks despite all the assistance that Germany and Austria could give to them in men, munitions and money. The story started in Monday's Ontario Intelligencer as a serial. An installment will be printed each day and should be eagerly read by every reader of this newspaper, young and old, for it is not only a very important chapter in the history of the Great War, but as a story it has all the elements of thrill and dramatic suspense and incident which marks the "Best Sellers" of fiction.

AUTOMOBILE SPEEDERS IN FRONT STREET take chances not only their own life, limb and property which should qualify them for an early appearance before the Police Magistrate. Aside from the foolishness of speeding on the business section of town with its unlimited parking both sides, there is constant danger to motorists emerging from the many gangways. If one is driving a through street on the river front with exits at either end a great deal of the danger of accidents would be removed—but in any event it is dangerous to speed on the business streets, and especially at the intersection of Front and Bridge streets. The law insists upon motorists slowing down in accordance with the need of the danger—which in many cases on Belleville's business streets would mean as slow as five miles an hour at times. There is abundant opportunity for the police to give lessons to reckless drivers in this connection and no offence should be overlooked, instead of waiting for an accident to happen. Bridge Street East and Victoria Avenue are both speed-ways for drivers who wish to step on it with consequent danger to children as well as grownups. One citizen of Bridge Street East had two pet dogs killed in one week by speeding automobiles. Action is necessary now, at the beginning of the motoring season—why wait for accidents to happen before teaching reckless drivers that the city streets are not speedways for fast automobiles?

A radio station to be erected in Turkey will be able to send messages to North America. We can hardly wait to know what kind of tooth paste they use over there.

Counsel was trying to discredit a witness, and asked him how many children he had. "Two," was the reply. After putting a few other questions, the barrister said, significantly: "You say you have two children." Mr. Justice Darling quietly remarked: "He told you a few moments ago he had two children; and there are scarcely likely to have been any new arrivals since your first question."

50 Years Ago

MAY 25TH, 1876.

Some time last winter a fine Newfoundland dog belonging to Mr. Thos. Keler, which he valued very highly, was missing, and although diligent search was made no trace of the dog could be found until recently, when Mr. Keler was informed that the hide of a very large Newfoundland dog was being dressed in the tannery on Mill street. He visited the place and was confident that it was the hide of his lost favorite. The tanner told him that it had been brought to him to be dressed by a man living in the country, who had brought the other dog hides at various times to be tanned. Yesterday Mr. Keler accompanied by Constable Kinnon visited the farmer and they were informed that the dog had followed the farmer's son home from the city last winter. After keeping it for some time and no one claiming it, he killed it, saved the hide as it was, extra large and very fine.

Letters to the Editor

ANSWER TO LETTER ON "CADETS TRAINING"

Belleville, May 22, 1925.

The Editor,
"Belleville Ontario Intelligencer,
"Belleville, Ontario.
"Dear Sir—

"There appeared in Tuesday's issue of the Ontario Intelligencer a letter signed by "A Belleville". Would just like an opportunity of replying to this person's comments.

"I note, sir, you state the last clause of the motion at the Board of Education meeting was 'City'. I happen to know that the present motion was versed in exactly the same words as the motion which was made at a Toronto Board of Education meeting, on the evening of which the cadet training was abolished in favor of a better form of training, to build the physique of the high school youth of today without resorting to a military medium. When you refer to this clause as "city", you are doing Belleville with that clause which was contained in the Toronto Board of Education motion, and which was finally passed.

"You must realize, Bellevillian, what some people might term as broadmindedness, by others, might be considered plain single-track mindedness.

"If the motion does pass the Board it will indicate that they like the majority of the citizens of Belleville, have only a view of building up our youth into men of tomorrow, rather than entering their own personal aims and desires into the matter at all.

"When a city the size of Toronto, with over half a million population, eliminates cadet training from their schools, introducing a more modern and practical system, and, then, a small city like Belleville with a mere thirteen thousand or so, continues with the old military system, it surely must indicate something.

"Do the citizens of Belleville desire to go forward or backward? If this matter does come to the voters at the next general municipal election, and the present cadet system abolished by vote, it will absolutely show that there still exists some broadmindedness on the part of the majority of the citizens, at least.

"Belleville Citizen".

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

T. E. LAWRENCE

CHAPTER I

STORES GOES TO FIDDAH

When, at last we anchored in Jiddah's outer harbour, of the white town hung between the heaving sky and its reflection in the mirage which swept and rolled over the wide lagoon; then the heat of Arabia came out like a drawn sword and struck us speechless. It was a hot day of October of 1916; and the noon sun had, like moonlight, put to sleep the colours. There were only lights and shadows, the white houses and long line of stores in front; the pallid luster of the base shimmering upon the inner harbour; behind, the dazzle or beams after beam of transparent sand, running up to an edge of low hills faintly suggested in the far away mist of heat.

Just north of Jiddah was a second blurring by black-white buildings, moving up and down the pistons in the mirage, as the ship rolled at anchor and the intermittent breeze shifted the heat waves in the air.

Colonel Wilson, British representative with the new Arab state, had sent his launch to meet us; and we had to go ashore to learn the reality of the men lavishing in that mirage.

We walked past the white masses of the still-building water gate, and through the opposite valley of the food market to our way to the Consulate. In the air, from the men to the date and fish stalls, was a thick squadron of flies like particles of dust dancing up and down the sun shafts which stabbed into the darkest corners of the booths through torn places in the wood and matting which swirings overhead. The atmosphere was like a bath.

We reached the Consulate; and there in a shaded room with an open balcony behind him Wilson prepared to welcome the sea breeze, which had lagged there all the hot days. He told us that Sherif Abdulla second son of Hussein, Grand Sherif of Mecca, was just then entering the town. Ronald Storrs and myself had come down the Red Sea from Cairo to meet Abdulla. It was suspicious that we had arrived, because Sherif of Mecca, the Sherifian capital, was inaccessible to Christians, and such business as we had to transact was to be transacted by telephone. My presence must be put down to Storrs' loving; but Storrs, Oriental Secretary to Cairo, was the confidential assistant of Sir Henry McMahon in all the delicate negotiations with the Sherif of Mecca. The Sherif's decision of his local knowledge, with the experience and sympathy of Clayton, Macleriy, chief of the Bedouin Hash, had joined the Turks. What they offered Hussein was all their guarded undertakings as sufficient assurance for handing Hejaz Revolt against Turkey, and kept faith with the British Empire throughout the war-history which seemed with doubtful and hazardous situations. Sir Henry was England's right-hand man in the Middle East and the Sherif Hussein was an established event. Sir Mark Sykes was the left hand: and if the foreign Office had kept itself and its hands mutually informed our reputation for honesty would not have suffered as it did.

Abdulla, on a white mare, came to us softly, with a bevy of richly-armed slaves on foot about him, through the silent, respectful aisles of the town. He was flushed with his success in the hall, and happy. I was seeing him for the first time, while Storrs was my old friend, and on the best of terms; yet, before long, as they spoke together, I began to suspect him of a constant cheerfulness. His eyes had a contracted twinkle; and though only thirty-five he was putting on flesh. It might be due to too much laughter. He jested with all comers in most easy fashion: yet, when we met him for serious talk, the veil of humour seemed to fade away, as he listened with words, and argued shrewdly. Of course, he was in discussion with Storrs, who demanded a high level from his opponent.

I was playing for effect, wishing for stimulating talk. Abdulla's rebellion had been unsatisfactory for the last few months (standing still, which, with an irregular war, was the prelude to disaster); and my suspicion was that his Staff was Shakespearian: not intellect, that would set the desert on fire, but city wits, used mainly to find the yet unknown master-spirit of the affair, and reassure his capacity to carry the revolt to the goal it had conceived it. As our conversation continued, I became more and more sure that Abdulla was too balanced, too cool, too humorous to be a prophet: especially the armed prophet of Islam, if indeed he ever appeared in revolutions. His value would come perhaps in the years after success.

Storrs brought me into the discussion by asking his views on the value of the camel in the north. At once grew serious, and said that he wanted to have modified by them their immediate and very personal concern in the matter, which he thanked so—

It would only remain for his faithful to put himself at the head of his own people of Mecca, and to die gloriously fighting for them.

But our neglect to cut the Hejaz Railway, the Turks had been able to collect troops from Arabia and send the reinforcement of Medina.

Abdulla answered that from the town; and the enemy was preparing a mobile column of all arms for an advance on Rabegh.

The Arabs in the hills across their way were by our neglect too weak in supplies, machine-guns and artillery to defend their line.

Ismail Mahelrig, chief of the Rabegh Harb, had joined the Turks. If the Arabs attacked, Ismail and the Harb would join it.

At this moment the telephone rang: the Grand Sherif wanted to speak to Abdulla. He was told of the police, and the message had been reached, and at once confirmed that he would so act in the circumstances. The Turks would enter Mecca over his dead body. He would march off; and Abdulla, smiling a little, asked to prevent such a disaster, for a British brigade, with the help of Moslem troops, he kept at Suez, with transport to rush it to Rabegh as soon as the Turks debouched from Medina in their attack. What did we think of the proposal?

I said that I would represent his views to Storrs, but that the British were reluctant to spare troops from the fighting line in France (though he was not to imagine that the Great war in any danger from the Turks) and that, besides, the Christians to defend the people of the Holy City against their principles as some Moslems in India, who considered the Turkish Government and its sultan-caliph worthy to be the Haramein, would misrepresent our motives and make trouble for them. I might perhaps urge his opinions more powerfully if I was able to report on the Rabegh defences in the light of my own knowledge of the position and local feeling. I would also like to see Feisal, and talk over with him the question of the prospects of a prolonged defence of his hills by the tribesmen if we strengthened them materially. I would like to ride from Rabegh up the Sultanial road towards Medina as far as Feisal's camp.

Storrs then came in and supported me with all his might, urging the vital importance of full and early information from a trained observer for the British Commander-in-Chief in Egypt. Abdulla went to the telephone and tried to get his father's consent to my going up country. The Sherif viewed the proposal with grave distrust. Abdulla argued the point, made some advantage, and transferred the mouthpiece to Storrs, who turned all his diplomacy on the old man. Storrs in full blast was a delight to listen to in the best matter of double speech; and also a lesson to every Englishman alive of how to deal with suspicious or unwilling Orientals. It was nearly impossible to resist him for more than a few minutes, and in this case also he had his way. The Sherif asked Abdulla for advice, and authorized him to write to Ali, and suggest that if he thought fit, and if conditions were normal, I might be allowed to visit Feisal; and Abdulla, using Storrs' phrases, transformed that guarded message into direct written instruction to Ali to mount me as well and as quickly as possible, and convey me, by an Arab boat to Rabegh or, failing that, by camel to Yenbo.

EMPIRE DAY OBSERVED AT ALLAN SCHOOL

Interesting Program Presented by Children of S.S. No. 3 Rawdon

RAWDON — On Thursday afternoon, May 23rd, at the Allan Public School, S.S. No. 3, Rawdon with their teacher Miss Muriel Mills' gan staged a pleasing and appropriate Empire Day programme.

The programme opened by one verse of "O Canada" and Miss Millegan read the Proclamation by the Minister of Education. Readings, "The New Memorial Day" by Winnie Phillips and "The Way to Glory" by Malcolm Sharp.

After singing the second verse of the opening chorus the teacher told "The Story of Empire Day" explaining its origin. Two readings were then given, Doug Trimbey by Gladys Hay and "Empire Day" by Anna Sharp, Marion Rose and Marion Phillips did the first and third parts, "May Song", James Howard recited "In Flanders Fields" and Mary Rose While read "The Maple", Ormal McCallum recited "Native Land" and Jessie Hubbs gave a selection "What Is The Victoria Cross".

All joined in a hymn "O God, Our Help In Ages Past". Muriel Millegan gave a talk on the subject "What is the British Empire? Marie Sharp read "Empire Day" and Mary and Gladys Sharp read "The Union Jack".

The pupils then pledged their allegiance to the flag and to the Empire for which it stands one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

A chorus "The Maple Leaf Forever", was sung by all, the "National Anthem" and then each one drew and painted the flag as a lesson art.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rose recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Ed Fryar of Carmel and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fryar of Shilling.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sharp entertained on Wednesday, May 22nd for a birthday dinner Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Farr and Mrs. B. Johns of Hoards, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Johnson and their granddaughter, Miss Eleanor Johnson of Mount Dennis. The dinner with all the trimmings even to a lovely tiered fruit cake was in honour of Mrs. Johnson's father, Mr. Robert Sharp, who celebrated his 84th anniversary of his birth. Little Miss Eleanor Johnson was four years of age on the same day and owing to this fact a birthday cake was included in the guests.

Mr. Sharp has greatly appreciated the kind thought which prompted this celebration by the many friends in Rawdon and Seymour join in extending Birthday felicitations at this time.

Rev. F. C. Joblin was a supper guest on Wednesday evening May 22nd at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Hall, Mount Pleasant and christened their little son Edwin Allan. The other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Hall and Mrs. Gordon and the baby's grandmother, Mrs. John Reid.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ketcheson and Miss Ada Clark were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hoard on Saturday, May 19th, it being the occasion of Molly Hoard's birthday.

Mr. Arthur Wilson was a supper guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Heagle, Wellman's on Sunday evening.

The hay frosts during the past week have caused severe damage to growing and garden crops. Several report beans, cabbage, tomatoes and early potatoes cut down. Warm weather and good rain are both badly needed as several wells are reported low or dry.

On Thursday evening Bethel soft ball team journeyed to Mount Pleasant and were defeated victorious with a 18-5 score. The line-up was Bethel: Kirkey, Stewart, Morton, Holland, Cronk, Brandsworth, Bill Heath, Walter Warren, Don Brandsworth. All Mount Pleasant—H. Higgs H. Hagerman, C. Coggins, W. Higgs, C. Dunkley, C. Potts, Willie Jeffs, Jack Potts, Clifford McKeown.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dunham, Hazel, Jack and Reg were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Bailey, Carmel.

Wellman's Young People's Society held a successful meeting on Monday evening when a large number of community singing and Miss Grace Dunham offered prayer. Miss Beatrice Dunham read the minutes and after the business period closed the meeting was handed over to Mr. Omar Dracup, convener of Christian citizenship.

He opened with "Happy Day" and Miss Lucille Dryden read the Bible lesson found in St. Luke 8th. Mr. Frederick Seabold rendered a guitar selection and the poem by Rev. F. C. Joblin gave a splendid talk on "Love and Forgiveness" were written".

Miss Mabelle Sharp read a timely selection and the Misses Bernice and Dorothy Dunham contributed a duet entitled "I'll Follow Me". A sunny ages duet entitled "I'll Follow Me". A sunny ages duet entitled "I'll Follow Me".

WEDS TWICE IN DAY

JESSIE CLYDE CAVENDER

Police in Memphis, Tenn., sought a solution to the marriage puzzle presented by Jessie Clyde Cavender, who, unable to choose between two sweethearts, married both on the same day. The Memphis girl, held for juvenile court, was said to have married Earl Langmire at Marion, Ark., and a few hours later wed Dennis Manning. When the husbands met, fireworks started.

Miss P. Cook gave a pianoforte number and all joined in "The Pilgrim's Chorus". Miss Caitlyn Johnson staged an interesting "pie" contest.

Several Rawdon folk spent Friday 24th on a holiday. The day was ideal for fishing and picnicking and all thoroughly enjoyed their various pastimes.

Mrs. Emma Summers, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kelly, and Gladys, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher and Mina, Mr. and Mrs. James Sharp, Mrs. Leonard Sharp and Burton, Misses Mildred and Gladys Sharp, Mrs. and Mrs. Merle Spencer and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Sharp, Mrs. Pregent of Mount Pleasant, attended the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ketcheson Mrs. M. RAIN EFFECTIVE FOR BUSH FIRES

Practically All Fires in Canada Now Under Control

(By The Canadian Press)

Cold rain, weather reports on the tap last night all over Ontario and many parts of Quebec and it seemed today he had effectively banished the treacherous summer scourge, fire, from his hunting grounds in Canada's woodlands. Without the aid of the weather, flames in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick had been controlled.

Fires raging yesterday in various places in Northern Ontario were brought under control and the only fear there today was that new outbreaks might start. As a precautionary measure, the government announced plans to restrict the issuance of fire permits pending sufficient rain to lift the fire menace. Several settlers' homes were destroyed in St. Joseph's parish before the fire there was controlled.

Heavy rains, which in some places were rushed yesterday to New Rose in Nova Scotia, proved a valuable stand of timber. The fire was put out, after ravaging 2,000 acres of scrub and bush land. Damage was slight. Elsewhere flames at times licked fiercely before they were checked.

Weddings

BLACK—O'CONNELL

A pretty wedding took place at St. Charles' Church, Read, on Saturday morning, when Catherine Irene, daughter of Mrs. M. O'Connell of Read, became the bride of Mr. Alphonsus Black, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Black, 15 Alexander Street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Therrien.

Beautiful spring flowers adorned the church. Wedding music was played by Mrs. F. O'Connell, as the bride entered the church, accompanied by her brother, Mr. Frank O'Connell, who gave her in marriage.

The bride made a charming picture in her bridal gown of white French sheer crepe, her tulle veil caught with orange blossoms in tiara effect. She carried a white prayer book, through which were white streamers caught with orange blossoms.

Miss Anne O'Connell was her sister's bridesmaid, wearing a lovely frock of rose organza, matching hat, and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. Mr. Twomey Black was groomsman.

After wedding breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Black left on a motor trip to Western Ontario. The bride chose for travelling an ensemble of navy Cordona cloth with accessories to match. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

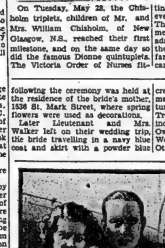
WALKER—WALSH

Montreal, May 28.—The marriage of Kathleen, daughter of the late Captain J. T. Walsh, and of Mrs. Walsh, to Flight-Lieutenant C. C. Walker, of Trenton, Ontario, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Walker of Putney, London, England, took place this morning, May 28th, at ten o'clock in Loyola College, the Rev. Alex. Rolland officiating. Spring flowers and ferns were used as decorations.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Squadron Leader Walsh, of Ottawa, wore a gown of tulle crepe Lido, having a square neckline and long tight-fitting sleeves with a pleated panel in the back of the skirt extending to form the train. Her veil of tulle illusion was held to her head by a bandeau of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Florence Walsh, as maid of honor and her sister's only attendant, wore a frock of white French crepe with a cowl neckline and long full sleeves caught into tight cuffs; the skirt finishing in a short train. She wore a white straw hat and carried an arm bouquet of sweet peas in pastel shades.

Mr. Noel J. Walsh, brother of the bride, acted as best man for the bridegroom.



Mrs. Walsh, the bride's mother, was gowned in pale grey crepe with corsage bouquet of orchids, and wore a black hat. The reception following the ceremony was held at the residence of the bride's mother, 1526 St. Mark Street, where spring flowers were used as decorations.

Later Lieutenant and Mrs. Walker left on their wedding trip, the bride travelling in a navy blue coat and skirt with a powder blue crepe blouse, a navy blue hat and matching accessories. On their return they will take up residence in Trenton. The out-of-town guests included Squadron-Leader and Mrs. Owen, Mrs. Fairlax Webber, Major Weeks and Major Laurie, all of Ottawa.

TRIPLETS AN 'TUPLETS ON SAME DAY

On Tuesday, May 28, the Chisholm triplets, children of Mr. and Mrs. William Chisholm, of New Glasgow, N.S., reached their first milestone, and on the same day so did the famous Dionne quintuplets. The Victoria Order of Nurses fittingly celebrated this important event in the life of New Glasgow. The three babies are splendid specimens of babyhood and are being admired daily as they are taken for their airing on the main thoroughfares in their three-in-one baby carriage as shown above.

"Gold Diggers of 1935"

Awaited 2 Years 1935 Gold Diggers Booked by Belle

It has been two years in the making, but if advance reports prove true Warner Bros. picture "Gold Diggers of 1935", which Manager Forhan has booked for the Belle Theatre tomorrow, Thursday and Friday, was well worth waiting for.

Warner Bros., always famed for magnificent musical spectacles, has won itself in the picture, which marks the advent of Busby Berkely as the director of a complete production.

Berkely, it is claimed, has taken a funny, clever story, gathered together a cast of film favorites that includes ten of Warner Bros.' outstanding stars, and, with the assistance of more than 200 of the prettiest dancing girls in Hollywood, has assembled the whole into a tuneful comedy in which his talent for spectacular screen innovations has been given full sway.

The director was the musical comedy genius responsible for the spectacles in "Gold Street," "Wonder Bar," "Gold Diggers of 1933," "Footlight Parade" and other musicals.

In "Gold Diggers of 1935" he is said to have created the most gorgeous and unique dance numbers of his career. There are three outstanding specialties including a dance in which 90 snow white grand pianos actually cavort on the stage. The dance team of Ramon and Rcita is also featured.

In the cast are Dick Powell, Adolphe Menjou, Gloria Stuart, Alice Brady, Glenda Farrell, Frank McHugh, Hugh Herbert, Joseph Cawthorn, Grant Mitchell, Dorothy Dare and Winifred Shaw.

The story is by Robert Lord and Peter Milne. It is a catchy romance with a fashionable summer hotel as the setting. A wealthy widow, who is essentially penurious, is the target of the gold digging propensities of a trio of schemers enacted by Menjou, Cawthorn and Mitchell. The widow, which is the funniest role ever essayed by Alice Brady, has two children. She is trying to marry off her daughter, Gloria Stuart to Hugh Herbert, also a millionaire, but who is more interested in writing articles on crime than on love. Her son, Frank McHugh, four times married and divorced, falls for the hotel hostess, and the daughter falls in love with the room clerk in the person of Dick Powell.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Little Women"

Katherine Hepburn Stars in Louisa M. Alcott's Famous Story

At the request of many of our patrond "Little Women" is being shown as a special request feature Wednesday only.

Taken from Louisa Alcott's famous novel, the story concerns the March family, the trials and tribulations of the four sisters. The picture depicts the girls in their adventures from childhood until they reach the age when love and romance enters their lives. Katherine Hepburn is splendid as Jo, the eldest sister who is more or less the rebel of the family, and Jean Parker is lovely as winsome little Beth, the baby. Other roles in the picture are well and convincingly taken by the all-star cast.

Complete shows 2.30, 7.15, 9.15.

Last Times Tonight

"The Lost Chord"

A beautiful and heart stirring romance is "The Lost Chord", the feature attraction being shown for the last times tonight.

Featuring Mary Glynne, John Stuart and Elisabeth Allan, the story tells of a great love and a great sacrifice when two lovers are parted by circumstances beyond their control. The haunting strains of "The Lost Chord" are heard throughout the picture.

Several well selected short subjects are shown preceding the feature attraction.

"Tea Party" Tea Cups today. Complete shows 2.30, 7.15, 9.15.

Glenda Farrell does a little fold digging of her own at the expense of Hugh Herbert, but it all ends happily in one of the most amazing climaxes ever filmed. There are three remarkable song numbers written by Harry Warren and Al Dubin. Three selected short treats precede the feature offering.

Shirley Says Bye-Bye

The darling of the world, Shirley Temple, wins your heart again in "Our Little Girl" to be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times with lovely Rosemary Ames, Lori McCrea, Lyle Talbot and Erin O'Brien Moore. Four other varied short treats will be exhibited on the same program.

A STAR RISES I N THE SKIES!

RHYTHMIC WORK AND BOYS' CHOIR PLEASE CROWD

O.S.D. Students Under Direction of Miss Ford Take Part

GUILD PROGRAM

Christ Church Boys' Choir Makes Appearance on Platform

A rare evening was greatly enjoyed by a large number at Christ Church Parish Hall when a programme was given by students of Ontario School for the Deaf and Christ Church Boys' Choir. Mrs. E. Hickey, president of the Guild, presided and after prayer, Mrs. G. O. Wright in happy vein opened the program of seventeen numbers which from first to last was a revelation.

Miss Catherine Ford, Directress of Professional Training at the O.S.D., by way of introduction gave an interesting program explaining that the students do their rhythmic expression for giving them a chance to share in life and come willingly with a degree of pleasure. The action and rhythm work is part of the O.S.D. training. The department of physical training is now doing systematic work under Mr. Cunningham.

When a child is born with impaired hearing the other senses are not merged to make up the deficiency. In the school, by perseverance and patience, the senses of touch and sight are trained to take the place of the lost sense of hearing.

Rhythm work was most interestingly exemplified the Rhythm Band of ten girls in uniform with a student wielding the baton and Mr. Alec Gordon, director of music, accompanying at the piano.

Among the numbers was the "Coronation March" played twenty-five years ago at the Coronation of Their Majesties. A trombone, bells, birds, triangles and tambourines contributed to the splendid symphonic performance.

Included in the program of dances, under the capable direction of Miss Keeler, were gay tambourine dances, a Highland Fling, a stately gavotte, a graceful waltz and a special Folk Dance. The amazing movements of these dances were executed with precision and grace by the youthful dancers. The beautiful costumes worn were all made by sewing classes at the School. The lovely "Jubilee Tableau" closed the program.

An exhibition of tumbling and pyramid work by twenty boys, trained by Mr. Cunningham, was remarkably well done, the more unusual when one realized that the limited space and limited numbers made a considerable handicap, both to the dancers and the athletes.

Boys' Choir Heard

In its first public appearance on the platform, the Christ Church Boys' Choir showed much talent and promise. The group of twenty-four boys in their cassocks and Eton collars sang in perfect harmony various numbers including "The Bells of St. Marys" and "Now the Day Is Over." After only six month's training under Mr. Geo. Mayhee, musical director at Christ Church, the boys sang beautifully indeed and much will be expected of them in the future.

FALSE TEETH
"Stay Put" Says Druggist

"With my gums gradually shrinking I had difficulty keeping my plate in position with various denture powders. Most of them lasted only a few hours. Now I use FASTEETH and what a difference! I now wear my plate for 36 hours with absolute security and comfort. Fasteeth does not wash away or become thinned out, but "STAYS PUT" until I am ready to remove plate. FASTEETH is tasteless. Does not sour or cause foul breath. Holds false teeth all day long."

Omar the Tentmaker knew...

OMAR certainly knew the value of publicity—wherever his poetry was quoted, people spoke of his tents. Probably they were good tents—they might have been the best procurable—it is also quite likely that people from far-off villages came to buy from him, but—it was eight hundred years before all the world knew of him and his famous pre-prohibition slogan, "A loaf of bread, a jug of—" (pardon me). Eight hundred years after he died, we are all convinced that Omar made tents—not only that, but we have heard so much about them we are convinced they must have been GOOD tents. Were they obtainable today we would probably buy one. However, poor Omar has been gone nearly nine centuries.

FINANCIAL MARKETS
NEW YORK : TORONTO WINNIPEG

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 28 (AP)—Sharp selling flurries, especially in the metals, oils, alcohols and specialties, appeared in today's stock market session to undo much of yesterday's advance and create a net ruling in the NYSA codes.

While the rails and utilities buckled the trend, and a number of these issues moved up moderately, losses of one to around six points included U. S. Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, American Smelting, Case, Johns-Manville, Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, St. Joseph Lead, Distillers, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Chrysler. Consolidated Gas, General Northern and North American Co. had their heads above water. The late tone was heavy. Transfers approximated 2,000,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—Nearly selling on the New York market with resulting declines in the oils and listed leaders, particularly the oils and metals a sharp downward reaction on the industrials department of the Toronto Exchange today, losses ranging up to better than two points in the oils and eight points in the metals. Laggers took recessions up to a point. The metals made a couple of efforts to recover but did not get far in either sally and the close was not much above the day's lowest prices. The turnover was heavy.

Following a quite firm opening industrial stocks dropped in the first hour today, partly recovered and almost tumbled further in the early afternoon, the market reflecting the trend from the New York market by top-ast in the elimination of the crash. Losses ranged up to a couple of points in the general list while the Consolidated Smelters dropped 9 points to 84, which lost 1½.

Selling was heavy in those issues, including the oils and metals, and had been the leaders in the recent upside in recent weeks. Imperial Oil backed up 30½, off 3; International Petroleum 2 to 27¾ and British American 8 to 16. Hudson Bays 5 to 64 came out for Ford "A", O.P.R. and Brazilian .

TORONTO MINING CLOSE

Toronto, May 28.—The Toronto mining market had its periodic shake-down today, selling reaching considerable proportions in the base metal and silver stocks in which losses ranged up to 62 with very little of a recovery before the close. Some of the gold stocks were also on a report that France was abandoning the gold standard, except in the few of the cheaper issues, there were recoveries before the close. Abandonment of the NRA in the U. S. was used as the chief depressing influence in the metals and settlement of under-margined accounts was a factor in the slumping of scarities.

Mining market prices broke sharply in heavy selling today as the market attempted to approximate the unsettlement caused by the application of code regulations in the U. S. With the result of wiping out under-margined accounts, facing the month-end settlement, caved in and the flood of offerings at the prices down, base metal and silver stocks being particularly subject to attack because of their recent advance.

Noranda backed off 30, Hudson Bay 61.05, with losses up to 10 cents appeared for Sherritt, Base Metals Corporation and Premier. In the silvers Castle sold below $1.00 for a loss of 8 cents, Kirkoler weakened 36 cents and Bear 5. In the senior gold group Lamaque was off to a new low at $14.50. Dome down 50 cents to $41.25, McWatters 15 to $1.05 and Wrights Hargreaves to $6.25.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, May 28 (AP)—With the new week's main recovery prop dislodged by the United States Supreme Court's adverse code ruling and the French currency crisis clouding the financial horizon, the Stock Market looked ahead fearfully today.

The buying movement in equities that took place just after the opening pushed many issues up substantially, there was a quick turnabout, however, led by the metals, oils and alcohols.

Among Canadian stocks, International Nickel ripped a point but shares of Dome, McIntyre and Canadian Pacific held fairly narrow. On the curb Hudson Bay receded nearly a point, while Lake Shore was steady. Dominion Government issues were a bit lower. Canadian funds eased 3-32 of a cent at 99.93 3-4 cents.

Among shares that managed to hold gains of fractions to a point or so were Santa Fe, Great Northern, Union Pacific, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, North American, National Biscuit, Macy Safeway Stores, Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward.

Losses of fractions to around 3 included U.S. Smelting, Cerro De Pasco, American Smelting, Commercial Solvents, Kennecott, U.S. Industrial Alcohol, United Chemical, Case, Westinghouse, U.S. Steel and American Woolen. Preferred. The motors were about even.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 28—(CP)—Cattle trade was dull, the calf, sheep and lamb divisions steady at the opening of the Toronto livestock market today. No hog prices were established in the morning trading. There was a holdover of 1200 head including many choice weighty steers.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 810; calves 440; hogs 440; sheep and lambs 540.

With cattle at a standstill, there were not enough early sales to establish prices.

Calves were firm at $6.50 to $7.00 for choice and a few tops at $7.50. Common to medium calves sold at $3.50 to $5.75.

Spring lambs were steady at $10.— cwt. for choice and $7.00 to $9.00 for common to medium quality. Some feed-lot lambs were unsold up to late morning.

Sheep held steady at from $1.00 to $3.00 cwt. with a few tops at $3.50.

unconstitutional—to get away from the famous 5 to 4 decisions. Others would set the ratio at three-fourths.

Washington, May 28 (AP)—Here's how United States NRA codes stand:

Number of codes: 566 regular and 135 supplemental.

Number of employees: 3,323 in 16 Washington; 1,239 in the field.

Number of workers under codes: 16,230,000 out of 30,225,000 theoretically eligible to come under codes.

Cost of NRA to Government and industry per year: $55,000,000; $41,000,000 being paid by industry through its code authorities; the balance used to run the Government machine.

As became effective June 16, 1933; was set to expire June 16, 1935 at midnight.

Most hourly provisions set at 40 hours maximum a week, but with many exceptions.

Minimum wage scale ran from 12 to 70 cents an hour.

Cancer in Lungs Blamed on 'Gas'

TORONTO, May 28.—(CP)—A disquieting feature of cancer in England is a rapid increase in cancer of the lungs, Norman Patterson, surgeon of the throat, nose and ear department of the London Hospital, London, Eng., reported today. Mr. Patterson is here to deliver an address on cancer of the nose and throat to the American Laryngological Society Convention.

English authorities according to Dr. Patterson blame the increase of lung cancer on gasoline fumes. He expressed his own conviction cancer was individual rather than hereditary.

Cancer of the nose and throat need not be necessarily fatal," he said. At the London Hospital an increasing number of cancer cases have been successfully treated.

Much of British Navy Is Reported Obsolete

LONDON, May 28.—(CP-Havas)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler's demand for 35 per cent of British naval tonnage will be rejected because much of the British navy is obsolete, Hector Bywater, well-known naval writer, said in the Daily Telegraph today.

JAMES McKINNEY—Vancouver

The death occurred at Richmond, Vancouver Island, British Columbia, on Tuesday, May 7th of James McKinney, who was born in Lower Tyendinaga Township, 90 years ago and who will be remembered by many of the older residents of the district. He was one of Richmond's oldest old-timers. He and his wife, formerly Miss Jennie Fairman, who was born also in the Melrose district, having arrived on the Island many years ago. He was one of the largest farmers on the Island, and had recently specialized in loganberry production, making his own winery. He with his wife had celebrated their golden wedding on the Island ever since their arrival, and they had watched Richmond grow from a land of bog and swamp to its present state of ideal farms and homes. He was a member of the Vancouver Pioneer Association.

Surviving him are his wife, formerly Miss Jennie Fairman, and the following daughters and sons: Mrs. J. R. Cook and Mrs. Frank Lowney of Long Beach, California; Mrs. W. R. Simpson, Mr. Aldo McKinney and Mr. William McKinney of British Columbia; Mrs. H. L. McKinney, widow of Harry McKinney, resides in Vancouver.

Mrs. R. W. Sherman, 168 Church Street, Belleville, is a first cousin of the late Mr. McKinney.

HELPING TO BUILD THE BRITISH 'ROUND-THE-WORLD HIGHWAY

In 1885, the Canadian Pacific Railway was organized for the purpose of completing a line to span the continent.

The Bank's directors, confident of the future of the Dominion, placed a generous share of the Bank's resources behind that project, which was completed in 1885 and formed the commencement link in the British 'Round-the-World Highway. Subsequent events have shown that the Bank's confidence was well founded—more than justified by the undertaking's continued more than by other, to the settlement and development of Western Canada.

The Bank promptly opened branches at Vancouver and Victoria, subsequently at points along the railway which since have become thriving cities!

This is one of many experiences throughout how the Bank of Montreal, looking forward with Canada from the beginning, has been a useful factor in the development of the country. In the future, the Bank expects to continue the unbroken co-operation now forward with Canada, forward the nation's future destiny.

TANGLED LIVES

By ANN FORESTER

"I love you . . ." had she heard that? Was this suddenly bringer to her heart, love? Then why was her mind forever struggling against love? They were fighting, those two strong wills clashing. The fire in the dark eyes beating down upon him. "This was not love—this was not passion—this was mad-ness, an obsession—like the sea-gull itself. They were a perpetual challenge to each other . . .

Then the memory flashed of the moment when Keith had caught her in his arms—the strange little shake that ran through his voice—Oh, he loved her! He was stirred to the depths of his heart! She had that power over him—else, why did he fight the thought of her . . ."

Joyce thought of his keen dark face poised above her own in the moonlight, and trembling joy as keen as a knife pierced her so that she hung for a moment limp on the rail and felt that she was going to cry.

And like a dreary wind caution stirred in the back of her mind. This must not be! This was madness! She was not fighting him. She was fighting herself. Fighting the part within her that drew him. Whipping up her fainting honor, her wounded pride. . . .

A chattering group came down the deck, making loud plans for going ashore at Honolulu. They saw her. Waved. She waved back and turned abruptly. She could not face people now. She went to Roger's cabin.

To her relief, Roger was awake. As a rule the old man liked to sleep late in the morning and have his leisurely breakfast in bed served by the room steward.

But this morning, Roger had finished breakfast. He was sitting propped against the pillows, smoking a pipe in a dark rich silk robe, which he had picked out for himself.

It struck Joyce with a little pang that Roger's wasted figure was more spare than usual, and his bald head stacked neatly back from his lined forehead was more white than grey.

A little warm rush of pity and gratitude went up from her heart, strengthening the resolution in her mind. She sat down beside the bed and laid her warm hands over his wrinkled ones.

"Sleep well, dear?"

"As usual. And you?" Roger's eyes, bright and watchful seemed searching her face.

"I slept all right. About the dance . . ." she found herself stammering. Forced herself to go on. Getting her heart grow calm.

"Roger, you're going to sweet to me—so indulgent to all my whims . . . I have another whim now! Would you mind? Of course I don't mean to spoil your plans . . . but if you wouldn't mind—"

"My dear, I don't know yet what it is you want."

Joyce laughed, and it was a shrill, thin little laugh. "I want stupid Roger, to get over at Honolulu. We get in this afternoon, you know. We planned to stop there on our way home—but why can't we stop off now?"

"And not go to China?"

"Well —we could go on another ship . . . We have stop over privileges, you know. We could go on by China later . . . or on a Japanese ship—"

Oh, why where there was no Jim Keith to send the blood surging through her veins . . . no Jim Keith to distort the real proportions of her life. The one man to break through the barrier of reserve with which she had built against the world, her safety lay in flight. This much she owed to Roger: in all honor, Roger who had been so good to her.

There was a curious little smile in old Roger's eyes when at last he agreed to stay over in Honolulu.

RUNNING FROM FATE

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

Joyce stayed close to Roger that day, as though she drew a measure of strength from the old man. She spoke little—it was never like Joyce to talk much. And today there was much to think about. She was running from Fate . . . Making another of those abrupt decisions which turned her destiny at right angles. She had done this when she ran away at night from Riverton after her romantic dream of Norman Weaver's love.

She had run away from Jeff Thorrold and the doubtful luxury he offered . . . Curious to think of that now. That dream of her life was unreal. Cloud like. Jeff Thorrold was a vague unpleasant shape somehow monstrous and vague like ogres in the nursery stories.

Now she was running away from Jim Keith.. And this was danger! This man had the power to sway her heart and soul. This would be no pleasant summer voyage flirtation. They were both too vital for that. The memory of that mad moment in the bow had shown her how he could sway her. Oh, away—to save her poise—to save her heart. Finally with Roger—kind, good Roger who had given her everything . . .

Silently beating her heart down, as she sat in the steamer chair beside Roger pretending to be engrossed in a bright covered magazine.

The old man watched her, noticing how her eyes fixed intently on the lifting horizon. Noticing how she started as a shadow fell on the chair beside her. Jim Keith stood before them. Very tall and straight in the sunshine, thought the old man enviously gloriously young.

"I hear you are thinking of leaving us, sir, when the Nepture reaches Honolulu?" His voice held only conventional regret but the line at his mouth was grim, and though he addressed Roger Cameron, Joyce a moment his eyes brushed the face of his young wife.

"Mrs. Cameron suddenly decided that she wanted to see Honolulu first. We can catch a later ship to Shanghai, of course."

Was there something of satisfaction in the other man's voice?

"Certainly . . . The Neptune's sister ship—Diadna will touch there. Well . . . we shall hate to lose you and Mrs. Cameron, sir."

Tense as a sword, that slender figure in the deck chair. After her murmured greeting her eyes had gone far out to the blue of the horizon. While the two men had been speaking her face had gone slowly white. Now, as though he drew her gaze in spite of herself her eyes came back, lifted to his, tortured, a flash of violet fire.. Withdrawn went back to the far horizon. All of her—yearning to him— thrilled by him—hating him— fighting the eternal challenge in him.

One little flash of triumph in her chilled heart. He was wretched! He too knew this miserable madness for her. . . Oh, it was wise that she turn and flee! They could not keep their heads together!

She smiled Roger's courteous farewell with cool courteous—and shorter. She picked up her magazine with studied indifference as he hesitated, then left, his tall shadow receding into alone gray and white boards of the deck.

A fury of helpless jealousy raging in his heart. Something primitive—untamed leaping in his blood. His woman . . . she had been hurt last night—just the two of them locked in world of rain and sky. Impulse had told him— her kisses had told him . . . A glorious fury she had been, telling her love—proudly but gladly . . .

What had come over him! Was he in love? Love —he'd laughed at the word. There was no such thing. Affection, yes. He'd had that for the young mother who had died in his own arms. Desire, he'd had it for the young man cousin he'd looking since childhood. That was loyalty, he could understand. He could understand passion. But this was something new . . . deadening mad and sweet which did not submit to analysis or reason.

All night Jim Keith had thought of her. It was not only the lovely body of her which haunted him. It was the woman-challenge of her. She possessed him. . . .

Going out of his life that way . . . And he, like a man chained, could not follow. Her hands had trembled just now when she picked up that magazine. She felt it too, this fire which was burning him! That was why she was fleeing. She was afraid. By heaven, he had to see her.

Keith turned went swiftly down to her cabin where he found Kitty packing the grips.

She looked up as he stood in the doorway. "We're all over in Honolulu, Mr. Keith."

"I know. I was just speaking to Mr. Cameron—" he answered and was secretly astonished to find his voice sounded as usual. It certainly miss our pleasant little walks and talks, Miss Dawson."

"Ah' maybe you think I won't!" said Kitty darkly. "That's the only draw back to this globe trotin.' Making such wonderful friends and then losin' them forever. Ah' never was there such another friend like Mr. Keith, in as much of the world as I've seen!"

Under the mirror shining in those honest blue eyes Jim Keith felt his throat tighten. Something very young and boyish and shy in his heart, crumpling for the moment the half cynical pose he put on to the world. His hand shot out, gripped Kitty's work worn paw.

"Kit . . . you're a peach! And instantly he was embarrassed, as only a reserved man can be who has shown too much of his feelings.

But Kitty was equal to the occasion. "The only one on my family list!" Every while tooth spoke for itself, and that grin restored the easy relation between them.

"By the way . . ." the man tried to make his careless. "I wonder if Miss had told him— her kisses had told him . . . A glorious fury she

Petroff And Dunlop to Meet in Main Bout

Shortly after noon today final arrangements for Friday night's all-star Kiwanis wrestling show were announced by Chairman George Lee. After four days of ranging and endeavouring to find a suitable opponent for Al Dunlop, the local promoters signed Dan Petroff, the Russian Lion to meet Dunlop in the main bout at the Arena on Friday in a best two out of three fall bout over the one hour limit. Petroff recently returned from Boston, where he successfully wrestled all winter in and around the New England metropolis. Petroff is well known to local wrestling fans as a clean orthodox wrestler, who knows all of the various angles of the game. Petroff showed Bunny Dunlop a thing or two following the unsatisfactory result of last week's show. "I tank I can slop dees gooh 'Think" west one beg slam", Petroff was heard to remark. The semi-final bout brings together Jack Pearl and Bulldog Findlay while the opener sees the return of Johnny Dallas versus Emil Daly, the Omaha youth, who eliminated Frank Sievin last week. Referee Forbes of Toronto, will referee as will Bert Wells of this city.

TWEED VICTORS OVER ST. PAULS

Pounding the deliveries of two local hurlers to many different corners of Central Park, the Tweed softball aggregation downed the St. Paul A. C. nine by the score of 16 to 7 in the first locally played inter-city game of the local district softball league. Solid base blows coupled with indifferent playing and poor pitching was the fate of defeat of the losers and victory for the winners.

Bill Cowsill, recently acquired pitcher from Kingston ascended the hilltop for the Tweed team replacing the St. Paul squad to eight hits and two runs, including a circuit blow by R. Cornell in the seventh frame. Cowsill whiffed eleven local batters, walking three during his sojourn on the mound. Bellefiyer's "Speedball Jackie" Smith, started on the hilltop for the St. Paul aggregation but was derricked in the fourth in favor of Bill Cassidy. Smith whiffed four batters and did not allow a single hit until the fourth, when with two out a misjudged fly in left went for a homer from the hand of Simpson, the local catcher. From hence on it was a parade, as the Tweedites pounded the spherical aplenty and kept adding to their fast accumulating number of runs.

Chuck Barreys, local pitching hope, led the club in all hitters, at the night with four consecutive singles for a perfect day at bat. Bob Cornell's homer and Caddick's double were the only extra base hits accounted for by the Tweed Sinclair with a double and two singles for the Tweed team while while Simpson had a single besides his circuit drive. Summary of fast, all of the visitors accounted for at least one or two singles except Mr. Critchens, batter for batter, the majority of the Tweed hits were solid bats blown. Tonight in the Belleville Senior League at Central Park the Alemites and the Aajmass meet in an important tilt, the winners assuming undisputed possession of first place in the league standings.

NEWARK BEARS ON WAY DOWN

Seven Run Rally Fails to Win Game Against Albany

(By the Associated Press)

Due to a losing streak which has resulted in the loss of five of their last seven games, Newark Bears today found themselves in the unfamiliar position of fifth place in the International League standings.

Playing one of the two scheduled games in the circuit, while the Royals were idle yesterday, the Bears dropped a half game back of Montreal and 2 1-2 games to the rear of the pace-setting Toronto Maple Leafs, when they fell before the home run bats of Albany, Senators 13-12.

The Bears made a gallant effort to win the game, when they staged a seven-run uprising in the last half of the ninth but Jimmy Carlsbers, third of the Albany hurlers to see service, halted the rally one run short of a tie.

Merrill Mee's second home run of the game with the bases loaded, Bill Baker's double and three singles featured the attack but before it got underway the Senators themselves did some circuit swatting. Don Kelleit drove two out of the park and Ollie Sax and Bud Hafey got one each while Ernie Koy added another for the Bears.

Rochester Red Wings snapped out of a losing streak that saw them drop five straight and lose 14 out of their last 18 games, when Johnny Mize blasted a long drive over the centre field fence in the 10th inning to give the Red Wings an 8-7 victory in the first game of the year at Buffalo. Jim Moore and Jimmy Brown also hit homers for Rochester. Ray Pfirman, Buff relief man, stopped the Red Wings in the pinch.

Harry Robinson and Freddie Parent, two local fight enthusiasts, left yesterday for New York City where they will take in the McLarnin-Ross fight tonight. Robinson has booked the Metropolis before to see these two in action and slightly favors Ross, over the long route, he says. Incidentally Harry also says he hopes tonight's fight is as good as the first welterweight scrap he witnessed 20 years ago, between Kid Lewis and Jack Britton. (How time does fly.)

Gerry Quinn's Tweed softballers gave notice in the local Senior league, that they are to be very much considered, their hilling last night when they defeated the St. Paul A. C. 14 to 2, made other clubs in the loop sit up and take notice. Confidently Bill Gowsell, who hurled for the Tweed aggregation, was recently made a permanent citizen of Sam Curry's adopted town, Gowsell is a goalkeeper of note, as well as a softball pitcher, Secretary Charlie Tebworth announced today, that Alemite and the Aajmass would clash at Central Park tonight while the Young Canada-Alemite game of June 4th had been indefinitely postponed.

2 Year Record Without Defeat Ends for Grads

Edmonton, May 28 (CP)—A 10-year record without defeat was ended by the Edmonton Commercial Grads but the 12-times Canadian Champions were still going strong in defence of their Women's International Basketball championship against the challenge of Tulsa, Okla., Stenos.

The swift-shifting United States girls handed Grads their first defeat in the International Underwood trophy play-off in a young un-assuming youth and should make his mark in the track and field world. Johnson is the same age as Jesse Owens, the A.A.U. all-round champion who broke the standard set was G. Lash of the O.S.D. Evans threw the discus six inches further than the standard calls for and will be included in the party of athletes to compete in the provincial finals. Incidentally the S.C.I. A.A. Vs. will hold its annual field day on Thursday of this week.

Roy Dorey, star pitching-outfielder for the Napanee Gibbards, has shaken the dust of Ernie Gibbard's town from his heels and gone north where he will play for Timmins in the Northern League. The Gibbards will miss the services of Dorey during the championship season as he is a valued hitter, a good outfielder and a steady pitcher. There is a rumor about to the effect, that Ban Card, ex-Napanee infielder and now without annum for the clubs of the Gibbards, may follow Dorey to the mining camp.

Barney Ross Will Be Favorite in New York Joust

(By Sam Robertson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

NEW YORK, May 28.—(CP)—Jarring Jimmy McLarnin and bustling Barney Ross write tonight the third and probably most thrilling chapter of their pulsating ring drama.

Each has predicted victory for himself by a knockout, promising the prospective gallery of 35,000 that steaming punching will replace the rapier thrusts of their first two duels, when the spoils were divided.

The weight will favor by a 7 to 5 choice to bang the welterweight crown from Jimmy's brow. The Chicago Jew has the advantage in youth and speed for the scheduled 15-round fight but the Vancouver lifteholder is confident the sleep-inducing power he carries in either hand is weapon enough to make him the winner.

The weatherman provides the only rasping note. "Showers this afternoon or tonight," he says. It seems, however, the fight faithful will not let place much stock in him. For the ticket sale continues to break the warm sunshine of prosperity. A $200,000 gate is a strong possibility.

Both Cons Optimize

Pre-battle statements from the two camps were colorful. The end of a training grind, that set a record in things for McLarnin found him boxing like the McLarnin of old.

The long sleep of work slip shattered his timing and was stronger than it was before either of his title fights. Ross reports, that he is, came in his prediction that he will win in eight rounds.

Barney predicts, that with his newly-found hitting power he can smash McLarnin into the realm of the Polo ground ring for a ten-count, possibly as early as the sixth round, certainly not later than the tenth.

"All I ask is a square deal. It won't be hard for a good official to decide the winner," read a statement from Barney. "The crowd will know by the end whether or when they carry McLarnin away."

A counter one under McLarnin's name read:

"Some people have been saying, that I am afraid of Ross. Those classes are over—that I am on the decline. Well, I am curious when these people will say, when they see the referee counting Ross out tonight."

CRICKET

Last evening, after an absence of many years the game of cricket was once more played at Albert College. The occasion was a return match between Albert Colleges and Queen Elizabeth Collegiate.

The Q.V.S. Fleven went to bat first, Captain Cheetham sent to Stewart McBride to bat with him. Hodder was sent to bowl for Albert College. Cheetham was in good form. The first four batters were soon back in the pavilion. Mr. Bride for one run. Pepper two, Cheetham four, Hopkins four, for a row the fifth man to go. Q.V.S. showed good batting form and batted for fourteen overs when they were bowled out by Summers. Morris and Williams batted well with Connell for two runs and Browne. O. Webber was caught out. Spring and Williams batted well with Hodder run with Hodder bowling and Reynolds. Hodder was in good form before the innings ended. Q.V.S. had scored 103 runs for the ten wickets.

Albert College then went to bat, Capt. Morris sent in Hodder and Mackenzie to bat with Hodder bowled the whole game for Q.V.S McCrie was the bowler out with no runs and Hall was out to L.B.W. by a quick succession. Summers and Munk were caught out. Munk after running three runs. McDonald in a spirit of fun batted for fourteen runs out five and Morris ran one. Bishop coming to bat in place of Atkinson who was the man in the field. Fourteen runs to make. At this point the last running succumbed for some runs from hyes. Bishop batted well. Hodder was bowled and was out L.B.W. Lake, the last man, came in with fourteen to make. Bishop batted well. Fourteen runs hyes were run. With five runs to the lateness of the innings and only one innings each was played.

Albert College— Capt. Morris, Hodder, Munk, McCrie, Hall, A. Mackenzie, Summers, Bishop, McIntosh, Wallace, Lake.

Queen Victoria—Capt. Pepper, McBride, Argue, Pigden, Ferrow, McDonnell W. Browne, W. McBride, Spring, Reynolds, Williams.

Another game will be played on G. V. S. grounds on Thursday after 5 four o'clock.

White Sox Lose Ground When A's Drub Them

(By Andy Clarke)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York Yankees, dogging Chicago White Sox in the American League ball race, have a lot to be thankful for in John Thomas Allen.

The husky right-hander has a record of five victories and no defeats to date, and when he throws his fire ball he has nothing but his arm does not shoot with pain as it did last year. Thus far he has pitched a total of 49 innings, struck out 38 and allowed 40 hits. One of the Yankees' "Gold a year men", he has changed his price tag.

Yesterday he left the mound with a 3-1 decision over Detroit Tigers. He held Mickey Cochrane's boys to three hits, made four of them whiff and in defeating "Schoolboy" Rowe, shook off the hoodoo, that shadow has held over the Yanks for the past two years.

Meanwhile Philadelphia Athletics were drubbing the leading White Sox 16-1. Vernon Wilshire, Rookie pitcher, kept the bingles of the Dykes outfit well scattered, while his teammates went to work on the opposing twirlers for 11 safe blows.

Sothern Leads Attack

St. Louis Browns defeated Boston Red Sox 5-2 with "Moose" Solters, playing his first game with the Browns, leading the attack on his former mates. He banged out a triple to contribute toward the victory.

At Washington, Cleveland Indians turned on a rally, that produced three runs in the ninth inning to defeat the Senators, who had garnered six. With the bases loaded, Trosky filed out to end the game.

In an abbreviated National League schedule, Cincinnati gathered in its fifth straight win, defeating Boston Braves 9-5. It was the fifth straight setback for the Braves. Smith, Berger and Betts fielded 14 hits as the Reds took on victory.

Philadelphia Pirates, after winning four straight, bowed to the Phillies 4-3. The Phillies defeated 13 Buccaneer pitchers in the 12 innings. Last partial revenge on the Pirates, who had scuttled their ship in their every other encounter this year.

Brooklyn-Chicago and New York-St. Louis games were rained out.

CHANGE OF PACE HELPS ROOKIE

John Whitehead Given Coach Credit For Showing

Philadelphia, May 28 (AP)— It takes only one sentence for Albert John Whitehead, the rookie pitcher who joined the Chicago White Sox, to explain the system that has brought him seven straight victories.

"Mr. Lucker calls the pitch and I shoot it there."

The drawling Southwesterner — now hopped high in the League—doesn't figure he has any more stuff than he had in the Texas League, but he has developed a change of pace.

Pitching Coach Lucker won't let the spring end taught me how to use a change of pace," he said.

"Silent John," a 200-pound, six-foot youngster from a Northeast Texas farm, has retired batters who rarely speaks unless he's addressed, the won't venture an estimate as to the number of games he'll win this year but he hopes "to win them all."

Whitehead has one of the best fast balls on the White Sox staff. He's also got a good fast ball. So far he has pitched 19 ball, three-hit and four-hit games.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Alex Kampouris, Reds—Belted a home run in the first game of the twin bill in three runs batted in victory over Braves.

Claude Moore, Phillies—Blanked Pirates for 4 1-3 innings in relief role as Phillies copped first win of the year over Pirates.

Daily Short Story

PATIENCE

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

It was the night before the wedding. George Hatton was sitting and talking to three of his friends, sitting and imbibing stimulating beverages. The subject uppermost in their minds quite naturally was the prospect for George.

They all admitted that Evelyn Hanley was attractive and utterly charming. They toasted him and wished him happiness. Then the discussion veered back to the girl.

The most important quality a man should seek in a girl he is marrying is patience," remarked one of the friends. "Beauty fades and brilliance grows tiresome. But a good heart and an even disposition! Ah, that is the way and wont of the home."

"Quite right," chimed in George. "How do you know of any heart bigger than Evelyn's?"

"Maybe so," said the friend, "but how about the nerves? If I were to marry—I'm always just a bad to my future wife's nerves. Can Evelyn take it?"

They were still speaking ratio- but the drinks were getting the better of some of them. was of the pugnacious type. But they were of the fun-loving kind and were not averse to playing a practical joke at times.

"I don't doubt she can take it—although I've never really given her a chance. I'm of a pretty even disposition myself. But it's too late now."

"It's never too late," said one of the friends, and winked to the others.

They continued to drink. George —because of the impending happy —a bit more than the others. Finally, he reached the stage of semi-consciousness. He was extremely drowsy.

"I guess we ought to get going," said one of them. They rose somewhat staggeringly and helped George to his feet.

They got out and into a taxicab.

Quiet Wedding

The next afternoon, Evelyn Hanley stood at the church. They had agreed that the affair was to be a quiet one and only a few friends and relatives were invited. No involved ceremonies and elaborate trimmings. It was to be simple and short.

Evelyn looked at her wrist watch. George was fifteen minutes late. What is—fifteen minutes had already passed since the hour for which the ceremony was scheduled. But there was no sign of George.

The relatives and friends chatted about the church. The minister sat in the parish study reading a book. He had grown tired of standing and waiting and he asked the prospective bride to call him when she was ready.

Another fifteen minutes passed. The murmur began to rise a bit higher. One of her more intimate friends said to her, "that's an outrage. I always mistrusted him. He is too quiet. Still water—you know."

Evelyn said: "Maybe something happened. I'll wait a little while. I'm sure something must have happened."

Her sister stepped out and phoned his apartment. There was no answer. She finally phoned the landlady. She received a strange report. Apparently, George had not come home that night.

Some of the friends and relatives, anxious to embarrass Evelyn, began to slip away quietly. Her best friend and her sister remained. The friend was on the verge of a tantrum, and the sister was near hysterics. Evelyn kept on repeating—"If nothing happened, he will surely arrive."

"What strikes me funny," rasped the sister, "is that Charles and Bob and Arthur are missing also. It looks almost like a plot. I tried to phone them, but neither has been home since either."

"He should have at least had the decency to telephone," bitterly remarked the friend.

The minister came out from his study. Evelyn said: "I will wait till night."

Overtime

Just about the time that the wedding had been scheduled, one of his friends was shaking George.

"Hey, George," he shouted, "aren't you going to attend your own wedding? You're overdue."

George woke with a start! He looked about him. He had apparently spent the night sleeping in an abandoned barn. He looked about—nothing but unploughed fields in sight. His friends were stretching their arms.

"Holy smokes," he cried. "We must find a telephone. She'll be waiting at the church."

The friends agreed and rushed out. There was a dwelling nearby, but it appeared barred. In the distance they noticed a road and headed for it on the run. After a while they reached the road. There was no house in sight.

They tried to stop several of the passing cars. But apparently in the disheveled condition that they appeared motorists were afraid to stop for them. They started at a trot. They must have walked for more than an hour when they reached the first house. They stopped. They knocked at the door. There was no answer.

Back they went to the road. Finally, after some more thumbing, a chesp car stopped and picked them up. They found they were about thirty miles from their town. The motorist agreed to take them there as fast as possible.

No sooner did they reach the town, when George stepped out and telephoned.

Evelyn was still waiting at the church.

"How did she sound?" asked one of them.

And for the first time, it dawned upon George that it may not have been an accident, but a deliberate act on the part of his friends to test Evelyn.

"A little tense, but calm," he replied. "But that's a hell of a thing to do. Why you could have wrecked my life." George did not look calm any more.

His friends denied his charges vociferously. "Now, don't lose your temper," they finally wound up. "You should be patient, soon..."

When George and Evelyn returned from their honeymoon, they found a new car awaiting them. It was a wedding gift from his three friends. A note was attached to the windshield. It read:

"To the patient pair. So that you should never be late again."

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop was taking a week, last Saking a week and I said G. pop, look, imagine.

I'm looking with a certain degree of imagination, I see where anything more noteworthy than a newly dug up street and an abandoned pickaxe with one point broken off leaning dejectedly against a telegraf pole, pop said, and I said, That's it, pop, I mean that's what I mean, I mean that pickaxe. I mean they must of left it there because they dont want it any more, and anybody could take it that wanted to, I said.

Even as you and I, for instants, pop said, and I said, Sure, O, why dont we, pop?

There must be a reason, pop said. Or, to put it even more logicly, there's probably no good reason why we should. In other words, would a mutilated pickaxe be of any lasting or even temporary utility around the house? As a tack lifter, although it aint work to a certain degree, it would most likely do more harm than good. As a nut cracker it would undoubtedly be too cumbersome, particularly for ladies, and as an anchor the chances are 10 thousand to one against its services ever being called upon, he said, and I said, But Jimminy, pop, imagine leaving a free pickaxe for anybody to take. How about taking it just to have it around as a curiosity? I said.

I admit that very few homes are graced with disabled pickaxes, and to that extent it would set our abode apart in a certain measure, even if it didn't distinguish it, and yet it's equally a fact that very few homes can boast of a broken down kork horse or a retired rug boat, so I'm afraid you will have to discover a more valid reason, and I am afraid there is none, pop said.

Well, I chawt about 10 more minnits, and there didn't seem to be, and when we went passed the pickaxe on the way back, it wasn't there any more, making me feel pretty worse and somewhat thinking somebody else must of took it, and making me feel allmy better on account of knowing there was no more excuse for worrying about it.

DR. J. MARSHALL HEADS Y'S MEN

Elected as President For Coming Semester at the Club

Dr. Jack Marshall was the unanimous choice of the local Y's Men's Club as president for the coming year, during their annual meeting and election of officers held at the Y.M.C.A. last evening. The entire slate of officers submitted by the nominating committee was accepted as read while the members endorsed their new president with the usual club greeting.

The treasurer's report showed the club to have fulfilled all of its obligations for the past year while the coming year's agenda will be presented by President Dr. Marshall and his directors at the closing meeting of the club.

The officers elected for the coming semester for the Y's Men's Club resulted—President, Dr. J. Marshall; 1 P. President, Alex Weir; Secretary, Ed. Buchanan; treasurer, Harry Foote; directors, Jake Wilson, Herb Mutz, Stan Willmer, and Dawson Boyd. The nominating committee consisted of three past presidents Y'smen Geo. Paisley, Mel Blanchard and Norm Rivard. During the evening Past International President Newton Thompson introduced a new member to the club in the person of Lorne MacDougall, who will subsequently receive his initiation.

Speaks on War

The special speaker of the evening following the election of officers was the Rev. T. B. Naylor of the Tabernacle Church, who spoke on "The highlights of a chaplain in the Canadian Expeditionary Force". Rev. Naylor was attached to the C.E.F. as a padre at the military base hospital No. 3 in France where there were 1,800 beds, which usually were called upon to accommodate as high as 2,400 patients. Rev. Naylor explained, "This hospital was maintained by McGill University and probably highly efficient during the entire war, the speaker assured his listeners following a discussion on account of hospital life under military command. Rev. Naylor concluded his educational talk with many little anecdotes from his many experiences while serving with the padre in the army, both in France and England. His account of an air raid proved most interesting. He was introduced by Y'man Joe Reid.

Before relinquishing his office Retiring President Alex Weir personally thanked his fellow-members for their untiring efforts and wholehearted support during his past term of office and assured the incoming president of the full support of the club members, but also of himself. After thanking the speaker of the evening for his interesting talk, President Weir reminded the members of the Y's Men's semi-annual rummage sale to be held at the Y.M.C.A. next Saturday night.

Famed Dionne Quintuplets Celebrate First Birthday Anniversary To-Day

To-day the famous Dionne quintuplets are enjoying their first birthday party. Marie and Yvonne are quite elated about it; Cecile wonders what all the fuss is about; Emilie wants to know what that card is for, while Annette is going to find out if it tastes as good as her birthday cake. Toronto, May 28—Just a year ago to-day, between 4.30 and 5.00 o'clock in the morning, a miracle happened in a little backwoods home near Callander, Ontario, 250 miles north of Toronto.

The miracle was the birth of five children to Mrs. Oliva Dionne.

Five tiny bits of humanity came into the world—into a crude little room furnished only to the barest necessities, hope to keep them alive.

But keep them alive he did. Of course, he had some help. His brother from Toronto advised; people from all over the continent helped; the Canadian Red Cross built a hospital; newspapers sent reminders; the government did its part.

For a month they hovered between life and death. But they lived.

And then when the first pictures were flashed across the country, literally millions fell in love with the beautiful babies. They were oblivious to the sensation they were causing. Some there were who would have capitalized on this fame; others, well-meaning, sought to take a hand in their care; exploiters fought and vied with each other; grievances were stirred up that will take years to mend.

But the Dionne quintuplets lived on—to keep the place they had won in the hearts of not only this nation but other nations as well.

Healthy and Normal

To-day they are one year old; they are healthy and normal in every respect; they laugh and giggle and play just like other children. From the far corners of the continent thousands pilgrimage to their little home to witness this miracle which has never before been known as far back as medical history records.

Their future is assured. They are wards of His Majesty the King; a trust fund of over $ 500,000 has been set up for them and for the five other children—the forgotten children—of Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne.

Not only the quintuplets have achieved fame. Their doctor, unassuming, quiet-spoken Dr. Dafoe has taken his place as one of the great medical men in history. Beloved by all who meet him, this doctor, who would rather live in a little town in the north country than move to a large city where his fame would reap thousands of dollars for him, has almost single-handed performed the miracle of keeping alive the Dionne quintuplets.

In Ontario, the Minister of Welfare, Hon. David Croll, has enjoyed the opportunity of this first anniversary to call attention to the thousand babies in the province who are not so fortunate. The week of May 26 in Ontario is "Adopt-a-Baby" week and the Minister of Welfare and the newspapers are urging those who are able, to take some little waif from a shelter, to give to some forgotten child a home, a father, a mother and the love and care that go with them.

And so, Marie, Yvonne, Emilie, Cecile and Annette Dionne as early as their first birthday anniversary are responsible for finding homes for hundreds of tiny tots.

A toast then to the quintuplets! The whole world wishes them many Happy Returns!

"Happy Home Going"—mother and new baby leave Red Cross Outpost Hospital for their cabin home in the Northern Ontario bush.

780 Babies Born at Red Cross Outpost Hospitals in Last Year

In this connection, the nurse at the Red Cross Outpost at Redditt, Ontario, sends details of how she had been instrumental in saving the life of an Indian woman at Minaki last winter.

"The thermometer registered around 50 degrees below zero," she writes. "I received a telegram notifying me that an Indian woman had been confined and was very ill at Minaki.

"We snapped a freight train and climbed into the caboose. After travelling a few miles, a half-breed hailed the train. We went a long distance and then another Indian, with a dog-team, met us. Then the mode of travel was faster than walking, but it was cold, and there were no blankets. We travelled nearly a mile by land, and then nearly a mile over frozen water. The Indians lived in miserable log cabins on an island.

"Close to the trail across the ice there were a number of air holes, and crossing was none too safe.

"When we got there, we found the patient very ill. The baby had been born the night before. An old Indian woman had attended her, and now did not know what to do, as the mother was in a serious condition. We got busy and in an hour later she was considerably improved.

"It was her ninth baby. She was only 26 years old. Without our aid, the woman would surely have died, as a doctor couldn't have reached the place until the next day.

"Before we left the settlement, we attended to several other patients, including a baby with a bad skin disease and a woman suffering from tuberculosis."

If it hadn't been for a Red Cross nurse located at an Outpost at Quibell, twins born to a woman a few miles away would never have lived. "It was bitterly cold and stormy when the woman called at the Outpost," writes this nurse. "She came in the school van. I set the men to work lighting the kitchen fire. I ordered some water boiled. A kindly neighbour came in and helped me, because I was the only one on the staff here. In about an hour, the woman gave birth to twins, one about three and a half pounds, the other four and a half pounds. It was quite a job keeping them as warm as they should be, and we had to feed both babies with an eyedropper for about a week. They both did well."

The Red Cross Society has often been referred to as the "greatest mother in the world."

It is for the furthering of the great work of this Society that a special appeal is being made in Belleville beginning next week.

MRS. JOHN GAWLEY PRESIDENT OF Y.P.

Eldorado, May 28—The regular meeting of Eldorado and Union Young People's Society was held on Wednesday evening, May 22nd. at the Eldorado United Church Mr. Gordon Pigden, vice president, presided in the absence of the president, and opened the meeting by singing hymn "Fight the good fight." The Bible lesson was read by Ruth Andrews, and Rev. W. G. Fletcher offered prayer. Hymn "Sound the Battle Cry" was sung and a short business period was conducted. Miss Gladys Martin read the list of members at the meeting. The roll call was responded to by a large number.

The topic: "Why Do Nations Go To War" was given in seven parts, after which a spelling match was enjoyed, each word to be spelled backward, this brought the meeting to a close.

A meeting was planned to be held at the home of Mrs. Pigden to arrange the program for the year.

A vote of thanks was moved for the splendid efforts of the past president, Mrs. Bailey. All joined in singing "For She is a Jolly Good Fellow."

Lunch was served and the meeting closed, all feeling that a successful year had been had.

Mrs. Charles Holmes of Trenton, who has been spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Brownson, returned home on Saturday.

FIRST BIRTHDAY TO BE BROADCAST

Quintuplets' Baby Talk at Dinner Will be Heard

Callander, Ont., May 27.—(CP)—When the Dionne quintuplets have their first birthday supper to-night they will find on the table not a microphone to carry their baby talk over the continent.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe today said he thought 5 p.m. (E.S.T.) would be feeding time for the babies, not even a laugh or even a cry for the public from the two hundred visitors who they perform, well and good. If not don't, the listeners will be disappointed.

"You can't tell what they'll do," said the doctor. "They often do among themselves when that feeding time hour has arrived, and not on this time. There will be no one in the room except the nurses and myself."

During the birthday celebrations Dr. Dafoe also will speak, along with Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Public Welfare; Judge J. A. Valin of North Bay, one of the babies' guardians, and the five nurses, Madame Toulas de Rigueur, Miss Yvonne Edmond, Miss Florida Leduc and Miss Jessie Dafoe.

It was stated Oliva Dionne and his wife would attend the ceremonies at the hospital although they had made no formal announcement of their plans today.

6 PERSONS BURIED IN BLAST-TORN BUILDING IN N.Y.

Ten More Reported Injured in Wreck of Structure

FRONTS WRECKED

Acetylene Tank in Shop Thought to Have Exploded

New York, May 29 (AP)— Six persons were feared buried and eight more were injured today when a powerful explosion of undetermined origin demolished a three-storey brick building on the east side of Manhattan.

Fire in the debris baffled fire fighters who attempted to dig for bodies believed buried under bricks and timbers. After about two hours of frantic work, the flames were brought under control and searchers began systematically to tear the ruins apart.

Ten persons rushed to nearby hospitals were described as seriously hurt.

An added danger was threatened by the proximity of a huge gas tank located near the burning building. After frenzied efforts to prevent the flames from overheating the reservoir, the gas was drawn off.

Several buildings adjoining the wrecked structure were damaged by the force of the explosion. In a bird and pet shop next to the auto shop about 100 canaries were killed.

Officials were undecided as to the cause of the explosion but some believed an acetylene tank in the auto shop was responsible.

IS CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED HOLD-UP

Kingston, May 29—"Hand over everything you got!"

Seated in his car on Barrie Street near Stuart, about 10.30 o'clock on Saturday night, James Lynn of Toronto, said that a young man came over to his car and made this request of him. Lynn refused to hand over anything to the young man, but instead had a woman in a home opposite call the police. Constables Graham and Lindsay arrived on the scene in the police car. In front of the Jock Harty Arena they rounded up a young man who gave his name as Edward Martin, and his address as Toronto. In city Martin was charged with "attempting to rob."

Martin told Magistrate Shea that he only asked for a match. He claimed that the story about an attempted hold-up was a "fabrication" on the part of Lynn.

City Crown Lyons Attorney, conducting the prosecution, asked that the accused be remanded for a week for an examination and to allow his record to be inquired into. The magistrate consented to the week's remand.

HOUSE WILL MARK ASCENSION DAY

Ottawa, May 29—(CP)— Prime Minister R. B. Bennett placed on the paper a motion that the House of Commons take a holiday Thursday, Ascension Day.

Present Administration Interfered With Management Of C. N. R. Liberals Charge

Ottawa, May 28—(CP)—Members of the House of Commons resumed debate on Railways and Shipping today were considering Liberal member charge that the present administration, through Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, had interfered with the management of Canadian National Railways, and government denial that such was the case.

With Hon. C. P. Fullerton, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the government-owned system, and Liberal members clashed with Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of Customs and Canada, yesterday on the question of interference with the Prime Minister had opposed writing down the capital structure of the road. Liberal members of the committee charged that this was the case. Dr. Manion denied it.

Chairman Fullerton had made a statement indicating what had been done by the trustees in the direction of studying the question of writing down the railway system's capital structure, when Liberal members started their barrage. The chairman had left the meeting when Prime Minister Bennett and receiving a letter from him indicating the Prime Minister "was against writing down the capital and that he thought it was there would remain there."

Hon. W. D. Euler, Liberal member for North Waterloo, immediately took up this point. It was clearly indicated, he said, that the railway was completely opposed to writing down the capital, he said.

Dr. Manion denied this, and also strongly objected to a further statement by Hon. W. Gray (Conservative West) that Mr. Bennett had expressed himself as interfered with the management of the system. The present administration, said the railway minister, had been "guilty of political interference than had his predecessor or any other government, he declared.

Charges that the debate was merely "playing politics" were made by Dr. Manion.

The session late finally adjourned to meet at the call of the chair,

NO IT DIDN'T TURN OVER, IT'S JUST ANOTHER INVENTION

The wing-spread of the aeroplane is about 34 feet, and is so constructed that it can maintain an absolutely horizontal position in all kinds of weather.

Excitement, Confusion Follow Ruling on NRA

Prices Erratic, Early Run-up Turns to Selling

INVESTORS WATCH

New York, May 29 (AP)—Cross currents of excitement and confusion over the United States Supreme Court's decision today created divergent price trends in speculative security and commodity markets today.

Many of the sensitive commodity markets dipped rather sharply for a time and the stock market, in the most active trading in months surged up for the first few minutes only to run into a wave of selling in all groups such as metals, oils and alcohols which cancelled much of the initial gains and depressed some issues $1 to $3.

Chicago grain markets reacted after a small sag in wheat, and held close to yesterday's final prices, but in New York, such futures markets as cotton, sugar, rubber, hides and silk declined.

The bond market held around yesterday's final prices, indicating that investors were not jumping to conclusions either way.

Kitty Misses Boat Then Catches It

Toronto, May 29 (CP)—The pet cat of the package freighter Kitty Bay has again boarded ship.

Many "missed the boat" in Toronto more than a month ago and the crew had given her up for lost when the full-sail cat walked aboard the Pine Bay Monday at the Welland Canal. How the cat managed to get from Toronto to Welland remains a mystery.

CONVICT STUDENT MANSLAUGHTER

Accused of Shooting Wife And Priest Last November

New York, May 29—(AP)—Joseph L. Steinmetz, 22-year-old divinity student, was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree early today for the fatal noon slaying of his 17-year-old bride, former Hollywood, Calif., high school girl. He faces a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison, although the jury "strongly" recommended mercy.

Steinmetz was accused of shooting his bride, the former Ruth Armstrong, and a priest, Rev. Joseph J. Leonard, when he found the former partly undressed in the priest's room in the hotel here last November. He was tried only for the death of his wife.

The jury brought in its verdict after deliberating 14 hours and 40 minutes.

The prosecution charged Steinmetz shot his wife and the priest in a jealous rage. The defence maintained he was so intoxicated he did not know what he was doing.

WEATHER

Toronto, May 29—(CP)— Heavy rains have occurred in Southern Ontario and light to moderate showers have been fairly general over Northern Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, while in the Western Provinces it has been fair and comparatively cool.

Lake Superior—Moderate northwest winds; fair and a little cooler.

Georgian Bay—Moderate winds; fair, not much change in temperature.

Saskatchewan—Partly cloudy with stationary or a little higher temperature.

IDENTIFIES BANDIT AS JAIL FUGITIVE

Sarnia, Ont., May 29—(CP)—Definite identification of one of the men concerned in the attempted robbery of George F. Kingston here Sunday night, as Archibald Hyatt, fugitive from Kingston jail, was revealed today by Chief Constable W. J. Lannin.

Chief Lannin stated three local persons had identified pictures of Hyatt as the man who accosted Kingston at the point of a gun but fled when the intended robbery victim refused to hand over $150 he had in his possession. It is believed an accomplice who stood beside the armed man was Bernard Leavey, also wanted as a jail fugitive.

One hundred and seventy-five delegates with others crowded into the town hall for the convention. The village was a hive of activity from the noon hour onward with scores of cars arriving on the streets or in the shops, and in the hall before the gathering was called to order.

RUSH FIRE IS CONTROLLED

North Bay, Ont., May 29—(CP)— The bush fire situation in this district is well in hand today, W. B. Greenwood, chief forester, reported. Many of the weekend fires have been extinguished, though rangers are still patrolling the areas for precautionary measures.

MRS. RATTENBURY DENIES MURDER OF HER HUSBAND

In Subdued Voice Admits Intimacy With Chauffeur

THREAT ALLEGED

Widow Says Husband Read Book on Suicide on March 24

London, May 29—(CP Cable) The Crown's case closed this afternoon when Mrs. Alma Rattenbury took the stand at the Old Bailey today to admit improper relations between herself and youthful George Stoner and assert her husband was aware of it.

Mrs. Rattenbury, 38, and Stoner, 18, are accused of the murder of her husband, 67-year-old Francis Rattenbury, who lived for many years in Canada.

The accused under questioning by her counsel described how Second Stoner's mistress soon after he was hired as the Rattenbury's chauffeur last November. But she said long previously Rattenbury had told her "Don't you do it," and she said she would do so. She asserted Rattenbury spoke of suicide on the evening he was found unconscious in his chair, bleeding from a head wound which caused his death four days later.

Widow Denies

Denying alleged confessions introduced by the Crown, Mrs. Rattenbury said she did not murder her husband, took no part in planning it and knew nothing about it until Stoner told her of it. The prosecution previously had introduced a statement by Stoner in which he said he knew nothing of the occurrence until he was awakened in bed by Mrs. Rattenbury and told Rattenbury was hurt. He also introduced into evidence alleged confessions by each of the accused.

Dr. C. D. Griffiths, Medical Officer of Brixton prison, said Stoner told him he had taken "two wrapsoonfuls" of cocaine about 2.30 p.m. March 24. Rattenbury was attacked at about 3.30 p.m. Stoner agreed with counsel this would be a fatal dose but he said of course it would depend on the extent to which the cocaine was diluted.

Third Marriage

Mrs. Rattenbury said she had married Rattenbury eight years ago and it was her third marriage. Her first husband was killed in the war and her second marriage ended in divorce. She had a son, Christopher by her second husband, who is 11 and at day school now.

She and Rattenbury were on friendly terms, she asserted, and quarrels were "not very frequent" but "however sometimes you get a temper.' She related an incident in which Rattenbury had bought a revolver. "He said he was always talking of suicide, why don't you do it for a change?" she said she picked the revolver and hit her, giving her a black eye, she asserted.

Mrs. Rattenbury continued her husband was "very close" to money matters. "He used to say things, of which she was ashamed, to get money from him and tell lies to save rows."

Stoner as Chauffeur

Young Stoner was engaged as chauffeur and general help in September, 1934, at wages of a pound ($4.86) a week, she said.

"Did you suspect the stoner's mistress," asked T. J. O'Connor, K.C.

Lost Aviator Lives as Medicine Man In Darkest Jungle Says Informant

Canvas Passage For Reed

The American identified himself as Redfern, Roche asserted, and related the circumstances of the man's flight which befell his attempted non-stop hop to Rio de Janeiro.

Roche said the flier had his rescuers retrieve the canvas fuselage from the wreckage of his plane and covered it above his hut as a roof covering. The fuselage bore numbers which Roche said he believed to be 773.

The canvas was green and yellow, he said, the colors of Redfern's plane, when he embarked on his aerial adventure from Roosevelt.

Roche said when he left the native village, Redfern began him to take a message to his father, Dr. Carl Redfern of Washington, D.C., and his wife, Gertrude, whose whereabouts he said he did not know.

Mrs. Paul Redfern, informant of Roche's narrative in Cleveland, Ohio, said she hoped it had "more truth in it than others we have received in the last few years."

STEVENS ASSAILS GOVERNMENT ON ACT AMENDMENT

Claim Amendment Would Weakens, Not Strengthen Protection

TALK MEASURE OUT

Fair Wages And Hours Law Receives First Reading

Ottawa, May 29.— (CP)—Speedy progress in the passage of Legislation based on the report of the Price Spreads Commission is indicated in the House of Commons today. One bill, amending the Weights and Measures Act on the recommendation of the Commission, met with a favorable reception last night, and four more, amending the Industry Disputes Investigation Act, the Criminal Code, the Patent and Livestock Products of Livestock and Interpretation Act, are down for second reading today.

A new patent Act, amending and consolidating the law relating to inventions and the rights of Inventors, occupied the House yesterday and drew Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Minister of Trade and Commerce into a mild dispute with his former colleague, Hon. C. H. Cahan, Secretary of State.

While Liberal members met silent Mr. Stevens claimed the Government measure which, he claimed, weakened rather than strengthened the protection afforded the public by patent exploitation by holders of patents.

The former Minister of Trade and Commerce charged the Canadian Patent Act was used by Canadian Manufacturers, particularly electrical concerns to enhance their own prices and exploit the public by stopping importations from abroad.

Used For Own Purpose

He cited the case of companies, Canadian General Electric, Canadian Westinghouse, Canadian Lamp, and Service Lamp Company, used their patent rights to prevent them from importing bulbs from the United States and Holland, which they could obtain for 25 cents each, after paying all royalties and duties, compared to 85 cents for the Canadian article.

Mr. Stevens claimed he brought the matter to the attention of the Secretary of State last July, while he still was a member of the Bennett Government, and nothing had been done not even to his knowledge.

The Secretary of State insisted he had not received the complaint but could do nothing because there was no petition as provided by law. In any event, the revision of the Act, now before the House, would obviate any difficulties and redress any abuses which patentees might practice.

Under the new bill, Mr. Cahan said, a patentee could not charge his goods to the Canadian people at a price above a sufficient quantities, the patent could be revoked. He claimed the new Act would protect the public and conferred more protection to consumers than was afforded by his former Cabinet colleague.

The Bill amending the Weights and Measures Act received its second reading in short order and was also passed through the Committee stage except for one section which Liberal members objected to. It was the first of the measures from the Price Spreads Commission to be dealt with. It provides penalties imposed for giving short weights and stated offences and makes other changes in the Act designed to improve its effectiveness.

Receive Setback

The move to force a lowering of, interest rates on insurance policy loans sponsored by G. G. Coote (Liberal, Argenteuil), received a temporary setback last night, when its opponents talked long enough to prevent a vote before the members' hour. The measure fixes a maximum interest rate on insurance loans of five per cent.

Fair wages and hours law received its first reading in the House yesterday. Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, explained it on behalf of Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Labour, who was absent. It provides for an eight hour day and a forty hour week and fair wages on all work carried on under contract for the government and also for work carried on by government contributors in any way by the government.

The House at the same time received the assent of Hon. H. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals, that workers engaged in railway construction work on orders by the railways under the proposed government guarantee will receive fair wages and will work on an eight hour schedule.

City and District News

DAYLIGHT SAVING IN CITY SUNDAY

With the near approach of Daylight Saving, which will be inaugurated in this city at midnight on June 1st, a slip containing rules for the city clock to be advanced on Sunday at midnight on April 28, 1918, and signed by the late Alderman Samuel Treverton, then chairman of the market and city property, assumes considerable interest. The slip containing the order is in the possession of Mr. Robin.

The incident is particularly remembered owing to the fact that the city clock was advanced on Saturday night instead of Sunday. Considerable confusion resulted in the city following the move.

EXTRA WORK GANGS CALLED FOR C.N.R.

Although seasonal work at the present time has resulted in reducing some of the number of unemployed in the city, little reduction in the number of those on the city relief list is noted at the office of the Central Relief Bureau, was stated today. Chief among the recent jobs that have returned some men to work is the calling of an extra help for the work gangs on the Canadian National Railway. It is expected that a number of men in this city will be given work on the rebuilding of the tracks east of the city.

WILL INSPECT A. L. I. REGIMENT

Spring training of the Argyll Light Infantry of this city will be inspected to-day by a staff officer with inspection taking place at the armouries, Kingston at 2.30 p.m. Lieut.-Col. D.S.O., District Commanding Officer at Kingston will be inspecting officer. Lieut. R. A. Coen will be in charge of the regiment.

STRANGE GROWTH ON CEDAR TREES

Mr. Frank Mills, 16 Grove street, was exhibiting today branches from a red cedar tree upon which a fungal growth is visible. The seed sack is plainly visible in the centre of the growth. Mr. Mills states that he has observed these trees for fully fifty years and he never knew this to occur before. The blossoms are of a rubber texture. Mr. Mills obtained the branches from trees on the property at 281½ Grove Street, which is occupied by Mr. Arthur Kemp.

OWL CHASED FROM CITY HALL TOWER

Dozens of chattering sparrows which flocked in the upper tower of the city hall early until ten o'clock this morning attracted the attention of pedestrians below with their noise and turmoil. The cause of the confusion was an owl, chased by the birds, huddling on one of the rafters. The large bird finally flapped away, closely pursued by the sparrows and a few blackbirds which joined in the fray.

OVERNIGHT CHANGE SHOWS IN CROPS

An almost overnight change in the appearance of growing crops on farms and market gardens through the district was reported by growers of the section today following the recent rains. Owing to the strength-ening thunderstorms, a little damage was stated to have resulted on some farms where green stuff had not yet attained heavy growth.

COLLISION CAUSES BREAKING OF POLE

Two motor cars collided at the corner of East Madra and College Streets at 4.30 p.m. yesterday subsequently resulting in a hydro pole being broken off, when the vehicles struck it. Sergeant Arthur Booth investigated the accident and found that a motor car driven north by Mabel E. Gerow, 140 Front street, had entered the intersection and collided with another automobile, being driven westerly by Everett Lickfold, R.R. No. 6, Belleville, causing both cars to swerve and strike the pole, snapping it off at the base. Considerable damage to the Lickfold car was reported, while the damage will undoubtedly follow, it was intimated by the police today.

CHANNELS IN BAY MUST BE KEPT OPEN

Midnight mudcat fishermen angling from unlighted boats anchored in the Bay of Quinte and lower harbor during the past several nights have led to some complaints on the part of power boat owners, who have almost run down some of the boats and skiffs owing to the darkness. Complaints have also been received by Harbormaster Bob Hooper from other boat owners who are reported to be blocking the channels of the upper harbor by anchoring their boats in midstream. Warning that the channels must be kept open is given by the Harbormaster.

BLAZE OCCURS NEAR RILEY'S PAVILION

An automobile the property of Mr. Rockford, 3rd concession of Sidney, was badly damaged by fire near Riley's Pavilion about nine-eight last night. The fire ignited during the process of removing gasoline from the automobile to another vehicle that had run out of petrol. The incident car was badly damaged about the hood and engine by the flames, before they were extinguished. Other motor cars parked nearby were endangered during the blaze, but prompt action on the part of their owners soon moved the vehicles imperilled.

STOLEN APPAREL CACHED IN GARAGE

Brought to City And Will be Returned to Owners

Found cached in a private garage on St. David's St. in Toronto, a portion of the wearing apparel stolen from the premises of the Sprague Cleaners on April 19th last, was recovered by Toronto police yesterday and returned to Belleville by Detective Fred Read and Mr. E. C. Sprague last night. The goods were turned over to the police station and will later be separated and returned to the proper owner.

According to information received the goods consists of mens' suits and ladies' ready to wear, but judging from the description handed out by the police the stolen goods has been separated with only portions of suits being cached at the David St. garage. The matter was brought to the attention of the Toronto authorities, when the owner of the Toronto garage endeavored to sell the building and in the month's rent had expired, but to their surprise a new lock was found on the door.

Detectives Priestly and McEwan of the Toronto force investigated, forced the door and found the goods in bales which, apparently had been cached. According to Mr. Sprague in a statement today his goods were identified in the lost cached along with other wearing apparel stolen from the Canada Cleaners, Toronto whose place of business was robbed by hoists prior to the Belleville robbery, Toronto and local police authorities firmly believe that other private garages were rented for the express purpose of hiding away the stolen goods, but no trace of such garages is in evidence as yet. The recovered suits along with the goods of others, leading the authorities to believe the clothes of both cleaning establishments had been separated in a hurry and taken to different hiding places. The police firmly believe the robbers, who identity is known in Toronto, have successfully escaped from the country, leaving their loot hidden. We have every reason to believe the remainder of the stolen goods will be eventually recovered, but it may be some time," stated Mr. Sprague today.

12-YEAR OLD GIRL COMPOSES VERSE TO "ARMY BAND"

Glenys Green's Lines Are Published in "Young Soldier"

Miss Glenys Green of the Junior Fourth class at Queen Mary Public School has been highly honored by having one of her poems, entitled "My Father and His Band," published on the middle cover of the Young Soldier," which is the official gazette of the young people of the Salvation Army in the Dominion of Canada, Alaska, Newfoundland and Bermuda."

So states Mr. R. Fairman of the staff of the Queen Mary School in a letter to the editor of the Ontario Intelligencer, accompanying a copy of the "Young Soldier" of issue May 26th.

Included in the lost cached along with other wearing apparel stolen from the Canada Cleaners, Toronto whose place of business was robbed by hoists prior to the Belleville robbery, Toronto and local police authorities firmly believe that other private garages were rented for the express purpose of hiding away the stolen goods, but no trace of such garages is in evidence as yet. The recovered suits along with the goods of others, leading the authorities to believe the clothes of both cleaning establishments had been separated in a hurry and taken to different hiding places. The police firmly believe the robbers, who identity is known in Toronto, have successfully escaped from the country, leaving their loot hidden. "We have every reason to believe the remainder of the stolen goods will be eventually recovered, but it may be some time," stated Mr. Sprague today.

Miss Green's verse is as follows:

"My Father And His Band"

My father has the 'Young Folks' Band—
The best I ever heard.
They pay attention to him well;
They never miss a word.

Young Sager plays the big trombone,
And Golden beats the drum;
And with Kenneth Martin's cornet
They surely make things hum.

They've other cornets, too, you know,
While Harry plays the horn.
But if we did not have the bass
You'd hardly miss them all to scorn.

They all are very happy,
In the Junior Band, I know,
Because they are Salvationists
And know which way to go.

They are just sixteen boys or so,
And each a fine one, too;
Full of fun and full of sport,
In everything they do.

Let's not forget the Bandmaster,
So patient with this Band,
He's such a dark strong fellow,
With a powerful arm and hand.

He sends his arms out to and fro
To help them keep the time,
And he listens to the music,
And sometimes says, "That's fine!"

But at other times it all goes wrong.
And then they try once more,
Until they play it through all right,
And feel quite safe and sure.

As time goes on, and up they grow,
The Senior Band makes claim,
And with the men they march along,
Proclaiming Jesus' name.

And thus you see how proud I am,
As here tonight I stand,
Because it is my dearest Dad
That leads the Young Folks' Band.

Ministers Urged to Abandon Legislating on People's Habits On Tobacco, Theatres, Dance

Rev. Harry Pawson of Napanee Tells That Christianism is Need

CONFERENCES OPEN

By The Canadian Press

"We must bring to men—more emphatically because of modern enlightment—that there is pardon for all," this was the message left today with members of the United Church of Canada by Rev. Dr. George C. Pidgeon, the church's first moderator, on the occasion of the 10th anniversary of church union.

Dr. Pidgeon spoke last night to nearly 600 delegates to the Hamilton conference assembled at Guelph. At Stratford, the London conference met and the Bay of Quinte conference opened at Belleville.

Rev. W. A. Walden, Empress Avenue United Church, London, was elected to succeed Rev. John M. Saith, Norwich, as President of the London Conference. Rev. Dr. Hallt, in his presidential address, advocated pooling of clergy salaries to assure reasonable stipends to qualified ministers.

Also he favored a wider union of churches and a return to the old system of the itinerancy of the ministers in each charge to a definite period.

Rev. Harry Pawson of Napanee warned the Quinte Conference the church of today needed more emphasis evangelism if it is to combat a steady loss of membership to other newer Christian sects which have sprung up recently.

Swing Frees Wesley

"We have swung from the extreme attitude of John Wesley that the only job of the minister is to save souls for the next life to the extreme position that the minister's only job is to save souls in this world," Mr. Pawson declared. He urged that ministers abandon efforts to legislate their flocks on such matters as intoxication in regard to tobacco, motion pictures, dancing and commercialism in bringing them "to the feet of Jesus". Then they will know how to live themselves, he asserted.

President Rev. George C. Macquarrie of Oshawa, presided at the opening. It was the first return of the conference to Peterboro since the inaugural gathering here after church union ten years ago. The advance guard of the delegates, members of the Settlement and Religious Education Committee, arrived in the city for meetings last night. Although a preliminary draft of changes was made by the Settlement Committee, the draft will not be made public until later in the week.

The conference proceeded with a service commemorating the tenth anniversary of the United Church of Canada this evening. The speakers were Rev. A. J. Wilson of Napanee and Rev. W. J. Woodger of Cobourg. Following an address by Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman of New York City, General Secretary of the Council of Churches of Christ of America, a united radio program this morning, the business of the conference began.

Police News

Fourteen summons were issued to local residents today under a city by-law act pertaining to the payment of dog taxes. The summons were issued to persons believed to be harboring dogs and not having paid their 1935 dog tax. The matter will be subsequently dealt with in the local police court.

Some time over the week end robbers entered the office of one of the Patterson Construction Company on Turnbull street, and after ransacking the building stole two dollars worth of stamps from the office. The burglars gained entrance through a rear window, entered the office and in the search of the desk drawers stole the stamps. Later they removed some valuable tools from the main portion of the main building and cached them outside under some brush. Apparently the robbery was discovered and the tools found before the robbers were able to return for their hidden loot. The police have the case under observation.

PLANS DISCUSSED FOR KIWANIS WORK

There being no special speaker for the luncheon of the Kiwanis Club held at the Queen's Hotel on Tuesday, the meeting was turned over to the members by the president, Cliff Barrager, for a discussion of means to raise funds for the club. Many worthy projects were advanced and it was decided to hold another meeting of the directors with chairmen of the various committees present to further discuss these plans and bring down a report to the club. If the plans materialize, the biggest day in sport to be held in this city in years will be held.

Jack McIntosh was booster for the day and the prize-winners were Jack Smith and Dr. R. A. Flynn. Phil McKee was song leader and he had a hard time keeping the boys in tune and also singing the same song, Leo B. Riggs presided at the piano. Eddie Shapiro, chairman of the "On to London" campaign for the local meeting asked the members to attend this convention and he, Eddie Shapiro, and also give a report on the safety campaign, thanking Fred Smythe for the work done on the signs placed on the outskirts of the city, and believed that much value will come from the work done and that some driving in the city and vicinity will result.

VISITORS CROWD OAK LAKE BEACH

Stirling Tennis Courts Undergo Season's Preparations

Stirling—On Sunday afternoon hundreds of Ivanhoe people took refuge from the dry heat of the pavements in lowns and villages and avoided long drives on the highways. Popular summer resorts were crowded with visitors, lining the shores of lakes and rivers, where cool and refreshing breezes were really appreciated for the first time this year. Some of the younger folk even dared to bathe in the watery and soapy places, though in most lakes the water is still too cold for real comfort.

The popular summer resort at Oak Lake is truly a paradise in such weather and each year a larger number of pleasure seekers find their way there. Sunday it was crowded. This is another of the many spots of unusual beauty for which Hastings county is becoming famous. The trip north from the city of Belleville to this place is a thrill in itself. Slowly ascending over a good road to the peak of the Oak Hills, one has unfolded before them a view that is unsurpassed in this part of the country. Looking north is the village of Stirling, three miles down hill and looking west one gets a perfect aerial view of Trent Valley Waterways, also three miles away, and to look back to the south is to see the hilltops of the well cleared slopes of the city of Belleville twelve miles away, and beyond that, the blue waters of the Bay of Quinte. Here on the very crest of this hill the unfamiliar visitor is amazed to find a beautiful lake of crystal clear water, where hundreds of campers spend their summer months each year. The past year has this spot has been known only to a few hundred people who camped there, but gradually it is becoming famous throughout the province. Next year it will no doubt place slumbs on it quite by accident often, and return home to send their friends to observe the beauty of this spot.

Personals

Mr. Allan Mattlejohn of Albert spent the week end at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Mattlejohn.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hulin and Bobbie visited on Sunday in Trenton, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sherlock.

Messrs. Albert and Cecil Dodsworth of Oshawa spent the week end with friends and relatives in Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Carton and Miss MacIntyre of Albens were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Mattlejohn.

On Thursday some of the pupils of the local public school got their first glimpse of a real live porcupine. The little prickly fellow was pitched one in a tree in the act of robbing a bird's nest. All the children gathered under the tree to see it and in the hurry it climbed to the very highest limb for safety. It is reported that later in the day one of the junior boys removed the creature, but the excited children are still talking about the animal that paid them a visit.

Mrs. Geo. Hockey spent Saturday afternoon in Belleville where she visited her sister Mrs. Geo. Snider who is a patient in the hospital there.

A group of men began work on the local tennis courts today in an effort to get them in condition for the use of the members. The courts are undergoing the usual grading and rolling etc. The work is being done under the direction of Mr. Harry Lowbond and should be completed within the next few days. Stirling possesses a real club and many good players and with the courts in good condition there will soon be at it again.

Mr. and Mrs. Grindley and son Bobbie of Ottawa were week end guests at the home of Mr. Thomas Heard.

Mr. Robert Chard of Upper Canada College, Toronto, is spending a few weeks at the home of his father, having completed his term at college Mr. Chard will leave sometime in June for home in Edmonton.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Butler accompanied by Mrs. F. Jackman was among the Stirling residents who attended the celebration in Tweed on the 24th.

RED CROSS WEEK

TWEED

Tweed—The softball season was officially opened on Victoria Day at Tweed Memorial Park when the Tweed Local Work team clashed with the Alemites of Belleville. The encounter proved classic to the locals who were forced to bow to the visitors by the score of 6 to 3. The game was preceded by the customary opening ceremonies. Tweed-Stirling Band under Bandmaster Dietz was on hand to entliven the proceedings with several selections. Mr. W. E. Trumoch M. P., pitched the first ball to Mr. L. Gordon with Reeve W. H. Layers on the receiving end. The latter batted the second ball pitched and was retired at first by Mr. Trumoch. The game drew a big crowd.

The big factor in the Alemite's victory was their superior condition due to pre-season games in which they have engaged. These locals were playing their first game of the season. Whilst on the mound for the visitors was the star of the opposing batsmen with his peculiar twisting delivery which baffled the batsmen to pop to the infield or lift the ball into the hands of the waiting outfielders.

Overall, local mouthpiece, was not at his best and developed streaks of wildness in the first and third innings, issuing five base on balls, all of which eventually bore scored into runs. Fisher on defense for the visitors faced out a three-bagger in the fourth and followed with a home run in the same inning. McCutcheon batting was spectacular, soaring four flies after hard runs. He showed fine batting honours with Simpson and Tummon for the locals. Orr and Tummon poled out three-baggers for Henn with three hits, one a four-bagger was the leading batsmen for the visitors; he crossed the plate three times.

The locals contributed five errors which aided the visitors not a little in amassing their total of nine scores. Relsey in centre for the Alemites fielded flawlessly several sparkling catches. White retired five to Tummon Mumby as Secretary-Treasurer. Most of the canvassers were left the same as last year.

Miss Laura Daley and Miss Edna Stillman attended the teachers' meeting at the 9th line school on Friday evening.

Mrs. Walter Heath spent a few days of last week with her sister Mrs. Arthur Mumby at Consecon.

VISITORS CROWD OAK LAKE BEACH

Stirling Tennis Courts Undergo Season's Preparations

Stirling—On Sunday afternoon hundreds of Swansprings sought refuge from the dry heat of the pavements in towns and villages and avoided long drives on the highways. Popular summer resorts were crowded with visitors, lining the shores of lakes and rivers, where cool and refreshing breezes were really appreciated for the first time this year. Some of the younger folk even dared to bathe in the waters at some places, though in most lakes the water is still too cold for real comfort.

The popular summer resort at Oak Lake is truly a paradise in such weather and each year a larger number of pleasure seekers find their way there. Sunday it was crowded, but is another of the many spots of unusual beauty for which Hastings county is becoming famous. The trip north from the city of Belleville to this place is a thrill in itself. Slowly ascending over a good road to the peak of the Oak Hills, one has unfolded before them a view that is unsurpassed anywhere in the country. Looking north is the village of Stirling, three miles down hill and looking west one gets a perfect view of the Trent Valley Waterways, also three miles away, and to look back to the south is to see the higher buildings and church steeples of the city of Belleville twelve miles away, and beyond that, the blue waters of the Bay of Quinte. Here on the very crest of this hill the unfamiliar visitor is amazed to find a beautiful lake of crystal clear water, where hundreds of campers spend their summer months each year. For many years this spot has been known only to a few hundred people who camped there, but gradually it is becoming famous throughout the province. Tourists from Ottawa places stumble on it quite by accident often, and return home to send their friends to observe the beauty of this spot.

Personals

Mr. Allan Meikiejohn of Athens spent the week end at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Meikiejohn.

FAME IN ONE SONG

Half an hour's writing produced one of the most famous of songs which has ever been written in New York, nothing else but "The Sidewalks of New York," an old style ballad. Its author has just died, James W. Blake, at the age of 72 years.

"Jim" Blake loved Little Old New York, every hole or corner of which was known to the East Side native.

It was only as a sideline that he turned to song writing. When times grew difficult he tried again his hand at composition but some of his work repeated the deathless success of his great song.

"Jim" never acquired great wealth like his brother Michael, but he was the idol of his family and his music was ground out from every hurdy-gurdy in Gotham. Though the gas lights of New York gave way to electric light, the fame of "Sidewalks of New York" lingered in the minds of the people. Today it is still on the radio even if that device has supplanted quite a large share of the phonographs.

As a boy he was shy and diffident. With his brothers and other lads from the neighborhood he would go down to the river to dive into the rollers set up by the side-wheelers that made the New York-Bridgeport run. Or he would wander, barefoot on hot summer days, all the way across town to the West Side to lie on the river bank and watch the stately Mary Powell steam past, belching black smoke as she bucked the North River tide on her way to Albany.

The old Stuyvesant district in those days was a genteel sort of place. Great shade trees still bent over Second Avenue (Lover's Lane it was then) and every little house had its own front garden, bright with summer flowers. The richer folk drove by behind shiny-coated teams with three and four footmen up.

In reminiscent mood in his latter years, the salesman-composer would half close his mild blue eyes and tell of the smart Morgan carriage rolling up to the door of St. George's Church at Sixteenth Street and Rutherford Place. And he remembered all the rich kids of the neighborhood—the Schieffelins and the Fish children—playing in Stuyvesant Park with their superior toys, under the care of stiffish nurses and governesses.

When he turned to writing lyrics, though, many years later, it wasn't the rich kids' memories he put down. It was pretty Mamie O'Rourke, Nellie Shannon, funny Jakey Krause the baker, who had a shop on First Avenue, and Johnny Casey and Jimmy Reves. They all were immortalized in "Sidewalks."

Mamie and Nellie Shannon, Johnny Casey and Jimmy Gowe were Jim Blake's classmates at old Grammar School No. 40 in East Twenty-Third Street, between Second and Third Avenues. They were the kids, all hot and flushed in their stiff little blouses and pinafores and bright ribbons who "tripped the light fantastic on the sidewalks of New York."

As the years went by Jim lost sight of his childhood playmates; he never did know what became of pretty Mamie. Nellie Shannon actually married "the dude as light as a feather" rich young man who took her away from the East Side to a Fifth Avenue mansion.

He was a salesman in John Golden's hat store on Avenue, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets in 1894 when he wrote the famous "Sidewalks" lyric. Charlie Lawlor, a well-known comedian of that day, got the inspiration for the tune one night as he walked home from Charlie Murphy's Amawanda Democratic Club in Second Avenue.

He was still humming it two days later when he wandered into Golden's, to visit Blake. The hat salesman thought the tune was lovely and had him hum it over and over, until he had caught the swing of it.

"You get the music on paper, Charlie," he said, pent-up with the urge for composition, "and I'll write the words for it."

Lawlor walked out and came back twenty minutes later with the music all finished. Blake had half-finished the lyric before Lawlor's return, but was held up by a customer. As soon as the store was clear again, Blake spent another half-hour with his order pad, and the song was ready.

The whole thing Blake used to say, took less than an hour, yet the song lived on and on. Lottie Gibson sang "The Little Magnet" sang it in the old London Theatre on the Bowery and almost brought the house down. She sang it again at Tony Pastor's and the gallery gods stamped and thumped for encores. It swept the town like wildfire.

Mustachoed motormen sang it behind their jangling gongs on the horse-drawn cars; big-helmeted patrolmen rumply-tumped it with their nightsticks on lonely beats, and saleggirls hummed it behind ribbon counters at Macy's and Siegel's.

"It was worth a million dollars," Jim Blake used to say when he grew old and people were still singing it forty years later. "But Charlie and I got only $5,000 for it. We sold it outright."

It still sells on an average of 5,000 copies a year.

RETREAT

Four walls so very high and bare
Looked down with a disdainful stare,
As though surprised to see me there.

At first they could not guess how good
Was their aloof, reposeful mood,
How prized their gift of solitude.

They did not know their strength shuts out
Strange turbulence and many a doubt
That beat upon me like a shout.

Within these walls, so still and cold,
Rose-like, the silence can unfold
In all of peace my heart can hold!

Four walls, as empty now as when
I came to dwell within their ken,
Four walls that much distrusted men.

Yet now I think they count me dear;
Sometimes I feel they press quite near,
Around my down-bent head to peer
To view my work, all scattered here!

LIGHTS OUT ON MAIN STREET SATURDAY NIGHT—Of all times for the electric lights in the stores to refuse to function Saturday night when business is at its peak is the worst. This does not happen very often, particularly in Belleville where the service is persistent and consistent—but it just did happen Saturday evening last, and at the worst time possible, about nine o'clock. With the stores more or less crowded with buying customers to be plunged into sudden darkness was a decided shock. Clerks ringing up the cash register suddenly had their arms suspended in thin air, while customers waiting for change, were rooted in their tracks, as Edgar Wallace might say. Customers with goods in their hands which they were inspecting, felt foolish, and darkness engulfed the counter from which the goods were taken. Folks seeking the exit and folks coming in were halted—the sudden darkness causing indecision because it interrupted the normal course of things. Fortunately the dark area was small and the cause a blown-out fuse, or something trivial like that, and the period of darkness was not long—although it seemed interminable.

IT HAPPENED IN POLICE COURT in Belleville quite recently. The usual morning parade of drunks and auto speeders. One unfortunate from the green fields of Old Ireland faced the Cadi and was assessed the usual fine with the alternative of a sojourn up the hill on jail rations. His money had been dissolved in alcohol so he had to take the days. The usual questions were asked concerning birthplace, parents, etc., also religion. "Are you a Protestant or Catholic?" queried the court. "No, sir, I'm a Presbyterian," said the Irishman. Which goes to prove that all the Irish bulls are not dead yet.

A PARIS PUBLISHER wished to publish "Revolt in the Desert" in French and made the offer to Col. Lawrence, who was the publisher thought was a generous offer. Lawrence agreed to the French publication of his book, but only upon condition that the jacket of the book bear this inscription: "THE PROFITS OF THIS BOOK MUST BE DEVOTED TO A FUND FOR THE VICTIMS OF FRENCH CRUELTY IN SYRIA." Needless to say "Revolt in the Desert" was not published in the French language.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN built many theatres in New York City and elsewhere. He also provided competition in grand opera to the sedate old Metropolitan Opera House, and is said to have been given two million dollars by the Metropolitan management to go away somewhere and forget grand opera as far as New York City was concerned. Hammerstein died poor. Now his New York theatres are being torn down and commercial buildings erected on their sites—mainly because the celluloid strips have driven the legit. to Hollywood or the bread line.

A meeting to consider the organizing of a branch of the Lord's Day Alliance in this city was held last evening in Bridge Street Methodist Church. The Rev. E. B. Salter, the pastor of the church, occupied the chair. Addresses bearing upon the matter under consideration were delivered by the Rev. Mr. McCamus, the Rev. Mr. Geen, and the Rev. Mr. Wallace. It was decided to form a branch and the following officers were elected: President, Rev Mr. Wallace; secretary, Rev. Mr. McCamus; treasurer, Mr. W. W. Chown. These with Messrs. H. Gordon, J. W. Loncon, A. G. Northup and N. D. McArthur will constitute the executive committee.

Last evening some boys forced an entrance into Mr. C. M. Stork's cellar and stole four bricks of ice cream which were intended for guests who were being entertained.

Letters to the Editor

THE COMING OF THE LOYALISTS

To the Editor,

The coming of the Loyalists to Upper Canada will be commemorated at the old Hay Bay Church in the Township of Adolphustown, County of Lennox and Addington on Saturday afternoon June 15th. This church was built by the Loyalists in 1792, and is still standing and available for services, and is a monument to the religious activity as well as the patriotism of the early pioneer settlers.

There is no more picturesque scene in Ontario in the leafy month of June than Hay Bay, where the old church stands.

Those desiring to attend can go by Picton and cross the narrow stretch of water at the Lake on the Mountain by ferry, or go by Napanee.

This is the centre of the Quinte District, which has been called the cradleland of Canada, as Quinte District has given so many of the earlier builders of the country:—The Rt. Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, the Hon. Sir Oliver Mowatt the Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright; the Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell; the Rt. Hon. Sir Gilbert Parker, Bart; the Hon. Sir Mathew Bolton, former Premier of Manitoba; The Hon. Sir George Kirkpatrick; the Hon. Sir Alexander Campbell; Major General Sir Sam Hughes; Sir Alexander MacDonald; The Hon. Lewis Wallbridge, ex-Speaker of Canada and first Chief Justice of Manitoba; the Hon. Hector Howell, second Chief Justice of Manitoba; Quarter Master General James Lyons Biggar; W. H. Biggar, Q.C. ex-President Grand Trunk Railway Company, Hon. Robert Ross.

The following is a copy of the subscription list for the building of the old church at Adolphustown in 1792. Paul Huff £10; Peter Frederick £4; Elizabeth Roblin £12; William Casey £4; [illegible] (Sine) £2; Joseph Allison £3; William Green £1; William Rattan £10; Soloman Huff £2; Arra Ferguson £3; William Ketchem £2; John Green £1; Conrad VanDusen £15; Casper VanDusen £2; Daniel Dafoe £4; Peter Rikah £1; Gilbert German £2; Joseph Clapp £3; John Kinsley £2; Henry Howe £4; Andrew Embury £2.

BLOCKING SIDEWALKS

Belleville, May 27, 1935

The Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:

I notice in your paper of May 17, that the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, have an idea of a combined street plan and parking space. We not only need this for cars and trucks but we also need one for those persons who will stand and gossip not only on the side of the sidewalk, but also in the centre, making it almost impossible to push a baby carriage along on a busy day. I understand that there is a by-law in this city prohibiting the blocking of the sidewalks, and I think it is time the police enforced it.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for allowing me sufficient space in your paper.

Resident of Belleville.

MOTOR ACCIDENTS GIVE REASON FOR CONCERN

Recently the Chief Constable of Toronto, in making his annual report, revealed facts concerning motor accidents which provide food for serious thought not only to Toronto but to the Province of Ontario generally.

It was stated that 13 out of 22 charged with manslaughter and 35 out of 41 charged with criminal negligence last year were connected in motor accidents.

To quote the Chief Constable, "In most cases the charges were withdrawn, dismissed or no bill found. Three persons convicted of criminal negligence were placed on suspended sentence and five fined."

In some cases, perhaps, the evidence may have been inadequate, but it seems safe to assume that in the majority of cases, if not all of them, the police were sure of the facts before they took action. Which brings us to the painful conclusion that some judges and juries seem to think more of the driver than of the people, who were run down, killed or painfully injured.

The Honorable T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, sees very clearly the need for more drastic action in this respect. He has repeatedly, and in no uncertain terms, stated the seriousness of the problem created by unjustifiable leniency towards motorists and drivers of commercial vehicles whose negligence has caused fatalities.

The plain truth of course, is that criminal negligence in driving is being practiced on an alarming scale and most of it does not get into the law courts. And, when it does, with a manslaughter charge laid, the juries become softhearted to an amazing degree in face of the evidence presented.

A Change of Heart in Drivers Would Help

Personal, individual care and responsibility among motorists is, of course, the most effective means to scaling down the toll of accidents. As the Motor Vehicle Branch of the Department of Highways constantly pointing out, "Ontario must start thinking safely."

The appalling toll of accidents would soon be reduced if operators of motor vehicles would discipline themselves to drive at sensible speed; if they would make sure that their tires, brakes and lights were effective; if they shunned liquor when called upon to drive; if they stopped taking chances near street cars, at cross-sections, on curves and hills, in places where there are liable to be children, in fact, everywhere.

Undoubtedly many drivers are taking their responsibility seriously and we are honestly trying to drive as responsible citizens should with due regard for everyone—including themselves but these seem to be in the minority, judging by the ever-increasing accident list.

Reckless drivers, however, are finding the courts far less sympathetic than of yore. Jail sentences are becoming the rule rather than the exception; and there is a marked tendency towards the utmost severity in cases where a death has occurred. This, of course, is a sign that the public generally is waking up to the situation.

It is too bad that a supposedly enlightened province like our own should need the penitentiary held over its head to prevent criminal acts which, in other parts of the world, but still the province, generally, is fully aware of the responsibilities while at the wheel of motor vehicles, it seems to be no effective alternative.

When everyone in Ontario —and elsewhere—realizes that road travel is a species of crime, then we shall have a very efficient and a better-ed. situation. The sooner that happy day arrives, the better for all of us.

Farewell Party For Neighbours At Ameliasburg

On the evening of May 23rd about seventy friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Crosby, Ameliasburg, to honour them and Mrs. Carpenter, before their departure for their new home in Belleville.

Rev. Mr. Campbell had charge of a program which consisted of a duet 'Sunrise' by Mrs. Titus and Mrs. Clarence Cunningham. Instrumentals by Miss Connie Wood and Mrs. Shelly Williams and violin selections by Mr. Wilfred Cretney and Mr. Milton Wood.

After this the following address was read and Mr. and Mrs. Crosby were presented with an occasional chair and Mrs. Carpenter with an end table.

"Dear Grant and Reta and Mrs. Carpenter—

"Having learned that you are about to leave Ameliasburg to reside in Belleville, we have met here to-night to spend a social hour with you. We regret that you have decided it necessary to leave our village and community, where we so many years we have been bound together by the ties of mutual friendship. You have always been interested in church and social circles, and your absence will be felt in the future.

You, Mrs. Crosby, who for so many years taught the youth of this community, will have many happy memories in coming days and those whom you instructed, will wish you success and happiness in your new home.

And Grant, many, who for several years depended on you for their 'daily bread' will have to satisfy their hunger some other way and the song of the birds who vied with each other in singing to you in your morning vocal exercises, will have a deep note of sadness at your departure.

You, Mrs. Carpenter for a number of years, have been a faithful help to our church meetings and Sunday school and will be missed from our midst, but that which is our loss, is some one else's gain.

So in saying farewell to you, we wish you God speed with all its attendant blessings in your new home, and we would ask you to accept these small reminders of our esteem and regard.

All made suitable replies, thanking their friends for the beautiful gifts and for their kindness and good fellowship at all times.

A dainty lunch prepared by the ladies was then served and a pleasant evening was brought to a close by singing the 'National Anthem' and 'God Be With You Till we Meet Again'.

The accompanying chart shows how the price of gasoline to the retailer has decreased and the gasoline tax has increased since 1924. The data for this graph are based on figures published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

LOWER PRICES—HIGHER QUALITY

EVER since 1920 the price of gasoline has steadily declined. Few people realize this however because during the past ten years as the price dropped the tax increased. In 1923 there was no provincial gasoline tax and the average price of gasoline to retail dealers across Canada was 27½ cents per gallon. Today the average price of gasoline to retailers is 18½ cents but to this is added a tax of from six to eight cents per gallon which goes directly to the provincial governments.

Not only has the price of gasoline fallen steadily since 1920 but the quality has consistently improved. The gasoline consumer today gets more value than ever before.

Sometimes you hear talk of large profits earned by the gasoline refiner. In 1934 Imperial Oil earned $3,023,400.12. This may seem to be a large sum but to earn that Imperial Oil had to make and market gasoline and other products amounting in value to $82,841,311.15. That is to say Imperial Oil's earnings were relatively no greater than those of a merchant who, selling $8,280 worth of goods in the course of a year, made a net profit of $300.

Important Don'ts in Plant Food Technique

Feed The Lawn

Recent years have brought forth a development, that of complete balanced plant food, which has contributed in no small way to gardening success. This product being so different from the various miscellaneous materials formerly used, attention should be given to the proper methods for using, in order that the full benefit may be derived. Manufacturers of plant food ordinarily supply with each package complete instructions as to how it should be used. The first essential in the use of a complete plant food is to make an even distribution, otherwise, just as in the case of sowing seed, you will have an uneven and spotted growth. Next keep in mind that the excessive use of plant food should be avoided. It is wasteful and may result in at least temporary injury from over-feeding. Many have found their best results come from frequent feeding of small quantities. Here are a few points to keep in mind:

Never apply plant food when grass is wet.

Do not put the product on the leaves or stalks of flowers or vegetables, or in direct contact with roots or the roots of plants.

Water the water is available sprinkle the grass thoroughly after application is made.

Where water is not available sun the back of a rake, doormat, of something similar over the lawn to knock the plant food off the grass. This may also be done by sweeping with a broom.

Plant food may be applied by hand, with a kitchen cultivator or a plant food spreader. There are now on the market for use on the lawn plant food spreaders of various sizes at reasonable prices.

The Presto Music Club met Monday evening at the home of Miss Evelyn Reddick, Trent Road. A delightful program of classical and modern selections resulted in a programme of music of much lightness, which was quite enjoyable. Since the president, Mrs. H. Sparling, is away for two weeks, the club, through Mrs. McColl gave expression to its regret. Mrs. Stanley Allen, a valued member ever since coming to Belleville a few years ago, left the club parts with her reluctantly. In more tangible form was extressed by the gift of a very pretty silver bracelet, which Mrs. Sparling graciously acknowledged. Dainty refreshments brought this, the final meeting of the season to a close.

Weddings

ABBOT—FOX

Eldorado (Special)—At the home of the bride's parents, Eldorado, a quiet but pretty wedding took place on Saturday afternoon, May 25th, 1935, at two o'clock, when Miss Mary Alice Fox became the bride of John Arthur Abbot, also of Eldorado. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James Smith, of the Maitland Church.

As wedding music was played by Mr. Verne Fox, sister of the bride, who was given in marriage by her father, took her place in the living room. She wore a lovely picture gown of light blue silk sheer with corsage accessories and carried a bouquet of red roses, baby's breath and fern. The young couple were unattended. As the register was signed, Mrs. Ernest Chambers of Harding, friend of the bride, furnished a piano solo.

After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where a buffet luncheon was served.

The groom's gift to the bride was a lovely fox fur to the pianist, gold cuff links and tie set.

Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Niagara, Brantford and Paris, Ontario. The bride wore for travelling a navy blue crepe silk, with hat and shoes and beige accessories. Upon their return they will take up residence at Eldorado.

SLAVIE—FREEBURN

A quiet wedding took place at the United Church Parsonage of Tweed on Monday, May 20th, at 2 p.m., when Janet Edna Alberta Freeburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Freeburn, of Thomas, became the bride of Charles Currie Reavie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hall Reavie, also of Flinton. They were united in marriage by the Rev. R. B. Woodcock, pastor of the church.

The bride was charmingly gowned in a crepe dress of blue with other accessories to match. They were attended by Susie Simmons, of Actinolite, friend of the bride, who was also gowned in blue crepe, and Mr. Arthur Reavie, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony the bridal party assembled at the home of the bride's father, Mrs. Brend Morton, of Thomasburg, where a lovely wedding supper was served among near relatives.

Later in the evening the happy couple motored to the groom's home where a wedding reception was held. They received many valuable and useful gifts which showed the esteem in which they are held.

SAYS C.N.R. NOT A PARTY

Junior Red Cross Develops Canadians of Tomorrow

Canadians of the future should be a much more sturdy, virile race of men and women than were even the hardy pioneers who broke the virgin soil of this great country if the health promotion work being done by that vast army of 200,000 boys and girls enrolled under the banner of Red Cross Juniors in Canada takes root and bears the expected results. An amazing story of the volume of health service rendered in Canada by the older boys and girls has just come to light, and is passed on to us by Miss E. Browne, Director of the Canadian Junior Red Cross.

Until we began to compile the reports from the 'nine Canadian Provinces, we did not quite realize just how extensive and diversified were the activities being undertaken by high school Juniors in Canada," stated Miss Browne.

Among the activities being carried on in health education are: first aid and home nursing classes organized; doctors and nurses invited to speak on health topics at Junior Red Cross meetings; health debates arranged; health plays and pageants staged; posters illustrating food values, safety first and fire prevention made; talks on health given in meetings open to adults in order to get the co-operation of parents; individual health charts and class records kept; health exhibits made, and health inspections by Public health Committees conducted.

School Hygiene Taught

Healthier school environment is gained through the Juniors' work in the promotion of school hygiene. Through the activities of this department, washing facilities are supervised and a check-up is made to see that all hands are washed before the noon lunch; special water-containers and individual cups are purchased for schools which have not a supply of running water; cleanliness of the school and yard is promoted; ventilation is supervised; desks are adjusted to suit the needs of the pupils, and even the lighting conditions are improved.

Senior committees are appointed to see that young Juniors are properly wrapped up before leaving school in stormy weather; hot lunches are prepared by the older boys and girls in rural schools, and organized play for the younger pupils is supervised.

Service to Handicapped

Milk is supplied to undernourished children, fruit to sick; boys are urged to go skating to the week's Class of physically handicapped children whose parents are unable to provide necessary treatment are reported to Provincial Junior Red Cross centres, and the service rendered to help pay for the treatment. Other activities undertaken by the Juniors include the cultivation of vegetables in school gardens; assistance in community Clean-up days, playground equipment purchased and general improvements made in the playgrounds; also, first aid kits for the school are provided.

Junior Red Cross is well organized in Belleville, hundreds of local school children benefitting from its training. To aid in carrying on such work, the local Red Cross will make its annual appeal for funds next week.

MASTOID SURGERY TAKES NEW STEP

New Operative Technique Provides Better Bone Drainage

Toronto, May 29—American and Canadian ear specialists were unanimous in their decision that yesterday's conference on mastoid diseases which occupied more than five hours of the 103rd annual meeting of the Otological Society in the Royal York Hotel was not only highly successful but outstanding. The cussions ever yet held but it was one which marked a great advance in the treatment of infections arising without the ear.

Unusual interest had been attached by Toronto specialists to yesterday's conference because of the increasing number of fatal cases which have occurred in this city where death from mastoid disease has resulted after meningitis had set in but due to the intensive research work that has been going on during the past five years, many cases which then would have been given up as hopeless are now able intermittent showers.

to be completely cured.

Dr. Wills Eagleson, of Newark and Dr. S. J. Kopetsky of New York, were the first specialists in the world to call attention to the infections of the "petrosal pyramid," the spike of bone in the temple bone extending from the mastoid inwards to the base of the skull.

This bone is also affected in every case of mastoid and, when this condition travels inwards an abscess forms within the bone. Other abscesses are opened and drained; ruptures in the base of the brain in the majority of cases being followed by death results.

But Dr. Eagleson has devised a method of operation, that is considered one of the most brilliant yet in the whole of surgery, by which these deep seated abscesses may be opened and drained through the mastoid. The new operative technique provides better bone drainage. Dr. Kopetsky, contributed greatly to the discussion.

ZION MISSION BAND

The Wide Awake Mission Band held their meeting on Saturday afternoon at the schoolhouse. The meeting opened with hymn 179, "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun Is Coming." The President, Miss Jean Sills called the meeting to order. The prayer was led by Miss Jean Sills. Miss Margaret Tufts read the Scripture lesson, Acts 13: 3-17. The memory verse was given by Donald Wilson. Offertory sentence was said by the president. The roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture beginning with "C". The minutes of the last meeting were read and signed. Business was discussed. Douglas Sills and Roscoe Sills were given prizes for collecting flies. Total membership 19. Maurice Sine read a story called "Great Uncle" which which was very interesting. Jack Sills read a story about discipline called "Jack's Gun." Closing hymn with one's tol. Irene Ketcheson told a story about Moses. Mrs. Floyd Sherfield told a story from the Study Book, "England to India." The meeting closed with benediction.

BEULAH W. M. S.

Beulah W.M.S. held their monthly meeting with Mrs. Ernest Dunk on Wednesday afternoon, May 21st. The president opened the meeting with hymn 240 and a prayer. The Scripture lesson was taken from Matt. 5: 1-14. The Devotional leaflet, "Our Responsibility" was read by Mrs. Stanley Frost and Mrs. Ed. Dunk. Current Events read by Mrs. Clement read some current happenings. The next meeting was planned for. Mrs. Lovibond gave a reading on "Christian Citizenship." The sixth chapter of the Study Book "Christian Citizenship in the Church" was dealt with very fully by Mrs. Henderson.

Mrs. Lovibond and Mrs. J. Rollins led in prayer. Mrs. Clemint led in the hymn. A Question & Answer Presbyterian meeting held at Mrs. A. Duggan's. She answered the questions after which success depended on prayer by themselves and all repeated the Lord's Prayer. Hymn was answered by a verse of Scripture. Two new members joined the money. After singing Hymn 90 the meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. Wright.

SIDNEY B. Y. P. U.

The meeting was held in the church and was in charge of Dorothy Carter. The president, Ralph Smith, opened the meeting with hymn 6. The minutes were read by Bert Reid. Hymn 21 was sung and the business was carried on. Dorothy Carter then took charge. Minutes were read and the roll called by Myrtle Reid, secretary-treasurer. There were about 15 members present. The collection was taken and Beatrice Parks gave a reading, "Uphill."

The topic "She Tried" was read by Ralph Smith and hymn 18 was sung. Myrtle Reid gave another reading, "Old Friends" and hymn 17 was sung. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction. Rev. A. G. Sinclair, minister of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, Belleville, came in for a few minutes at the last of the meeting. He was asked to say a few words, but as he had nothing prepared, he declined.

V. O. N.

At the V.O.N. Well Baby Clinic tomorrow, Dr. Jack Marshall will be in attendance for the last time this season as he will not be present at the clinics during the summer months.

The date of the annual tag day of the Victorian Order of Nurses has been changed to June 15th at the committee's request. Council already promised the date previously declared upon, to another organization.

TANGLED LIVES

By ANN FORESTER

The chest appeared to have lost its charm. She hesitated—signalled to a rickshaw and then hesitated again. The next minute she had leaned forward, her chin firm, as she ordered the coolie to take her to the steamship docks.

On the ride down, she sat clenching her hands hard, not daring to think beyond the trivialities of the present. She dismissed the coolie. Went hesitantly by big warehouses —the docks piled with bales of raw silk, of tea, great mysterious matching covered objects . . .

Her heart was pounding. She shrank from the curious coolies loading the boats—still more from the gaze of the white men who directed them. This was mad! This was shameful! No place for a woman . . . Like a bad dream being played over and over in her labored by that feverish obsession.

The towering shape of the Neptune, white and gold in the afternoon sun with great black holes for cargo, it was being loaded. Screaming winches — great nets swinging through the air with their burden to be dumped in the yawning black holes . . .

Joyce slipped behind some matting-covered bales while she straightened her hat, powdered her face, the occasional white clad figure hurried along the dock.

A gang of coolies came dog trotting by in their bare feet. Great hairy brutes, evidently different from the gentle Occidentalised Chinese Joyce knew, accustomed only to seeing in San Francisco. Stripped to the waist half savages . . . She was dimly aware of them, even while she searched the Neptune with her gaze.

The next moment she had straightened and shrunk against the bales, her eyes wide and black with fright.

A coolie had cursed his neighbour in fluent Chinese, his face a yellow mask of evil. A knife flashed as he made a lunge. In an instant there was a shrieking, struggling mass, swaying dangerously close to the frightened girl.

Joyce was appalled to by their lunging figures. Her scream had died in horror, but her disturbance had been noticed from the deck of the Neptune.

Men running down the gangplank. But before they reached her the knife had found its mark, a machine which had just driven up, and the coolie was already pushing his way with his fists. Pulled her roughly out of the way. She stumbled, and fell right into the angry eyes of Jim Keith.

IN THE GRIP OF FATE

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

Beneath his tan, Jim Keith was white. He could scarcely see the man who came running up—four others were attending to the coolies.

"All right. All right, Benton, I'll take care of her—" "But I'm not hurt . . . Not hurt, you—you!" Joyce addressed him, then, frightened. I'll take care of her—"

Keith took her by the elbow steered her forward to the gangway. just quilted. Joyce's legs were shaking. She could barely walk . . . but she would not ask him to slacken speed. Hand working mechanically with the fingers of one hand, which she had plunged into the quilted pocket of her loose coat jacket, she managed to slip off the ring and jade ring . . .

She was hot with shame, angry with herself for coming. Oh, it had been a mad thing to do! Why had she not left it to Ramsay? Frantic to see him—but she had not intended that he see her! Or had she? "Why did she ev down to the Neptune?" Keith broke in upon her musings. Oh, stop! Never mind why! She didn't know! It was all a part of the madness which had seized her since she first met Jim Keith!

He handed her into the car. He was white to the lips. Far more than she, Jim realized the danger that had threatened her.

"That was a crazy thing to do!" his voice shook. "To go down there alone."

"I realize it now . . ." Joyce's voice was husky. "But I— I expected a friend on the Neptune. I read that it got in to-day—"

"Yesterday," he said briefly. "Anyhow, this isn't America. You ran the chance of being badly hurt.

Something in his sternness which suddenly made her voice lift. It would mean a great deal to him if she were hurt!

"The innocent bystander always gets hurt in these docks or Shanghai itself," she—whether it's America or China! If it was Chicago I might have collected a bullet instead of a knife wound, or I might have been hit by a plane—or met a hit and run driver—"

Of course if you are intent on suicide and want a choice as to the method. I suppose a knife thrust on the docks of Shanghai will answer your purpose as well as—"

Keith's voice was coldly furious. She was defying him with ridiculous words.

Joyce managed a little shaky laugh. "I'm sorry to be quarrelling before the first minute was over . . .

"I really am grateful for your saving my life . . . Believe it, or not! I wasn't dreaming of saving you."

"It sounded flat. A hollow and insincere thing to say. She burned again with shame and was unreasonably angry with him in consequence.

"That he could be like this—cold and unfeeling! The remembrance of that mad moonlight night lying between them, a deep pool of silence. Joyce was not only ashamed of having come down to the docks but of having run to him, "A shipboard flirtation," Jim had called it. Nothing more. You'll remember me to Mr. Cameron and Miss Davenport?"

"Of course . . . Well . . . we might meet again—some day—"

"We might. Let us hope so," gravely courteous.

He bowed. He left. And Joyce was walking through the crowded lobby of the hotel, head high, lips set in a proud impersonal half smile. And her heart was crying "Ah . . . he's gone . . . He does not care . . . He's gone . . . forever . . ."

Something carnival-like in the animated bustle of a steamer leaving an Oriental port Fussy importance in the darting launches, in the sampans rowed by brown coolies in sleeveless shirts and legless trousers and a distinctive dignity in the ponderous steamer itself. Flags flying. Bands playing. Tugboat whistles and the monotonous "Hoi hoi! hoi!" of the sampan men, enjoying the dock—come down to see the steamer off after leave". Greetings called back and forth. . . . No one to notice a slim stylish girl who made her way to the Neptune's Second Class, some matching-covered bales splashed with expensive luggage labels. A girl who looked up and down the deck, and sold steamer with tragic eyes.

The Neptune was casting off for the home trip. Trunks, portmanteaux, clerks of mercantile houses, consular officials—the "old China hands" of the docks, tearful or cheerful farewells.

And up there on the bridge—two figures in white linen. Two figures, the head of one turned away. The bulky one of the captain. The other, tall, lithe, Jim Keith.

A deafening blast from the steamer's whistle—a shrill echo of goodbyes . . . Joyce was blinded by the white side of the ship—and the dock. Only a blur of white, dark faces. Single figures melting to a featureless mass dotted with swift waving handkerchiefs, a growing fainter.

They had made few acquaintances, these three, and no real friends, on their wanderings. A few on the ship this May and December marriage, and they viewed Joyce's reserved grief with polite suspicion.

Only the two of you were genuine, Kitty," said the girl in a broken whisper, "and now there's just you—"

The last ceremony was simple. Roger Cameron was laid away beside the warm Atlantic. Perhaps he would have wished it that way, near to Steven and the sun, so youth and laughter, far away from the Riverside Pear Mill and the Cannery, from Main Street and the ugly brick house on The Crescent.

A few days later, Kitty hesitantly produced a letter, sealed, and addressed to Joyce in Roger Cameron's shaky writing.

"He gave it to me about a month ago—after that bad spell he had while Venice. He said it would be long—an' I suppose he wanted to get it down while he was able to write."

Kitty was watching the girl with troubled eyes as she spoke. She hoped old Roger had written something which would comfort Joyce in her grief. She liked Joyce, and genuinely fond of him she had been!

HAVE MRS. RATTENBURY NOT ABLE TO MAKE STATEMENT

London, May 29 (CP Cable)—A doctor's opinion that Mrs. Alma Rattenbury was not fit to stand condition to make any credible statement when she was questioned following the fatal wounding of her husband last March was given the court as the Bournemouth murder trial resumed today.

Mrs. Rattenbury, 38, and 18-year-old George Stoner, her chauffeur, are accused of the mulled murder of 67-year-old Francis Rattenbury, distinguished architect who lived in Canada for many years.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, May 28.—(CP)—The mining section of Toronto Exchange had a more pronounced, even lackadaisical appearance in today's early session following recent sell-off in some sections of the board.

Hollinger gold moved down to 3-8ths near low for the movement at 14.38 for a loss of 30 cents. Wright Hargreaves dropped 25 cents while Dome, Pioneer and McIntyre held unchanged and Lake Shore closed up up a gain of 50 cents, selling at 261.

In the silvers Eldorado opened down 12 cents at 1.75 from which level it recovered one cent. Beaver and Bear were off a cent or two each and Mylsbeck as a 5-cent unchanged. Oil stocks continued slow.

Selling was on a more moderate scale in the mining section today and prices, with scattered exceptions, were steady. Hollinger developed to a new low for the year at 14.38 and Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves were off 25 cents each. The weakness predominated in the base metal and silver groups.

Bar silver was quoted lower in New York and other standards, spring the silver mine little to recover from yesterday's set-back. Castle is a couple of cents lower at 2 1-2 in the base metals, Sherritt 16 cents to 76 and Noranda 5 points to 130. Secondary golds were mainly quiet with recession limited to 5 points.

Lower copper quotations on the London and New York markets paved a new rap to the copper shares. Noranda declined to $38, down $1.50.

WALL STREET

New York, May 29 (AP)—Financial markets were still dizzy today from the reverberations of confusion taken in the wake of NRA's sudden downfall but there were some signs of recovery in several quarters.

Small declines appeared in such Canadian issues as International Nickel, Dome and Canadian Pacific. Yet the curb, Lake Shore improved slightly, while Hiram Walker eased. Dominion Government bonds moved irregularly, Canadas, funds held unchanged at 99 15-16 cents.

Trading was displaying steadiness included American Telephone, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Consolidated Gas, North American and Allied Chemical.

Key industrials and specialities showing losses mostly of less than a point included Allied Chemical, General Motors, Chrysler, International Harvester, J. C. Penney, National Biscuit, Montgomery Ward and Goodrich, Bethlehem, International business machines lost around 4 points, Armstrong shares selling lower included Armstrong, Case, Deere, Gillette and Kennecott.

Railroad shares lost most of their early gains during late trading on the Stock Exchange today and other issues with the exception of utilities continued to display heaviness.

At the beginning of the final hour issues averaging point lower well scattered over the list and included such favorites as Du Pont, U.S. Steel, American Can, General Motors, U.S. Industrial Alcohol, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas Pacific and Standard Oil of California. Among utilities maintaining a steady tone were such shares as Consolidated Gas, North American, Columbia Gas, Public Service of New Jersey and Pacific Gas. The late tone was heavy. Sales approximated 1,200,000 shares.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—Pressure to sell was intensified in many issues on the Toronto Exchange trading today and prices were able to maintain their position in a majority of instances and even show some improvement in others.

International Petroleum at 37 was off ¾ and British American at 21 at 38¾ off ¼ while Imperial was unchanged.

Support ordinary lost a point. Nickel lost ¼ to 27⅜ and Consolidated Smelters a point to 17¾. Brazilian, Ford "A" and C.P.R. took losses up to a point.

Bell Telephone dropped ¾ and Consumers Gas a point.

Newer prices were recorded for Consolidated Bakeries, Canadian Canners, Howard Smith Paper and "A". Goodyear Common eased 5 points to 104.

Industrial share prices wobbled and at times slipped but on the whole nothing in fear of unsettling effects of the NRA collapse continued but the early rally was checked and the more solidity in the price structure than was apparent immediately the morning. Oils and metals again carried the trade load with Brazilian, Ford and Dominion Textile showing over in good volume.

At mid-day the oils were practically unchanged from the close. Imperial at 39 5-8, International Petroleum at 37 and British American at 15 7-8. Recessions of ¼ to 3-4 were showing in Brazilian, C.P.R. and Ford A while Consolidated Smelters was down 1 point and Nickel 1-8. Passing of the dividend by Dominion Stores caused a sell off to 7, a loss of a point in that issue but part of the loss was recovered.

At the close International Petroleum limited its loss to about a quarter point and Imperial and British American weakened 1-4 to 3-8 net. Walkers Common lost a point to 94 3-4 while Distillers Seagrams was down 1-4 and Industrial Alcohol a 1-8 to 1-4.

Nickel closed with losses of about 1-8, Smelters lost three. Dominion Stores dropped about a point on announcement of the passing of the summer dividend. Reductions were posted in Ford A and Brazilian.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 28 (CP).—Morning trade was practically at a standstill on the cattle division of the Toronto, Livestock Market today and indications were prices would be lower before any sales were made. There was a holdover of 1100 head. No hog prices were established in early sales but the calf, sheep and lamb divisions were steady.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were cattle 280, calves 340, hogs 430, sheep and lambs 150.

Calves opened steady at Tuesday's decline with choice calves selling for $8.00 to $8.50. A few topped at $7.50, and medium and common mostly at $4.00 to $5.00.

No hog prices were established but a steady market was expected later in the day.

Spring lambs sold steady at $10.00 cwt. for choice and $7.00 to $9.00 for common to medium. Sheep were steady at $1.00 to $3.50 cwt.

Quotations. Calves, good to choice $6.00 to $7.00; common to medium, $3.50 to $5.50; grassers $3.00 to $3.50.

Obituary

MISS EMMA CAREY (Belleville).

The body of the late Miss Emma Carey, who passed away in Buffalo, N.Y., on March 26th last, was conveyed to Belleville on Monday for interment in the family plot. The funeral took place from the Tickell and Brown Funeral Home, Church Street, Wednesday at 12.30 noon, with burial in cemetery where the committal service was conducted by the Rev. Father Baker.

The late Miss Carey, who had attained the age of 69 years, was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Carey. She was resident of Belleville for many years. After making her home in this city for a long period she left Belleville to reside in Buffalo. During her residence here she was highly esteemed by many friends.

The funeral party, was composed of her brothers, Mr. Thomas Carey, Toronto, and Mrs. Wilbur, Buffalo; her brothers, Mr. Arthur Carey, Buffalo, and Mr. Peter Carey, Toronto; her niece, Mrs. Wm. Mc. Coughlin, Toronto.

LATE MRS. DAVID E. COON

Frankford (Special).—Frankford and district lost one of its most highly respected citizens when Sarah Ann Coon died early Sunday morning.

May 26, 1935. Mrs. Coon, who was in her seventy-eighth year, was born in Sidney township, being the daughter of the late Hiram and Agnes Best. She was married to the late Rev. Peter Addison, with whom she lived for some time in Trenton. Some fifty-two years ago she married David E. Coon of the home homestead in Sidney township, where she had taught school. They lived on the same homestead now occupied by their son Wilbur, until about seven years ago when they retired to the village of Frankford. Of the six children born to them, one died in infancy, those surviving in the Great War, was killed overseas.

The deceased was a member of the Methodist Church, and since the death of the Rev. Peter Addison she served faithfully and zealously, as class leader, Sunday School secretary, and loveable, self-sacrificing disposition endeared her to all with whom she lived. She was known because of her keen intellect, splendid memory, and untiring energy, and was ever a leader in the Sunday School and Women's Missionary Society. By her influence for good upon lives, the old adage is verily fulfilled, "Though dead she yet speaketh."

Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.

The funeral was held from this home, Wednesday afternoon, May 28th, to the United Church, where a service was conducted by Rev. W. Lane. The Woman's Missionary Society and the Adult Bible class, which Mrs. Coon had taught until a few weeks ago, attended the funeral in a body. Interment was made in the Frankford Cemetery. The pall-bearers were six young men of the Bible class, namely, former Sunday School class secretary, Church; Lloyd Hubbs, John Burkitt, Keith Bush, Maurice Mallough, Ray Mallory, Wilmot Wellbourne.

Left to survive are her husband; a daughter, Laura, Mrs. Dr. Neil Chapman, of Marshal, Mich.; a son, Wilbur, on the homestead; adopted daughter, Grace, Mrs. Gerald Rush, of Hillside; also one step-brother, Mrs. Alice Best, Brownsville, Ont.; one brother, T. J. Best, Rochester, Ont.; three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Church to Mark Day of Ascension

The Feast of the Ascension will be celebrated tomorrow, Thursday morning, at Christ Church with a choral communion service, conducted by the Rev. C. G. O. Wright, rector of the parish.

EVANGELIST TELLS OF REFORMED LIFE

Mr. Ellis Tells Interesting Story at Alliance Tabernacle Revival

"From a sulky to the pulpit" is the condensed story of the career of T. J. Ellis, formerly of Chesterville, Ont., who spoke last night before a near-capacity audience at the Alliance Tabernacle.

Mr. Ritchie, the Irish Evangelist who accompanied Mr. Ellis here from Peterborough, and who conducted revival meetings at the Tabernacle last December extended a few words of greetings. Mr. Ritchie declared that we should have revivals. Most of us think of a revival as getting unsaved people saved. That is the result of a revival. We want to stir up God's people and to bring back their first love for the Lord Jesus Christ, and make it a part of their every day life. That is revival."

Mr. Ellis, who was introduced to the audience by Mr. Ritchie chose his subject from the text "The Good and the Evil" to speak upon, giving a testimony of his own career and life; he who had once lived in evil ways and who now lived in the truest blessing of God, and whose whole being is wrapped up with the Master. By telling of his own life, he produces the remarkable contrast between one who has lived in the deepest depths of sin and yet remained restless and unhappy and who has come to know the footsteps of the Saviour and who becomes filled with happiness and peace of mind.

He is undecided and was an infidel but I found God's Holy word as an authority to speak to you today declaring the speaker cannot tell you about the terrible sin of one who has been saved from sin, but I thank Him for showing me the light of day, of the Saviour crucified for me. I desire to tell you of up that wonderful Saviour before you this evening, of truth of his goodness and mercy.

Happy Yet Poor

"Years ago I was in comfortable circumstances but now I haven't a cent and even though I am happy but yet I am happy. I was born in Chesterville, where my parents became taken up with gaze horses and I was brought up with them. When I went all over the country to Horse Shows. My brothers' places on this great continent with a string of the finest race horses. I became very keen about them and went to the tracks and put on shows. I gambled on the latest events. He went on to describe how he had purchased the race track at Chesterville for $1,200 and how he had brought the Brockville and Prescott race tracks into being and a racing circle. In 1922 he brought before the public the greatest aggregation of race horses ever seen there. He became so keyed up by the fascinating lure of horses.

"On Sundays I raced horses", declared Mr. Ellis. "On Saturdays I made my hired trucks and went around city streets and advertised the racing that was to take place the next day, Sunday." The speaker told how he had made money working of the race tracks and how in the meantime he had been the association of luck and the dishonesty of many men associated with sometimes.

Horse racing is a great gamble. Only those who have been in for a few years before he can understand the fascination that goes on. I knew all the evils of racing, he exclaimed. Mr. Ellis. "All this time, when I was racing I was in the midst of the thickest of gambling, yet I was respected by the people. I was worthy posts placed upon me, but all the time I was hurt Christ and taking their money. I even came to feel that I was a victim and raced. I was paid $400 to come from Toronto to Belleville for one afternoon's race. I was the judge for an exhibition.

Laid Low With Sickness

A few years later I was laid low with sickness and for five years I didn't work. I was in bed most of the time. All my life savings disappeared. I became a drug fiend. I was racing finally. I had contracted pernicious anaemia, that dreadful incurable disease. Near the end of five years I was taken to the Storm Hospital, Toronto, in this city. They said I was incurable, that I had pernicious anaemia. I left to die. I couldn't live with my blood thin. A few months after I went to the Toronto General Hospital, and the Civic hospital at Ottawa and was examined. No trace of pernicious anaemia was found in my blood. counsel for Mrs. Rattenbury.

Mrs. Rattenbury replied in a low voice.

She admitted relations took place between them regularly from that time until her husband's death. Her husband knew, she knew, of it, she said, because he told her two years ago to let "her go." He told her he had told him she was taking him at his word.

Denied by Stoner Alleged

There was a quarrel between herself and Stoner alleged, she said, because she wanted to sever their connection on account of the difference in ages, she testified. Stoner threatened to take her life, she said, and she did not take him seriously.

Her husband drank "a lot", Mrs. Rattenbury said. She admitted she indulged occasionally.

On the evening of March 24, her husband was very depressed, and was not himself, she thought the Brockville and Prescott race tracks into being and a racing circle. GIANT NORMANDIE SAILS HIGH SEAS

French Liner Bids For Supremacy on Ocean Wave

Le Havre, May 29 (CP Havas)—The giant liner Normandie, France's bid for supremacy on the high seas, started on her maiden voyage for New York at 5.36 o'clock this afternoon to a booming crowd of cheering Frenchmen bade her good luck.

Since she launched over the harbor, mingling with the cheers of thousands of spectators and crews on board, as the 79,280 ton liner, largest vessel ever built, moved slowly out of the harbor and nosed toward the open sea.

Aboard the liner, which is 1,029 feet long, was France's first lady, the wife of President Albert Lebrun in spa, she was welcomed as Normandie will call at Southampton before setting out across the Atlantic, determined to wrest speed records for ocean travel from the liners of Germany and Italy.

The Normandie not only seeks to seize the blue ribbon for speed, but her engines will be built to record against Great Britain's super-liner Queen Mary, now being completed. The Normandie is expected to reach New York in a few hours more than five days.

The ultimate speed record, however, awaits the trials of the British craft, for while the Normandie is expected to attain 30 knots or better, her engines, developing 160,000 horsepower to propel her 70,000 tons, while the Queen Mary will have 200,000 horsepower for 80,000 tonnage perhaps slightly less.

The present record for the westward crossing is four days, 17 hours, six minutes, from Cherbourg breakwater to Ambrose Lightship, an average of 27.92 knots for the distance of 3,199 sea miles, recently set by the North German Lloyd liner Europa. For the eastward crossing, Rex Brenner, an Italian liner averaged 28.51 knots, covering the distance in four days, 14 hours, 15 minutes.

Italy Holds Speed Record

The Italian liner Rex has established the record for speed, however, in covering the 2,946 miles between Gibraltar and Ambrose lightship.

The Normandie cost approximately $53,000,000, which must be amortized in 20 years, estimated by experts as the length of life which a large ship.

The fuel oil and motor oil will cost about $167,000, for each round trip across the ocean, at the cost of 1,400 men will amount to more than $100,000 a month. It is estimated that each round trip, including the amortization of the original investment, will cost $538,000 to the basis of 22 round trips annually.

To meet this, the ship will have to carry at least 1,500 passengers each trip and $25,000 cargo, plus $50 or 60,000 a year. All the French Line ships carried only 40,000 passengers in 1929, and consequently a large deficit is expected to be paid government subsidies.

Unemployment Insurance For Employees

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—A program of unemployment insurance for 1,600 employees of the Tip Top Tailors, Ltd., was announced today by David Dunkelman, President. The plan, effective July 1, is non-contributory, the company bearing the whole cost on the basis of a contribution of one per cent of the total payroll.

If the Dominion Government enacts unemployment insurance we will be glad to co-operate with it and it will come into effect immediately," Mr. Dunkelman said. "But in the mean-

WASHINGTON INTERPRETATION

Washington, May 29 (AP)—An attempt to speed a constitutional amendment limiting the functions of the federal government with power to regulate industry, agriculture and labor, regardless of state lines, was seriously considered today by high new deal officials as a result of the supreme court decision annulling NRA.

Such an amendment was studied as a long-range proposition with indications pointing to an effort to set up a workable substitute to replace the machinery of NRA hereafter.

TORNADIC BLAST FELT AT SARNIA

Sarnia, Ont., May 28.—(CP)—Lightning struck one of her house when a tornado struck Sarnia and district yesterday but the $25,000 damage, also the only damage reported, was dealt with a badly bruised arm and cuts received by Mrs. Alex. Cole, 1040 Cheltenham, Perrysburg, Ohio, daughter of Robert Fortune, Sarnia, who also in the house.

The storm struck high over Sarnia and district, accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain, which flooded cellars, but it was of short duration, lasting only a few minutes.

Two houses and several barns fell before the torrential rain. Roofs on several houses were blown off, windows broken and trees uprooted by the wind.

Miss Cole was in the home of her father, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Fortune, when the storm struck. She was sitting near a window talking to her mother with the door and curtains open when the lightning struck. Her father's automobile was blown out of a garage 100 feet away.

REVOLT IN THE DESERT

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

In the evening the telephone rang; and the Sherif called Storrs to the instrument. He asked if we would not like to listen in his hand. Storrs, in astonishment, asked what hand? and complained his politeness on having advanced so far towards urbanity. The Sherif explained that the headquarters of the Hejaz Command under the Turks had had a brass band, which played each night to the Governor-General; and when the Governor-General was captured by Abdulla at Tafil his band was captured with him. The other prisoners were sent to Mcyrt for internment; but the band was escorted. It was held in Mecca to give music to the visitors. Sherif Hussein laid his receiver on the table of his reception hall, and we, called solemnly one by one to the telephone, heard the band in the Palace at Mecca forty-miles away. Sherif expressed his general gratification; and the Sherif increasing his bounty replied that the band should be sent down by forced march to Jidda, to play in our courtyard also. "Aiwa," said he, "you may wish to do me the pleasure of ringing me up from your end, that I may share your satisfaction."

Next day Storrs visited Abdulla in his tent out by Bir's Thnair; and together they inspected the hospital, the barracks, the town offices, and all the periods of the hospitality of the Mayor and the Governor in the intervals of duty they talked about money, and the Sherif's title, and the relations with the other Princes of Arabia, and the general course of the war: all the commonplaces that should pass between envoys of two Governments. It was tedious, and for the most part I held myself excused, as I had made up my mind that Abdulla was not the necessary leader.

The company of Sherif Shakir, Abdulla's cousin and later friend, proved more exciting. Shakir, a grandee of Taif had been playmate from boyhood of the Sherif's sons: and he played yet, publicly and privately, the enormous fiction which his wealth and courtesies and self-confidence united to make possible. Never before had I met so sudden a man, coming instantly from a frozen dignity to a whirlwind of jostling fits, strident, tuneless athletic, acrobatic displays, eaten away by small-pox so that hardly a half-inch of surface mirrored like the window of a speeding car at once what passed without and within it. Abdulla had commanded at the siege of Taif: but it was Shakir who led the troops with a headlong dash that defeated its own purpose by excess of daring. The Arabs dared not support him into the very breach of the wall: and Shakir had to return, alone and unscathed, cursing his fellows, laughing at them, and leering wildly at the discomfited enemy: whose revenge was to pour petrol over his great body, and burn it, with its famous library of Arabic manuscripts.

That evening Abdulla came to dine with Colonel Wilson. We received him in the courtyard on the house steps. Behind him were his brilliant household servants and slaves, and behind them a pale crew of bearded, emaciated men with wan-bogance faces, wearing tatters of military uniform, and carrying tarnished brass instruments of music. Abdulla waved his hand towards them and crowed with delight, "My Band". We sat them on benches in the forecourt, and Wilson sent them cigarettes, while we went up to the dining-room, where the shuttered balcony opened right out, humbly, for a sea breeze. As we sat down, the band under its guns and shells of Abdulla's retainers, began each instrument apart, to play heart-broken Turkish airs.

We got tired of Turkish music, and asked for German. An aide-de-camp stepped out on the balcony and called down to the bandmen in Turkish to play us something foreign. They struck shakily into "Deutschland uber Alles" just as the Sherif came to his telephone in Mecca to listen to the music of our feast. He asked for German music; and they played "Ein'feste Burg". Then in the morning they died away into flabby discords of drums. The parchmened had stretched in the damp air of Jidda. We cried for fire: and Wilson's servants and Abdulla's retainers brought their piles of straw and packing cases. They formed them in circles, turned them round and round before the blaze, and then broke into what they said was the Hymn of State, though no one could recognise a European progression in it all. Some ears turned to Abdulla and said, "It is a death march." Abdulla's eyes widened; but Storrs who spoke in quickly to the rescue turned the moment to laughter; and we went on towards with the leavings of the feast to the sorrowful musicians, who could take no pleasure in our praises, but begged to be sent home.

CHAPTER IV
RIDING UP TO FEISAL

Next morning I left Jidda by ship for Rabegh, the headquarters of Sherif Ali, Abdulla's elder brother. When Ali received his father's "order to send me at once up to Feisal, he was staggered, but could not help himself. So he prepared for me his own splendid riding-camel, saddled with his own saddle, and hung with luxurious housings and cushions of Nejd leather-work plaited and inlaid in various colors, with plaited fringes and nets embroidered with metal tissues. As a majority man he chose out the fat, a Hawazim Harb tribesman, with his son, to guide to Feisal's camp.

All would not let me start till after sunset, last any of his followers see me leave the camp. He kept my journey a secret even from my slaves, and gave me an Arab cloak and headcloth to wrap round myself and my uniform, that I might present a proper silhouette in the dark upon my camel. I had no food with me; so he instructed Tafas to get something to eat at Bir el Shefaia, the first settlement, some sixty miles out, and charged him most stringently to keep me from overlooking and curiosity on the way, and to avoid all camps and encounters.

We marched through the palm-groves which lay like a girdle about the scattered houses of Rabegh village and then out under the stars along the Tihama, the sandy and featureless strip of desert bordering the western coast of Arabia between sea-beach and littoral hills, for hundreds of monotonous miles. In this time the low plain was insufferably hot, and its waterless characters made it a forbidding road; yet it was inevitable, since the more broken hills were too rough to afford passage north and south for loaded animals.

The cool of the night was pleasant after the day of checks and discomfort, which had dragged at Rabegh. Tafas led on without speaking, and the camels went gently over the soft flat sand. My thoughts as we went were how this was the Pilgrim Road, down which, for uncounted generations, the people of the north had come to visit the Holy City, bearing with them gifts of faith for the shrine; and it seemed that the Arab Revolt might be in a sense a return, pilgrimage, to take back in the north, to Syria, an ideal for an ideal, a belief in liberty for their past belief in a revelation.

We endured for some hours, without variety except at times when the camels plunged and strained a little and the saddling creaked; indications that the soft plain had merged into beds of drift-sand, dotted with tiny scrub, and therefore uneven going, since the plants collected little mounds about their roots, and the eddies of the sea-winds scooped hollows in the intervening spaces. Camels appeared not sure-footed in the dark, and the slarlit sand carried little shadows, so that hummocks and holes were difficult to see. Before midnight we halted, and I rolled myself tighter in my cloak, and chose a hollow of my own size and shape, and slept well in it till nearly dawn.

'MET' OPERA STARS MAY VISIT CANADA

Offer Made For Season at Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto

New York, May 29 (CP)—Metropolitan Opera for Canada is a question for future consideration, Edward Johnson, manager has been made for Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto seasons, Edward Johnson, newly-appointed manager, told The Canadian Press today the suggestion has been made and that possibly Italian should undertake a week's operatic trouping—two nights in Toronto, a night in Ottawa and four in Montreal.

Mr. Johnson who suddenly found himself sitting in the chair occupied for years by Gatti-Casazza and thereafter for a few weeks by Herbert Witherspoon, in the gray walled office on 39th Street, indicated he believed his immediate task was to carry on the program laid down by Witherspoon; that is to say, the emphasis and addition to the Metropolitan's activities must be given less to nature. A suggestion the Opera might go to the Canadian West had not been considered. However, the development of his plan for establishing nucleus organizations in centres of such size as Winnipeg, there was a possibility article for leading roles might be exported for local seasons.

"What people forget is that the Metropolitan as an institution must say," said the new manager, "It surviving the last days of the great artists, like Caruso. It's a complicated institution."

MURDER COUNT IS PREFERRED

Widow and Farm Hand Accused of Strangling Husband

Cornwall, Ont., May 29.—(CP)—Mrs. Louis Volvey, 38, mother of three children, and Clarence Cameron, 28, transient today stood charged with murdering the woman's 58-year-old husband, a farmer of Bonville, 19 miles north of here.

The pair were arrested yesterday after a coroner's jury returned a verdict finding Louis Volvey came to his death by being strangled or throttled. We believe both Mrs. Volvey and Cameron had knowledge of this fact and were accessories to said act of strangulation".

Dr. E. R. Franklin, medico-legal expert of Ontario, said the Bonville, Ontario, farmer died of strangulation due to pressure applied to his throat. He was first believed Volvey died from a neck fracture resulting from a fall downstairs in his home April 22.

Cameron, charged with perjury at a previous session of the inquest which had been thrice postponed, will appear court Friday on that charge, while Mr. Volvey after appearing yesterday was remanded until June 4. It is expected Cameron will be remanded Friday until that date also, when the pair will likely be jointly arraigned for preliminary hearing.

The death of Louis Volvey, 58-year-old Bonville farmer, who was found dead by his 32-year-old wife at the foot of the stairs in their farmhouse, on the night of April 22 was ascribed by coroner's jury at the third inquest held in Cornwall to strangulation. The jury also believed from the evidence that "both Mrs. Volvey and Clarence Cameron had knowledge of this act or were accessory to the said act of strangulation." Cameron, a friend of the family, who testified at two previous inquests, was arrested recently on a perjury charge. Mrs. Volvey was arrested after the inquest. Dr. Allan Dafoe Honored on His 52nd Birthday

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe was all but smothered under an avalanche of congratulations today as he celebrated his own 52nd birthday and looked back on the happy observances of the Dionne quintuplets' first birthday anniversary yesterday.

Some congratulatory wires were addressed to the quintuplets and their parents but most of the hundreds, that continued to pour in today were directed to Dr. Dafoe, the physician who delivered the "triplets and two more" to Mrs. Oliva Dionne before sunrise, May 28, 1934.

Broadway stage stars and members of the Roosevelt Cabinet joined leading Canadian figures in sending congratulations. The names included Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York, Secretaries Ickes and Perkins of the United States Cabinet, speakers Byrne of the U.S. House of Representatives and scores more.

The modest little physician, who was born in Madoc, Ont., May 29, 1883, piled them all on his desk for his attention when the excitement of the birthday observances had died down. Last night newspapermen marked the double event by entertaining Dr. Dafoe at dinner in North Bay and presenting him with an engraved silver pitcher.

It was held soon after the broadcast that sent the coos and cries of the year-old girls to countless listeners, the principal event on the birthday program. It was a huge success except that the parents did not attend.

Parents Not Present

Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare, and Judge J. A. Valin, Chairman of the Board of Guardians, joined Dr. Dafoe in the ceremony, but there was no voice from the Dionne home across the road from the hospital. They continued their objections to guardianship control of their children.

All the speakers eulogized the sturdy, virile French-Canadian "stock" as largely responsible for the continued life of the quintuplets. No representative of that stock would consent to have a part in the birthday party.

"We don't consider it an honor to be invited by pure-strangers to steal our own children," said Oliva Dionne in one of the few statements he has made in the year since the quintuplets were born.

Said Mr. Croll: "We have at heart only the best interests of the babies and their parents and every step that we take is for their protection".

Oliva Dionne, however, charged he could not even attend yesterday's mass at Corbeil church because he felt it was a plan to make him an object of photographers who, he charged, seek to make money "for their own pocket".

He charged further efforts were made to limit the rights of himself and his wife to see the babies and he intimated improper profits were being made from exploitation of the infants.

WHIRLWIND LIFTS CANOEISTS 6 FEET

Lindsay, May 29.—A picnic party of Lindsay canoers nearly ended in tragedy on the Scugog river, Sunday, when a whirlwind twister struck one of the canoes and lifted the paddlers six feet in the air before dropping them into the water. The incident occurred in full view of a number of people standing along the bank.

Geraldine Scanlon, a strong swimmer, reached shore safely, but her companion, Frederick Green, unable to swim, sank from view, but was rescued when Cecil Mcnicoscite a spectator, swam to his aid.

A curious feature of the accident was the fact that the canoe remained upright, and a jacket belonging to Miss Scanlon, lying in the bottom of the canoe, was not even wet.

Ross Regains 147-lb. Title Defeating Jimmy McLarnin In Fifteen Torrid Rounds

Dissatisfaction When Jack Dempsey Announces Winner

NO KNOCKDOWNS

Receipts Not as Great as Either of Other Two Fights

By SAM ROBERTSON

New York, May 29 (CP)—Barney Ross, youthful dealer in speed and guile, took over the ruinship of the welterweights today, as the boxing world mourned the probable loss of Jimmy McLarnin's glory.

In the eyes of Referee Jack Dempsey, whose appointment found favor in McLarnin's corner, and the two judges, Barney outpaced and outslugged the champion last night in fifteen rounds that might have been staged on a cow pasture instead of in the ring of the Polo Grounds.

From Old Pop Foster, manager and counsellor to McLarnin for more than a decade, the verdict brought the shock of a boy "robbed" and a measure of confirmation that the great Vancouver Irishman is considering retirement.

A good part of the 31,000 who witnessed the third thrilling set-to of close duel between the two ring terriers, was deriving from the decision that McLarnin, back in his dressing room, was announcing he would take over retirement plans with Pop. Jimmy said he believed he had won nine rounds, with several of the others even.

As an after-thought he added that he "would like another crack at the welter title".

Blow Not Called.

Dempsey and Judges Goldberg and George Kerwin, had their separate vote, scored a total of 22 rounds for Ross, 13 for the striving McLarnin and called it even. Dempsey did not call a left hook that landed away before McLarnin's left in the streaking twelfth round.

It was nearly incessant heavy clouting from the sixth round through to the final fifteenth when both punch artists were dog weary. But there were no knockdowns despite the heavy ammunition they fired at each other.

Twice Jimmy's knees buckled slightly from the terrific barrages the dark-haired Chicago Jew loosed to the head and body. As early as the second round and again in the fourteenth Barney shot forward machine gunning from either side. The Canuck faltered but momentarily.

On the chuisve target dancing before him, McLarnin found few openings for his feared right hand. He scored with seeming ease, however, with a darting left and in the final fury of the fifteenth round looked to have his toe on the point of a knockout from a furious body attack. But the necessary steam would not come from muscles tired by the long, gruelling grind that had gone before.

The McLarnin left drummed home incessantly. It was probably that weapon that made the jubilant Ross say after the final bell: "Jimmy gave me more trouble than in either of the other two bouts". But always, the mercury-limbed Barney was on the move. It did not appear the full fire of Jimmy's powers landed flush at any time

Boston At Own Game.

Stunning as it was to McLarnin rooters who had seen him devastate so many of the ring's greats, it was a fact that Ross appeared the best Jimmy at the Canadian Celt's own game. In two clashes last year when the decisions were divided, Ross tried to outbox and outspeed the dynamic fists of McLarnin. Last night, on most of the many occasions when both boys were travelling at the top of their power and speed, Ross blasted away with more effect than the old time killer of the little men. McLarnin was usually the first to come up.

In the fourth Jimmy's looping left caught the Hiles Jew on the nose and from then on it bled. In landing a whistling left uppercut in the seventh, Ross said he sprained that hand. He carried on with a stamina that was remarkable.

Ross, who at 141 was the heaviest in his career, was flattered shoulder pace as announcer Joe Humphreys raised his hand in victory. His cheek blotted as well as his broad nose. McLarnin, who scaled 144¾, had only small cuts over his eyebrows but he looked the more tired of the two.

Foster Protests.

Referee Dempsey, whose selection drew Foster's ire in such an extent that he protested before the fight to the chairman of the State Athletic Commission, Brig.-Gen. John Phelan, gave McLarnin the best score sheet of the three officials. Jack's score showed five rounds for Ross, three for McLarnin, and seven even. On the judges' cards, Goldberg tallied eight for Ross, six for McLarnin and one even while Kerwin scored nine for Ross, four for McLarnin and two even.

"Foster charged Dempsey had been with the other side", referring to Jack's pre-fight predictions favoring Ross and visits at the Chicago boy's dressing room.

The crowd fell considerably below expectations, despite balmy weather. Gross gate receipts were $144,080 and the net was $118,294.31 as compared with $132,000 for their first fight and $197,000 for the second match last year.

A most regretable error occurred in the account of the results of the recent schoolboy athletic meet published on Monday. Frank O'Neill, who won the 220 and 440 yard dashes in the intermediate group, was listed as contesting from the B.C.I. Frank competed for the St. Michael's team but due to the fact the press notice received read B.C.I., we published it as such. The error was most regrettable, but published in good faith as the press dispatch from Kingston read. We also forgot to mention that Wally Hilton won the senior 100 yard and the senior javelin, but like O'Neill his efforts went for naught as neither of these boys obtained the necessary standard to qualify for the provincial finals, as did Jack Wilson of St. Mikes and George Evans of the O.S.D., the latter two being the only local athletes to make the standard set by the O.A.C.

The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club officially opened in a downpour of rain on Monday night with the rivals' game. All teams playing at least one match. The Belleville men bowlers have approximately 125 members and have divided the membership into 22 teams, five men to a team. A schedule has been drafted with five games per night for each team, and will be played on Monday and Friday nights of each week. In order that all may participate in the club each team must carry two first year bowlers while two eight end games are participated in each night. The system adopted by the local lawn bowlers is somewhat new locally, but seems to have met with the approval of both the new and veteran players. It gives all a chance to play the game at least twice a week in competition matches. Doubtlessly the local lawn bowlers are in for the best season they have enjoyed locally in many years thanks to the efforts of President Charlie Peck and his able executive.

An old time trout fisherman and an angler of note related a new wrinkle to us in the matter of luring the elusive trout. Of course "old timers" suggestion can only be carried out by the more proficient casters. It seems to cause the fly lightly on a patch of foam on a trout stream and the foam carry the fly along as it does a luckless insect that happens to fall into it. The cage trout known as the three foam patches collect insects and they are naturally waiting to snap up whatever sinks through the foam. Maybe "old timer" knows his trout fishing but then who's going to wait all day for a patch of foam to float by? But on the other hand his plan sounds most reasonable.

Jake Yanover, who was at the helm of the Picton intermediate ball club in 1933 when they advanced to the intermediate O.B.A.A. finals, has taken over the management of the City Hotel and incidentally "Jake" is becoming about as proficient in the art of "slinging suds" as he was in directing the Picton ballsters, we hear.

"You get that beer ruff guy in de ring wid me an' I show heem how ruff I can peut, too," stated Dan Petroff in the local Kingston wrestling promoters recently when they were angling for an opponent for Al Temple, as a rule Petroff is a modest unassuming wrestler who does not go in for rough tactics, but once aroused he can hand it out with the rest of them. Petroff was quite pet out in regards to the matter in which Dunlop released Johnnie Gyroffy last week and asked permission to tame the Cleveland Indians. Incidentally Petroff and Dunlop have met once previously, the match being a draw in Lindsay. Neither Petroff nor Dunlop need any introduction to a local wrestling audience, but it is safe in saying Dunlop will not be away with many mauvaise. The duo holds against Petroff as he has for the past three years vacationed in Kingston. All say rate the winner of this bout will doubtless be Ernie Dusek, the latest comer to local wrestling circles and the man to whom will be sent the Russian. The semi-final go between Jack Pearl and Bulldog Brown is a toss up affair.

Apparently the players in the C. O. B. I. are out for blood these days, even as early in the season they are. Whatley has been injured and is out of the game. Whatley, the Picton receiver, was badly lacerated during a crash at the plate with a base runner. Then in the last inning time, Umpire Reg. Fair gave Fred Ash, the Picton pitcher, the gate following a loud and continued squawk from the player. Manager Joe Daly hopped aboard Umpire Woodley in Belleville on the holiday, but he lost out on good the trip and merely replied, "do you want to join the Wednesday club in the second). Job?" There was no reply as Skipper Daly wended his way nonchalantly back to the Picton bench. His squawk was when Sonny Grey beat out an infield hit and incidentally Grey will cause many a pitcher to retaliate before the season closes. The Kid is fast as has been shown in his two performances thus far.

Daily work-outs by the athletes at the B.C.I.V.S. are the order of the day now preparing for their annual track and field meet on Thursday. Incidentally there seems to be a trend towards better attendance at field events this year than in seasons past. The chaps are also throwing, shot put and jumps are receiving more attention than here-to-fore. Instructor George Laughlin informs us. As usual the meet will take the form of a relay, the competitions early in the morning and continuing at the Exhibition Park in the afternoon.

Behind the superb pitching of Frank Farraro, Glen Bowler's delimass forged to the leadership of the local senior softball loop last evening when they defeated the Aljmas Aces to 1. Farraro was master of the situation throughout while in batting mates hit well in the pinches, a combination that is sure to clinch in any championship. A twin bill will be presented on Thursday evening.

Jimmy McLarnin and Barney Ross re-opened their semi-annual bout at the Polo Grounds last night with McLarnin getting what John Public thought was an adverse decision. Ross showed outward marks of being the target of many of McLarnin's famous rights, but the judges gave the title back to Ross. Oh well, the boys will be back at it next fall again and another rattling good house will welcome them as they are two of the best "sellers" in the game today. Incidentally we must get our chapeau to Harry Robinson, who prior to his leaving with Fred Perry to witness the bout, predicted that Ross would wear the champion down and get the nod. "You win the concrete flah bowl, Harry".

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Hank Greenberg and Bill Rogell, Tigers—Drove in all of Detroit's runs against Yankees, each getting two homers.

Alex Kampouris, Reds—Cracked out two doubles and a triple against Braves.

Julius Solters, Browns—His ninth inning single drove in winning run in game with Red Sox. Also hit a double and another single.

Mel Harder, Indians—Held Senators in check, scattering 12 hits.

Pinky Higgins, Athletics—His homer drove in three runs and helped beat White Sox.

Jim Weaver, Pirates—Held Phillies to six hits and fanned seven.

Browns had scored three runs and pulled them into a 5-4 lead.

Cleveland got to the offerings of the loquacious Buck Newsom in the eighth inning to overcome an early Washington lead and shade them 8-6. The tribe put across three runs in this frame on a walk, two singles and a double.

Tigers Win Game by Knocking Four Homers

By ANDY GARDNER

Cincinnati Reds, long accustomed to the dregs, have at last taken a drug draught. Victory.

Yesterday they ran their list of consecutive wins up to six, the longest march of conquest they have known in four years. They fell on the Braves, with Flint Rhem and Ben Cantwell on the hill, for 18 forceful hits and defeated the Boston team by the wide margin of 13-2. Long blows were ringing off the bats of Reds. Kampouris whaled out a triple and two doubles, Riggs a triple and a double, and a brace of two-baggers. The Reds now are in sixth place, having won 18 games and lost as many.

In the only other National League game to be played yesterday, the Brooklyn at Chicago and New York at St. Louis games having been rained out, Pittsburgh Pirates moved a little nearer the first division by defeating the Phillies 3-1. Big Jim Weaver's slants were going right by the Philly batsmen all afternoon and he fanned seven and allowed but six hits.

In American League.

In the American League, Detroit Tigers took a step backwards from the Yankees by the expedient of knocking home runs. Rolfe—and Hank Greenberg belted two roundtrip blows each which accounted for all of the Tigers' runs. They drove in four runs apiece.

Schoolboy also provided the margin of victory for the Athletics who defeated Chicago White Sox 5-4 in Philadelphia. Johnson chalked up his 11th homer and Pinky Higgins and Johnny Marcum also aggred the horsehide for round tripe. Marcum, in his first appearance on the mound in two weeks, limited the Dykes boys to eight hits.

The last place St. Louis Browns took the rubber game of their series with the Red Sox, pounding the offerings of Lefty Grove and Wes Ferrell for 13 hits that totalled 25 bases. The once invincible Grove left the box in the eighth inning after having allowed 11 hits. He went diconsolately to the showers after the

AAJMAAS NOW ON TOP RUNG

Defeat Alemites 7-1 Behind Smart Hurling of Farraro

Hurling five hit ball, Frank Farraro pitched the Aajmas A. C. into undisputed possession of first place in the Belleville senior softball loop when they bowled over Alemite 7-1 at Centennial Park last evening. Farraro was in rare form whiffing six Alemite batters and blanking from the score board until two were out in the last inning when Johnnie Lupenette savored the "lubricants" from a short poke with a mighty clout to left field that went for a circuit blow when the left fielder missed on the wet grass. With the exception of Lupenette not a single Alemite batter reached third base safely as Farraro hurled consistent ball.

Harry Ridley was on the mound for the losers and limited the Aajmaas to seven safe blows which interspersed with errors on the part of his team mates accounted for the runs scored by the winners. A four run splurge by the Aajmaas in fifth frame was the deciding factor in victory. Henn led the winners with three hits, Norman Jordan and "Whatsman" Ehler hit well in the pinches while Farraro himself batted in a run. Both witness fielded better than their opponents with Hanna, Jordan and Ehler registering superbly. A twin bill of softball will be held at Centennial Park when Redeerville will make their initial appearance locally in the loop versus the Oasis Aces at the city park. Five miles and the St. Paul A. C. clash. Interesting game being played at Central Park.

The line-ups:

Aajmaas—St. Denis, c; Henn, 2b; Kiser, rf; G. Ehler, 3b; Jordan, ss; Hanna, cf; Bawder, 1b; Clark, lf; Farraro, p.

Alemites—Flagler, 2b; J. Ehler, 1b; White, lf; Henn, cf; Halsey, c; Dickey, rf; Ridley, p; Meens, ss; Lupenette, 3b.

Score by innings:

Alemite	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	—1	5	3
Aajmaas	0	0	0	4	0	0	3	—7	7	1

Umpires—A. Ehler, piate; C. Barrage, bases.

Browns had scored three runs and pulled them into a 5-4 lead.

Cleveland got to the offerings of the loquacious Buck Newsom in the eighth inning to overcome an early Washington lead and shade them 8-6. The tribe put across three runs in this frame on a walk, two singles and a double.

Make the GREATER WIDTH Test
The Roadlight Tread is definitely wider than any tire at the same price, and equally as wide as more expensive tires of comparative size. Measurements prove it! It offers more wear-rib road grip, more traction, more braking surface—a safer, longer wearing tire.

Make the DEEPER TREAD Test
Stand a coin in the tread pattern as shown. Mark the depth! Likewise test other tires. Roadlight's deeper tread, other tires. Roadlight's deeper tread, prove to the mark—proof positive that the Roadlight Tread is deeper, safer—good for more miles.

Daily Short Story

"WISE WILLIE"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Wise Willie" entered the office of L. J. Jones, attorney-at-law, with a brisk step, a wide smile and a general air of unlimited well being. Wise Willie was just what his name implied, a young man wise in the ways of living without working, a young man who knew all the answers and one who could never, by any chance, be scribbought, outsmarted or left on the short end of anything.

Mr. Jones lowered his newspaper, dropped his feet from his desk and said, "What is it this time? In another jam?"

Because even Willie had been caught at times. The police, of course, were always ahead. In court Willie would admit nothing. Among his friends, accordingly, he was the man who first thought of selling the Brooklyn Bridge and was still selling it. A wise guy. A man who let others make it so that he could take it. Broadway is choked with "Wise Willies."

Willie answered the lawyer's question with what he knew as a pained look. "Always crabbin' at work?" he said. "This time I've got a natural for you. Ought to be ten grand in it. That'll mean 1 per—"

'Make It Good.'

"Never mind what you get," interrupted Mr. Jones. "Tell me what I get and make it good or get out."

Willie brushed the paper aside to sit on Mr. Jones' desk. "Don't knock that paper around," said the attorney. "I haven't finished reading it yet."

"What do you want to waste your time reading papers for?" answered Willie. "They never have anything in 'em except a lot of junk that nobody gives a damn about. But maybe we'll give you some real news."

"Quit stalling and get at it," said Mr. Jones. "What's it all about?"

So Willie told him. Not directly and simply because that wasn't Willie's way. First he had to tell how smart he, Willie had been. Then he had to tell how dumb Jeanne LaTour had been. Then he had to tell how he had immediately thought of his old friend, his trusted counselor once other than Mr. Jones, as the one man to handle it. Only when the trusted counselor showed signs of going back to reading his paper did Willie get at it.

All supposed eventually that Willie had with him seven separate letters written to Miss LaTour by one T. G. Regan. They were such letters as might be expected from a suitor offering marriage, their phraseology being fervent, expansive and generally incoherent. Willie also had three pictures of Miss LaTour and Mr. Regan in terms of a certain intimacy. All these Willie laid on Mr. Jones' desk, inviting him to feast.

"This LaTour dame is just a dumb chicken, see?" he said. "She's just a tramp that this Regan bird gets mixed up with and then tried to duck. She isn't got brains enough to know these things are worth real dough if they're handled right."

Price Paid

"How much did you pay her for them?" asked Mr. Jones.

"Five hundred smackers," answered Willie. "And I had to scratch deep to raise it, too. Took every dime I had. Now, my idea was this: You're LaTour's lawyer, see. You write this Regan a letter and tell him she's going to sue him for breach of promise. He's got plenty of dough. I looked him up. He can't stand for the papers printing it so he offers to settle out of court. We stall along until he offers big money and then we snatch it. How's that?"

"It stinks," replied Mr. Jones.

Willie, who had begun to lean back after a job well done, said, "Huh! What do you mean?"

"Just what I said," answered the lawyer, tossing letters and pictures into the waste basket. "Let me tell you something," he continued. "If you weren't such a wise guy maybe you'd read the papers now and then. If you did you'd know that the Lechlaire's just passed a law that ends this racket. You can't sue for breach of promise and any lawyer who threatens to sue goes to jail. And that won't be me."

Willie's mouth fell open and remained opened. He couldn't seem to believe what he had heard.

"And another thing", continued Mr. Jones, "You can kiss that five hundred goodbye. LaTour was in here last week trying to get me to handle this thing. Told me all about the new law she said she'd find a sucker to pay for them. On your way, wise guy."

FRED PEERNOT AND THE MAGIC POWDER

Act 1

Scene, inside the palace.

King. Hello Fred. I'm glad to see you. Anything new?

Fred Peernot. Not with me.

King. Something is with me, though. Some fellow came in this afternoon and he said he was a magician. Anyway he was dressed like one, and he sold me this pill and he told me it would cast a magic spell on me and make me invisible to mortal eyes, and when I feel like being visible again the way to uncast the spell is to say Teeny weeny eeny meeny go.

Fred Peernot. Do you suppose that dont uncast it?

King. That's why I'm glad to see you. I mean I want you to try it for me.

Fred Peernot. Holey smokes your majesty, is that a command?

King. Absolutely. Here's the pill.

Fred Peernot. Okay, I'll get in back of that screen and swallow it.

Act 2

Scene, the same.

Fred Peernot. Here I come out from behind the screen. Can you see me?

King. No, you're absolutely invisible. Well I'll be darn. Now unwork the spell and see if you get visible again.

Fred Peernot. Okay, here I go behind the screen again. Teeny weeny eeny meeny go. Here I come out again, how do I look?

King. Absolutely visible, well I'll be darn. And now I have no pill for myself. O well, maybe I'm just as well off.

Act 3

Scene, outside the palace.

Fred Peernot. It's a good thing for me I studied to be a ventriloquist. I guess I'll take this pill home and feed it to the goldfish, and if it makes them invisible nobody wont miss them much, and if it dont it will prove the guy was no magician.

The end.

"TOOK ALL KINDS OF PILLS, THEN CEREAL BROUGHT RELIEF"

Constipation, Due to Insufficient "Bulk," Relieved by Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

A fine letter from Mrs. Snyder: "I have had trouble" with my bowels for years, taking all kinds of pills and drugs, with no relief.

"One year ago, I saw Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and bought a package. I have good movements every day. I am 78 years old. I sing my friends what bran has done for me."—Mrs. Sallie Snyder. Address upon request.

Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" is needless.*

Research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B, as well as iron, an element of the blood.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient to correct common constipation. With each meal, in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN resists digestion better than the "bulk" in leafy vegetables. How much better to use this food in place of patent medicines.

At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

The guards bound Perry more securely, and tied both men fast to opposite sides of the hut. When they had gone Tarzan hoisted across at his companion in misery. "While there is life," he grinned, "there is hope." Lieutenant Cecil smiled back.

He said: "I fancy we are getting short on both. We must be getting close to the cannibals' supper time!" Zu-lag (Big-neck) hunted alone far from the balance of the tribe of Zu-byrat. He had just arrived at maturity.

He was a large, powerful, ferocious beast whose full forehead denoted he was high above the average ape in intelligence. Today, he was returning along a river path because it led past the village of the Germanpani, whose peculiar manner of living interested him.

The cannibals always scouted Zu-lag's castaway, taking up a position in a tree where he could watch the blacks, he had just settled himself when, with the cannibals he was startled by the crashing of Tarzan's body within the palisade.

SEVERAL QUIT RACE

Rex Mays Drives at 108.082 Miles Per Hour

Speedway, Indianapolis, May 30. —(AP)—With the halfway mark reached, Kelly Petillo, Los Angeles driver, was setting a fast record for the leading the 500-mile automobile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway today.

At the end of 200 miles, Petillo had snatched the lead from Rex Mays, also of Los Angeles, having covered the distance in 2:17:46.00 for an average of 108.680 miles per hour.

Driver Killed

Speedway, Indianapolis, May 30. —(AP)—Clay Weatherly, Cheniwall, was killed today when his car crashed over the northwest wall while competing in the 500-mile automobile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Weatherly's mechanic, Edwin Brothers, Los Angeles, suffered a broken back. His condition was critical.

Weatherly was driving the same car with which Sammy Hannon of Norristown, Pa., was killed while competing here a month ago.

After grabbing the money the robbers, clothed in dark overalls, escaped in their car.

The bandits drove up and parked in front of the bank, leaving the engine of their car running.

Two men entered the bank, the grit-yaw car were fake, police stated, as a clock-up showed numbers given officials tallied with the car of a Toronto resident at home in the city.

Only witness to the escape was a four-year-old boy who told police he saw two men "run out of the bank and jump into a car. One carried a bag, the child added.

Kills 4 Youths To See Them Kick

Angleton, Tex., May 30—(AP)—Clyde Thompson, who at 17 said he killed two youths "just to see them kick" was found guilty here last night.

He stabbed Everett Melvin, Porter County robber, to death in a brawl at the retriere prison farm camp. He he married to Gertrude Ira Kelley, farm manager;

Mrs. Weil, Guy, 1, looks like I'm in trouble again.

Melvin was slashed to death as he and other convicts formed a line for the kok-step march to their evening meal.

He was dead when a physician reached the scene. Orville Kelley said he found the dirk with which Melvin was slain— a crude knife made from a file.

Thompson was first convicted for slaying the youths here in August, 1928. At his trial he said he killed them "just to see them kick". He was sentenced to life but on the sentence was commuted to life.

Farmer is Startled By Owl Under Lid

Tilbury, Ont., May 30 (CP)—Violent ghosts arose to confront Joseph Moscati, Raleigh Township farmer, as he sat at the dinner table and watched the lid on his under pot and kettle bob about. If the lid had risen a foot or more in the air Moscati obtained a poker and gently lifted it. There was a swishing of wings and a small owl darted through the door and escaped an open door. It is believed the bird fell down the chimney into the stove.

200,000 Bees Swarm at Door Keep Mrs. Lichty Prisoner

Windsor, Ont., May 30 (CP)—It was a relieved group of citizens in the 100-block on Elm Avenue today and one in particular, Mrs. Beatrice Lichty, who will remember for some time her experience with about 200,000 or more bees that swarmed around the door, thereby yesterday and held her virtually a prisoner.

The police, neighbors and finally Bob Hall, who keeps an apiary near, joined into a hive.

McCABE SETS UP SCHOOL RECORDS IN ANNUAL SPORTS

Collegiate Marks in Both Boys' And Girls' Classes Made

RIVALRY IS KEEN

Largest Entry List in Years Faces Starter at Meeden

With the largest entry list in recent years the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School opened its annual field day at the Exhibition Park this morning, when numerous events were completed in. The majority of the events will be presented this afternoon, however, at the conclusion of which the school athletic champions will be decided.

Only field events and heats in the 100 yard dashes were presented this morning, with the finals in the tracks events being the paramount events of the afternoon program. Keen competition marked the meet as all events in every class were bitterly contested. In the intermediate boys' class three records fell in the intermediate class, although the seniors tossed the discus one foot further. In the running high mark Jack Smith set a school record in his category when he jumped five foot three inches, this being three inches higher than other today's senior running high jump distance. Even in the girls' events some records were being established as the competition proved the keenest in years. It is expected that this afternoon's events will also see school records smashed.

Officials

The meet is under the supervision of Miss E. M. Allison, girls' physical instructor, and Mr. Geo. Laughlin, in charge of boys' athletics. Mr. R. B. Morden, physical instructor at the Y. M.-C.A., acted as starter for all track events while Mr. McGuinness is field chief. The announcer of the day was C. Smith while Arthur Cole acted as judge of weights. Other officials to assist in the day's programme as clerks etc., were, Misses Agenia May, Janet Adams, Earl Hay, Abe Cohn and other members of the student body.

The result of the events concluded this morning were as follows:

Girls' Events

Senior

Three Legged Race—Sylvia Reddick and Lilian Hall; Dorothy Miller and Marjorie Casement.

Soft Ball Throw—Florence Hall, 86 feet 6 inches; Janet Adams, Sylvia Reddick.

Intermediate

Broad Jump—Margaret Griffin, 13 feet, 6 inches, Phyllis Lewis, Betty Adams.

Three-Legged Race — Marjorie Storms and Audrey Cornell, Betty Storey and Marjorie Hall; Lillian Marcus and Edna Bush.

Soft Ball Throw—Dorothy Miller, 132 feet, 6 inches; Audrey Cornell, Betty Adams.

Junior High Jump—Marjorie Hitchon, 4 ft. 4 1-2 inches, Connie Williams, Jean Pigden

Cast Iron Weights Removed From Dow

A new racket was unearthed in Bellefair on night, when the large weight on the fire door of the East Robertson Block was removed. The weight was discovered missing in the morning when the building opened up for the night, shortly after midnight. The matter was reported to the police, who are today searching for persons carrying large cast iron weights. The weight was made of cast iron and weighed in the neighborhood of 75 pounds. It is believed by police that the weight is a relic of old iron and will be disposed of in a local junk yard.

Harvard Reddick Will be Contestant In Radio Broadcast

Harvard Reddick, to be contestant in Wrigley's Final Amateur broadcast on Saturday.

Next Tuesday, June 4, over CFRB (880 k.) from Love's theatre, at 9-4:30 p.m. Standard Time, or 8 p.m. Daylight Saving, Mr. Harvard Reddick, formerly of Bloomfield will be heard in contest in Wrigley's final amateur broadcast, the winner of which gets a free trip to New York and an audition there over WEAF.

Harvard Reddick is a son of Rev. C. S. Reddick, former minister of the United Church, Bloomfield, being located there for seven years. Harvard being a fine tenor singer won the first amateur broadcast sponsored by Wrigley's some 4 weeks ago. It will be remembered that Mr. Reddick sang at various entertainments, throughout Prince Edward County as well as in Belleville and surrounding districts. He is a graduate of Picton Collegiate, and took a great interest in athletic and church work. Do not fail to help Harvard on the night of June 4th, and send in your vote to that it will reach CFRB Radio Station, Toronto, by Saturday, same followed by broadcast. INSPECTION HELD OF ARGYLL L. I.

Brig. Anderson, C.M.G., D.S.O., Compliments Local Unit

An event which is an attraction for many citizens is the annual inspection of the Argyll Light Infantry. This took place last night at the Armouries with hundreds of men, women and children present to watch the proceedings. At 7.30 the regiment was by Col. K. A. Gunn paraded and drawn up to the 21st general salute by the inspecting officer, Brigadier W. B. Anderson, C.M.G., D.S.O., officer commanding of military district No. 3, Kingston. He was accompanied by Capt. O. Ryckman, commander of the 7th Infantry at Lindsay, Major H. Wills-Sandford, staff officer of military district No. 2, Kingston, and Capt. Sutherland of the R.C.A.M.C. of Belleville.

The battalion presented a smart appearance in their full dress uniforms looking their best. Various manoeuvres were executed with precision and marching that could not have been desired. The brass band of the Belleville Collegiate, R. Hunter in command, looked exceedingly smart in their new uniforms with Scarlet tunics and the pipe band was in command of the Regimental Pipe Major.

Brigadier Anderson was evidently pleased with the parade and it was stated, that all did well and that there was a decided improvement over last year's inspection.

Headquarter Staff

The personnel of the headquarter staff was as follows:

Col. K. A. Gunn, V.D., Commanding Officer.

Major D. Gribbin, Second in Command.

Major J. V. Doyle, Regimental Quartermaster.

Major Rev. A. B. Payne, Chaplain.

Major A. S. Quick, Paymaster.

Capt. W. C. Morgan, M.C., Medical Officer.

Lieut. J. Vining, Assistant Medical Officer.

Capt. J. W. Grant, Signal Officer.

Lieut. R. O. Buller, Assistant Adjutant.

Lieut. K. R. Grills, Signal Officer.

Lieut. R. N. Frink, Acting Signal Officer.

Regimental Sergeant Major G. Lancaster.

Regimental Quartermaster Sergt. Mack.

Company Commanders

A Company—Major Sword, M.C.; Lieut. R. Weese; Lieut. J. F. McFee and Lieut. J. E. Lucas.

D. Company—Capt. G. M. Davidson; Capt. J. Lester; Lieut. I. K. Scott, and Lieut. A. Sharpe.

Won Shield

B. Company commanded by Major H. F. Alford was awarded the march efficiency in drill.

At the conclusion of the inspection the Regimental Officers were entertained in the officers' mess with a number of visitors in attendance including some commanding officers of the regiment.

The sergeants of the battalion were also at home to those who are members of the mess and friends. The ladies were received in the sergeants' mess room which recently has been greatly improved in appearance by new blinds and appropriate curtains at the windows. After refreshments had been partaken of an impromptu program of a delightful nature was carried out.

The inspection was in every respect one of the most successful held by the battalion. The various officers are to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts in training the men to the proficiency which was attained.

Military Notes

Tomorrow at 2.30 p.m. the battalion will entrain near the armouries for its annual camp at Oshawa where it will be in camp until Monday evening. Strike drill will be indulged in the boys will have recreation in the interesting program has been prepared.

On Sunday there will be a church parade with other troops units taking part. The outing will no doubt be highly enjoyed while in Oshawa the battalion will be quartered in the armouries.

The advance party will leave in the morning, being transported to camp by trucks.

Local Bridal Pair See Five Dionnes

At present on their honeymoon trip through northern Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Black, who were married in this city on Saturday last, were two of the lucky few who managed to obtain a glimpse of the Dionne quintuplets at the Callie Hospital, Corbiel, on Tuesday morning. A post card telling of the trip was received by Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Black this week.

Though the visitors were not admitted to the hospital the nurses in charge kindly permitted the newlywed couple to view the babies from a distance.

Modern Education Worth Cost Says Dr. E. Guest, Toronto At Rural Urban Celebration

Tweed And Stirling Community Clubs Join With Rotary

FORCEFUL SPEAKER

T. W. Solmes and Jamieson Bone Chairmen For Evening

What was called a Rural Urban Celebration took place Wednesday evening in Christ Church Parish Hall when the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, and Rotary Clubs were hosts to large delegations from the Stirling and Tweed Community Clubs in return for a similar visit of the Belleville organizations to Tweed and Stirling. Chairmen Jamieson Bone, President of Belleville Rotary Club, occupied the chair for the evening in part of the program, inaugurating the gavel to Tom Solmes, President of the Stirling Community Club, for the second part of the program. Stirling club supplied the program and Tweed the speaker.

Bob Patterson of Stirling and Fred Bowers of Tweed Clubs were appointed sergeants-at-arms for the evening.

Community singing was led by Bob Patterson and Charlie Allan of Stirling, Bowers presided at the piano.

Ling club's contribution to the program was the presentation including a kazoo band and the presentation of a huge bouquet of field flowers to Mrs. Jamieson Bone in appropriate ceremony.

Vocal solos by Miss Betty Conley, and violin solos by Miss Alice Calhoun, both of Stirling, were very well rendered and greatly appreciated.

Mayor Tice formally welcomed the visitors, and Chairman Bone's welcome was also made by J. R. Boyce, President of the Chamber of Commerce, and Fred Bowers, President of the Rotary Club, replied to by Tom Solmes, then head of Stirling Community Club.

Chairman Bone's address replete with wit and humor were given by Dr. Carleton, of Stirling, and J. C. Herity of Belleville.

Education Too Much?

Dr. Edmund T. Ghest, Chairman of the Toronto Board of Education, last year, was the guest speaker, his subject dealing with "Is Education so to whether there is "Too much of too little education" nowadays. Dr. Guest was introduced by Dr. W. A. Peel, of Tweed, a classmate at the University, who introduced a novelty in introductions by reading an Alphabetical poem about the virtues of the speaker with a great deal of humour and was finally attuned to the letters of the alphabet. Appreciation of the address of Dr. Guest was voiced by Rotarian J. R. Guthridge, another classmate of University days, and one of the incidents of student days affecting Dr. Guest, were related to the evident amusement of his audience as well as the guest speaker himself.

There were over one hundred present, Stirling and Tweed clubs sending large delegations, with the Rotary club and Chamber of Commerce were well represented.

Rising Cost of Education

The question as to whether there is too much education, nowadays, in view of complaints of steadily rising education costs and consequent increase in taxes, was very ably discussed by Dr. Guest, who contended, that more education decidedly worth all that it cost and more in developing an active and intelligent citizenship, and teaching the young people how best to live. He spoke, not as an educationist, but as an observer and from experience including five years on Toronto Board of Education.

Accidents of Democracy

School trustees, and public speakers are accidents of democracy, the former being link between the schools and those who are paying the bills, a balance between enthusiasm and high ideals and thrifty economy for the taxpayers.

Early Education

Early education, the Three-R's and battles for popular education were sketched briefly, and Dr. Guest referred to standards of early days when very little schooling was available, the grudging attitude and improvement—the early days when entrance to high school supposedly meant goodbye to overalls and the farm, while collar jobs for the boys, and vocational training today.

"Family Compact" Days

The great battle for popular education staged one hundred years ago under those great leaders Egerton Ryerson and John Strachan, who secretary rudiments of education, virtually "put the Fire and the Sword" stubborn opposition by Bishop Strachan who contended that education was for the classes not the masses. Since then great strides in education have been made with beneficial results to the nation and the citizenship. Recently criticisms have become rife of education methods, prominent publications publishing articles to the effect that the tendency was toward too much education, too many frills and fads and excessive expense—too much money wasted on unnecessary and unprofitable education.

Keep Off Streets

The Adolescent School Attendance Act which made it compulsory to attend school until sixteen years of age was discussed by the speaker, and the opposition to this act referred to. The legislation was a wise one the act did not do so from altruistic motives but from necessity, to provide occupation for the youth and keep them off the streets. Now the act is virtually a dead letter because no jobs are available and the schools are filled with students even up to nineteen and twenty years of age, forming a serious problem for management.

Worth Not Wasted

At one time there were many openings for boys and girls in factories and offices, but the rapid development of labor saving machines and efficiency methods has closed the doors to employment for many young people and there are forced for refusals at school or roam the streets. There are thousands now for whom no jobs are available and their interests must be provided for by the nation at large. There will be jobs for all in the future, but for the present it is a case of mark time in the best way possible in developing personal citizenship.

Fads And Frills

Fads and frills in general school nonsense, machine shop training for boys, and the girls higher grade cookery when they could be better taught by their mothers—current criticisms were discussed by Dr. Guest, who said that mothers were not doing their duty, through not showing good cooks they were personally and the girls were getting "out of date" ideas. Such things needful for the life they would have to live, and which their mothers were not taught the boys in school as claimed by critics, but the practical were followed, which would tend to bring out the capabilities of the boys and girls and best fitted for and he was helped to get into that line of life for which he was best fitted and was prepared in school to make the best start in the profession or trade. The training and apprenticeship in the world of business, industry and the trades there were advanced studies not covered by industrial apprenticeship and not available to the youth desiring them.

Six-Year Old Wisdom

More practical knowledge is installed to meet the conditions of men and methods that was possible in a month under old "General" education. The opinion of the speaker, who said that a lad six years old knew more than one advanced in practical education than his father was at fourteen.

Dr. Guest then concluded away from life but being educated into a life and fuller life.

Critics of domestic science were answered by Dr. Guest, who said the statement that girls are learning from domestic science to manage husbands, keep house, plan meals and economically than was ever possible before.

Fit To Live With ...

Children are being taught to be fit to live with people in the schools, said Dr. Guest, to be good citizens, and if this is not being accomplished now when work hours are short and there is much more time and inclination for leisure—so to go hayfire in leisure time.

The last seven five years of disturbing times, under conditions unknown before, which in some more would have caused serious crisis and general turmoil. Disturbances have been expected for the depression for ten years and was ready to help them. There was no general discouragement, disheartenment and the abandonment of despair with consequent outbreak. Education carried on through the crisis, sustaining the morale of the young people, and preventing spiritual cancer. The result is continued progress and hope among the young people of today, an appetite for good literature and the arts, and a keen interest in the public libraries, perfecting themselves to be better citizens as instanced by the spread of dramatic societies, camera clubs and increase in allotments.

To be good winners or good losers in sport and other things through school athletics, said Dr. Guest, and better value is received for the money spent out of the beaten paths of education, in so-called "frills and fads."

Mistakes in Modern Methods

Mistakes and failures made in modern education, frankly admitted Dr. Guest, and changes had to be made, new courses had to be ready mapped out but Big Business also changed its methods according to business concern, he knew of, had changed its system five times in ten years.

Criticisms of modern methods, in Dr. Guest's opinion, were in the tendency toward too much and too expensive equipment, too much emphasis being put on machinery and not enough on the human equation.

Dr. Guest closed with a strong appeal for appreciation of those officers who were doing a wonderful work and were entitled to the largest for adverse criticism instead of helpful co-operation. The teachers were working to make the world safer and pleasant for the children than the world in which the world that parents grew up in.

Dr. Guest is a forceful speaker, and certainly made out a strong case in favor of modern education and its effect upon the youth of the land in forming character and co-operation for good citizenship.

Appreciative tributes were expressed for his address by Chairmen Jamieson Bone, Tom Solmes, and the fact, that he held the close attention of his large audience from beginning to end was an evidence of the general appreciation. Flashes of humor illuminated his address, which was thoroughly interesting from beginning to end.

For the fine menu provided by the ladies of the Church social, a very much appreciated by all present tributes of praise were given by the chairmen and others.

Britain as Viewed in Literature Depicted by Mr. Geo. F. Stewart

Teachers And Instructors of O.S.D. Hear Fine Address

Members of the Association of Teachers and Instructors of the Deaf, at their regular meeting last evening, had the privilege of hearing a scholarly address, on taking them in fancy on a literary journey through England, which was followed with keen interest. The speaker was Mr. George F. Stewart whose deep and appreciative study of British literature made his address a real treat and diner for of the enchanted tour.

Mr. Geo. F. Stewart explained was not that of a traveller describing the scenes he had visited but the words of one who had never travelled, talking on things he had never seen. His words not be a difficult as it seemed, for anyone who happens to England, the picturesque history of that great little land, to some degree as illustrated with the splendid literature should be able to talk interestingly on this subject.

Trip to Britain

His first choice, if offered a holiday across the seas, the speaker declared, would be to Britain. This was not merely because it is the Motherland, or because it is the centre of the British Empire, but because it is the country in which Canada forms so large and which is filled with interest for the intrinsic interest, an interest, which centres in their cities, their countryside, their people, their historic or literary interest. Thinking of Britain one thinks first of its cities alone, but of the exquisite and gracious rural landscapes and those beautiful old-fashioned villages that form so integral a part of all that is best in England may be written in her castles but in the history of English life is written in her villages, her homes, her countryside. And everywhere the glamour of the past presents itself one travels one sees history and literature, and the spirit of days—do, and revel in living literature.

Charm of Countryside

From the words of contemporary literature and statesmen, Mr. Stewart quoted wonderful tributes to the charm of the British countryside.

In the history of this land is the story of outstanding forces, the Celts, the Romans, the Saxons, the Danes, the Normans, from the wedding of Alfred, which came to great British nation.

Then like the smoke of antiquity Rome sacks" continued the speaker, and we get a glimpse of men walking Roman roads in England and Wales, Rome. Surely the most momentous sound ever heard on earth was the sound of thanking; surely the most glorious figure, greater than Guthrum with his great sword and shield, was a boy man under an axe telling a story to his son, a gentle, beautiful queen about to be martyred, and so wonderful that happening a few centuries before the Christ Child named Bethlehem. For Rome conquered Britain twice, once with a sword and once with a story."

Logical Development

While comparatively, the history of other countries is a conglomeration of more or less unrelated facts, the history of the British Isles of England is tremendously different. The logical drama of history moved always purposefully to a higher development of the life of today, the democracy, the great outermost beginnings of those fundamental principles which have made Britain the synonym for freedom, and social institutions of the world.

Pageantry of History

The pageantry of the history of Britain, the vivid beauty of its landscape and architecture, and the grandeur of its literature were beautifully described by Mr. Stewart who visited, in imagination, cities and villages, moors and countryside, river and lakes, whose names and the names of the personalities associated with them echo through the ages with sentiment and appreciation.

Touching first the lands of Arthurian legends, the "age of legends" which followed that of the Roman occupation of Britain, and which is shrouded in mystery, not entire fable, Mr. Stewart recalled and the stories of the knights sing as told by Tennyson, the poet "Who was always and passionately English." Tennyson's poetry forms a solemn length on the poet's works and appreciation of the great spiritual force of his mighty work.

"There is one thought which I have had all my life in that of religion," said Mr. Stewart, "as it is of what impresses us in literature, and that is that mere knowledge, mere intellectual development, never has, never will, never can make a man good or keep him good. This, to me, is the great message to lessons of all human history, Assyria, Greece, Rome, Britain, where are they? In every instance it was at the time when they had attained the highest point in their culture and intellectual development that they began their descent into the lowest depths of moral infancy which wrought their decay and downfall. For teaches which I would like to impress on you as the supreme object of education is that the greatest need of the world is not knowledge and education, but goodness and wisdom."

TERM EXAMS END AT COLLEGIATE

Easier and happier life has come back to the boys and girls who have all their year's studying to the last period paper. The examinations that the Upper and Middle School students at the Collegiate Institute have been trying for the past week ended Wednesday. These are the final exams of the term and the last chance for those wishing to obtain 66 per cent. average.

Rabbit Hurls Self Thru Glass of Car

Toronto, May. 30.—(CP)— Any hunter can chase Jack Rabbits but it takes skill to make a rabbit chase itself into the cooking pot. That, at least, is Mr. McIntosh were motoring along the Brantford highway when a rabbit hurled himself through a closed window, covering glass in every direction.

"Being Scotch," said Mr. McIntosh, we promptly seized the rabbit and took it home where he finished up on the dinner table.

75 Years of Continuous Success

OUR 75th ANNIVERSARY

50 years before the Coronation the door of this then very humble business was opened to the citizens of Belleville. Since that time we are told it has, served the community well and we are happy to have among our customers the finest citizenship of Belleville and the surrounding district. We wish to thank all our customers, who by their loyal support, have helped us build a business which we are justly proud of.

The Measure of Success

SUCCESS IN BUSINESS . . . THE RIGHT KIND . . . isn't just making money, it's making friends, giving service, watching and aiding the growth of the community.

It is the source of much pride to McFEE'S that after seventy-five years of business, their friends are their best customers and their customers their best friends.

In order to celebrate this very important birthday in a fitting manner we have gone the limit to get some real bargains. In many instances the manufacturer has reduced his price to us to help us celebrate, and in many cases we have done likewise. We will consider it a real favour if you will visit our store during this period of our celebration, regardless of whether you are purchasing or not.

RADIO VOICES.

One thousand public personalities have had their speeches recorded in Europe and the United States by Prof. Jane D. Zimmerman, instructor at Teachers' College, Columbia University. She calls President Roosevelt's the best in the world and declares that senators and business men's voices sound better over the radio than most radio announcers'. Broadcasting companies should look into that and learn the reason why. The announcers probably have not been used to speaking so that they can be understood. Then the poor radio announcer is not handling his own word creations as the senators and business men do in their speeches—the announcer is reading something someone else wrote. That makes it difficult for him.

After calling the Roosevelttian voice an almost "ideal" voice, Prof. Zimmerman says his sentences are smooth and compact, not drawled out in jerky fashion, his articulation is very clear and his rhythm excellent. There is a sense of security in his voice, she says. He is never under a strain, at least if he is, he never allows it to get into his voice. His voice gives the impression of a genial smile.

Prof. Zimmerman calls the Huey Long voice on air sometimes very good and sometimes very ineffective and poor. Father Coughlin, in her opinion, uses a "pulpit" voice which makes his speech sound formal and unnatural over the radio.

Radio announcers' voices are referred to as "quite poor". She speaks of "false enthusiasm in the voice which is quite insulting to people."

OPIATE.

I will not take the drug, although I know
Entrancing dreams would come to ease my pain,
White Alpine heights would send from crests of snow
Chill winds to make my fever's fury wane.
I would find groves to charm a Druid's eyes,
Green lanes through trees where cooling shades would drift,
Incredible fountains in whose mists would rise
Bright rainbow banners for the breeze to lift.

I will not take the opiate earth would give,
To drowse the years away in halls of dream;
Though life be cruel, still I choose to live
And know the things that are, not wraiths that seem.
Far better, though it turn sweet songs to sighs,
The bitter truth than any cloying lies.

GARBAGE ON GARDENS may make good fertilizer but it maketh the neighbors angry for the garbage collecteth the flies and mosquitoes and disturbs materially the peace of mind and ease of body of all affected therefrom. All of which is just a hint, the result of a complaint received from a Sidelight reader that garbage was being spread on gardens in the residential section and that something should be done about it. We are sure that the practice will be discontinued at once, now that the practisers know that it is an offence to neighbors—on the principle that if thine eye offend thee (or thou, or those) pluck it out.

x x x

MOTOR CAR SPEEDING on other streets than those mentioned in this column recently is reported by Sidelight readers who point to the great danger to pedestrians, children especially. The latter have a habit of running out into the road after a ball without looking to see if cars are coming. Motorists are not criminal, just careless, and a little thought will reduce the speed within safe limits.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT RAILWAY (T. & N. O.) is to be operated on lignite as a motive power, if and when. There are large lignite deposits convenient to the railway line and the stuff burns readily. It is loose and crumbles easily and will not stand shipping in its native state but if it can be compressed into briquettes economically, then the lignite industry of Northern Ontario has a future. Prospectors for gold and silver first found the lignite beds and many camp fires were made of the stuff. A number of lignite claims were staked and a company formed back about 1911 but the fact that the lignite would not stand shipping brought the venture to naught at the time. Now the management of the Ontario Government Railway is investigating the lignite prospect for locomotive fuel and experiments are taking place. At one time it was proposed to run this railway with electricity generated from the many waterpowers along the route but nothing has been heard of that project recently. The first locomotives that passed through Northern Ontario were fired with wood which was plentiful along the right of way, and like the packets on the old Mississippi of Mark Twain's times, which stopped at wood wharfs every so many miles, the trains stopped at wood depots at regular intervals and the whole crew had to help wooding up. Now going back to lignite, if and when, seems like returning part way to wood burning days. However, Chief Commissioner Col. Malcolm Lang knows his fuel and his railways, having commanded a forestery corps in France and operated light railways behind the lines to carry trench timber to strategic points—so if lignite will make steam and hold it without blowing right out of the tender, Col. Lang will discard Yankee coal and save the home folks a whole lot of money.

May 30th., 1915

At the conclusion of the meetings of the civic committees at special meeting of the council was held presided over by Mayor Panter. All the members of the council were present except Ald. Platt. The object of the meeting was to pass the following by-law: A bylaw to authorize the raising of the proceeds of $7,704. of debentures by way of loan for completing the erection of a new public school in Belleville, for which debentures were authorized to be issued by bylaw No. 1471. The bylaw was passed through the various stages and numbered.

A number of persons, chiefly boys, appeared before Police Magistrate Masson charged with discharging fire crackers and other explosives on Front street on Victoria Day contrary to a city bylaw. The accused admitted the offence and were fined $2 and 3l costs each or in default one week in jail. The fines were paid.

WOOLER BRANCH OF W. I. ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Mrs. George Anderson is Named President at Annual Meeting

Wooler—On Wednesday afternoon some forty ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. S. W. Terrill, floral Hill Farm, to the meeting of the Wooler Branch of East Northumberland Women's Institute. The President, Mrs. George Anderson in the chair. Reports from secretary treasurer and committees were discussed and accepted. Moved by Mrs. S. L. Terrill and seconded by Mrs. Crews that Mrs. Orvis act as chairman for the business meeting, election of officers by ballot.

President—Mrs. George Anderson.
1st Vice Pres.—Mrs. Fred Crews
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. Harry Crews
Sec.-Treas.—Mrs. J. J. Way.
Branch Director—Mrs. L. H. Row.
Auditors—Mrs. Arthur Scott, Mrs. Clayton Maguire.

The program was interesting, beginning with community singing, piano solo by Mrs. Robt. Walker, an excellent paper on "Plans for flower gardens of annuals, perennials, arrangements for borders, how to cultivate and plant them" and "Spring will Autum bloom" and closing her paper by explaining how to arrange window boxes, when to plant the flowers and the variety of flowers to plant to make a beautiful showing of bloom and green foliage, given by Thelma Bull, whose mother Mrs. Davis Bull makes a specialty of flowers. Many helpful recipes were given, especially dishes palatable for the evening meal.

HYDRO

Controls Your Pay Envelope

YOU are vitally interested in the success of Hydro, because, as a citizen of this municipality, you are a partner in this gigantic enterprise and because it means so much to you in personal income.

Cheap power has been a real magnet in attracting industry to this Province, with a consequent employment of thousands of workers and larger payrolls. In addition to this, the payrolls of Hydro and allied electrical trades swell the buying power of the citizens of this Province.

In Ontario's industrial development, therefore, Hydro influences your pay envelope, regardless of your occupation.

At the spacious home of Mrs. F. E. Anderson, 208 John Street, a most successful Blossom Tea and sale of home cooking was held yesterday under the auspices of the Benevolent Society of St. Michael's Church. The many guests were received by Mrs. Anderson, president of the Society, assisted by Mrs. L. P. Hughes and Mrs. J. Pults. The fragrance of lilacs and the beauty of the artistically arranged Spring flowers which filled the charming rooms greeted the visitors. The guests were invited to the tea room by Mrs. A. B. Collins, Miss K. Dolan and Miss Margaret E. Griffin. At the tea table, with its handsome lace cloth and lovely centrepiece of deep-joned tulips and baby's breath, Mrs. J. Fitzgerald and Mrs. P. Fitzpatrick poured tea. Mrs. P. J. Lee and Mrs. D. V. Doyle were in charge of the tea table and those who assisted were Mrs. L. H. Howe, Mrs. Harold Barrett, Miss Margaret Hayes, Mrs. T. Sullivan, Miss Nora Hayes, Mrs. J. Corcoran, Mrs. W. Mahon and Miss A. Feigler. The home cooking table whose delicacies were much in demand, was in charge of Mrs. John Lafferty and Mrs. Edward Lally. Mrs. T. Daly was treasurer for the tea. The beautiful hand-made pillow cases on which tickets were sold, were won by Mrs. Edward Lally, the holder of ticket 114. The proceeds of the affair will be devoted to child welfare work of the Benevolent Society.

Obituary

MRS. HIRAM VARTY (Tweed)

After a serious illness of but two days' duration, there passed away on Thursday, May 23, Ruth Elizabeth Coulter, wife of Hiram Varty. The late Mrs. Varty was born at Tamworth fifty-six years ago and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Coulter. She received her education at Tamworth and took up the practice of dress-making. On Jan. 26, 1904, she was united in matrimony to Hiram Varty of Bogart. Left to mourn her loss are her husband, four daughters and four sons: Harold F., Tweed; Mabel F. Parham; George W., Trenton; Ada M., Belleville; Mrs. Hillard, Marjorie and Earle at home. Two sisters also survive, Miss Miss Coulter and Mrs. James Wheeler, Tamworth.

WILLIAM ALBERT MARTIN

William Albert Martin passed away after an illness of about three weeks' duration at his residence in the 5th concession of Thurlow on Wednesday, May 29th.

The late Mr. Martin, who was in his 83rd year, was born in Plainfield. At the age of 17 years he took up residence in Thurlow township and had been a resident of that township for 66 years. For many years he was engaged in farming, and was well known and highly regarded by many friends and acquaintances. He was a man of fine character and a member of St. Andrew's United Church at Oded.

Surviving him are his widow, whose maiden name was Miss Eleanor Christina Whyte; one daughter, Mrs. Manson York, Tamworth; two sons, Bruce Havelock Martin, 4th concession of Thurlow; Clarence Albert Martin at home in the 5th concession of Thurlow; one sister, Mrs. Isobel Sexsmith, Winnipeg, Manitoba; two brothers, George Martin, Saskatoon, Sask., and Angus Martin of Belleville.

ALBERT COLLEGE SURPLUS SEEN

Report is Presented to Bay of Quinte Conference

(By Canadian Press)

United Churchmen meeting at Stratford yesterday arbitrated and settled a little "war" of their own in debating a resolution on peace and war, as three separate conferences of the same church considered. Hamilton Conference met at Guelph.

Rev. John Line of Emanuel College, Toronto, told the Bay of Quinte Conference at Peterborough a "conception of Christ" was needed.

Conscience Subjugation

Committee report at the London Conference in Stratford presented a resolution, which declared it "hypocrisy to boast of a Christian civilization in the face of a nationalism which demands the subjugation of conscience and the denial of human brotherhood".

Concern in the prospect of another war should be taken, it was urged. Rev. T. L. Green, London, suggested an international arms control of munitions manufacture. He charged lack of unanimity in the committee, and his assertions started a word battle on the floor of the conference. It ended in reports being referred back to committee.

At the Hamilton Conference, at Guelph, advisability of admitting ministers of other churches into United Church ministry was questioned.

Albert College Shows Surplus

Albert College, Belleville, will show a satisfactory surplus this year, it was reported to the Bay of Quinte Conference at Peterborough.

The election of Rev. Dr. James Sclanie of Belleville, as president of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church at Peterborough, on Wednesday came on the second ballot cast by the 400 lay and clerical delegates.

Considerable discussion regarding the election procedure preceded the casting of the first ballot. A move for nominations was defeated, and it was decided to chose the new head without nominations and without debate. The first ballot gave Dr. Semple leadership with 201 votes, Professor J. O. Watts of Queen's University running up with 53 votes. The second ballot gave Dr. Semple a clear majority with a total vote over the required 147.

Accepting Calls

Ministers who accept calls to pulpits already occupied, in cases where no vacancy is in view were rejected by retiring president, the Rev. Geo. O. McQuade of Oshawa as he spoke his farewell address to the Conference. He rebuked also the ministerial charges which arrange settlements without consulting the Settlement Committee of the Conference.

"There is, as we all know, a widespread unrest," Rev. McQuade said urging that the time is at hand for some radical change. He said according to the present system ministers still good for many years of service are being shoved out of the active ministry. Ministerial charges should be more ready to consult the Settlement Committee in arranging changes, he said.

"I feel certain there would be fewer men shoved out of the active ministry if all our settlements were left to the body considered to them intelligently and fairly with the problem. I believe our settlement committee serves us well and conscientiously."

Ministerial Salaries

Rev. McQuade dealt also with ministerial salaries, urging that steps toward equalization of salaries be taken in the near future. The average income of several ministers in certain northern charges is $618.42. Out of that sum, only $316.17 each year is available for family use, he said, declaring that the ministers and their families are not getting decent living remunerations. "I am making a plea for adequate support of these great spirits who have not failed the church in these ten years since union."

Dr. Sockman Speaks

Rev. Dr. W. Sockman of New York City, secretary of the Council of Churches of Christ of America and noted radio preacher and writer addressed the conference. The noted speaker based his address on the dimensions of a modern minister—length, breadth and depth.

Referring to the length of a minister's stay in one charge, he said far more resourcefulness, intellect and ability is required of a minister to stay a lengthy period in a small town or city charge than in a charge in a large city. He declared the length of the stay is governed largely by the minister's own enthusiasm and his faith in his message.

Dr. Sockman spoke of the Christian church as a stockade standing on the boundary of a rich background on the frontier foreground yet to be pioneered. The church of which as a stockade standing soul may be rested and recharged for the pioneer work in society.

Not a few ministers in New York City are yielding to a certain trend of opinion of the times and saying that it is no use relying on the methods of Jesus in combating the present muddled condition of the world, he continued. They are saying that the only way out is to sweep the decks clean by violence or otherwise and begin anew he said. Fortunately however, he went on, the great body of Christian ministers still have faith in peaceful ways of Jesus based on faith in love and brotherhood.

Transfer of Rev. Dr. W. Bishop of Trenton Falls, from the Bay of Quinte to the Hamilton Conference was mentioned by Rev. McQuade following the opening morning devotions in which Dr. Bishop assisted.

TWO BURNED TO DEATH

Mt. Pleasant, Mich., May 30.—(AP)—Two men died early today and another was believed to be dying from injuries suffered in a gas well fire which trapped nine men working on a derrick in the rich Central Michigan oil field last night.

The dead—William A. Williamson, 55; a driller from Sistersville, W. Va. and Milton Santee, about 40, of Cameron, W.Va.

HELD FOR VAGRANCY

Cobourg Ont, May 30.—(CP)—After a short chase during which Constable Gavin Reid fired his revolver, a man who gave his name as Fred Day of Belleville was arrested today near the rear of a jeweler's store. Constable Reid discovered him behind the store and quickly corraled him. He was taken to jail and charged with vagrancy.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 30—(CP)—Discouraging a reactionary tendency in the leaders, the general tone of the Toronto industrial market was strong today and gains predominated at the close. The Wall Street market holiday was reflected in smaller volume over the board. Imperial Oil and International Petroleum dropped a half point, up a point net over the amount of the dividend which was off today but British American held firm.

There were no NRA reactions to disturb the Toronto industrial share market today, due to the U.S. holiday and prices were inclined to hold steady. Aside from weakness in the oils, prices this afternoon were close to Wednesday's general level. Trading continued in small volume.

Imperial Oil and International Petroleum were down considerably more than the dividend, off today. Imperial lost a point and Pete about two points from the last close. Metals held steady except for a loss of a point for Smelters and C.P.R. and Ford A weakened about 1-4 each.

TORONTO MINES (Close)

Toronto, May 30 (CP)—The Toronto Mining Market took things easy today, volume showing up rather small compared with the activity of the last few days. Prices however, were steady to firm, the most buoyancy appearing in the silvers and base metals which had been depressed through several sessions. Golds were mainly steady with scattered gains off-setting moderate recessions of others.

A firmer tone prevailed in the Mining Section from the opening with gains showing mainly in the silver and base metals. Activity that had been hampered in recent sessions. Golds were slow but steady, the few exceptions including Bralorne, San Antonio and Sladco which weakened 3 to 8 cents each.

Silvers had the benefit of a slightly higher London and Montreal metal and Hudsons picked up 12 cents, selling up to 1.78 while Castle gained 5 cents, and Premiler 3.

Base metals were led by Morands and gains were general in this group this afternoon. Noranda added 75 cents, selling at 38.75.

Obituary

MRS. ELLEN MURRAY

After an illness of two weeks' duration, Mrs. Ellen Murray, wife of Mr. Archie Murray, 151 Cannifton Road, passed away at the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday, May 29th.

The late Mrs. Murray, who had reached the age of 57 years, had passed all her life in Belleville and district. She was a devout member of St. Michael's Church and was held in high esteem by all who knew her.

Surviving to mourn her loss are her husband, Mr. Archie Murray, two daughters, Mrs. W. Pomeroy, Ottawa; Mrs. R. Covert, Belleville; five sons, Leo Murray of Frankford; James Murray of Belleville; Joseph Murray of Toronto; John Murray of Belleville, and Frances Murray of Belleville.

LATE MRS. ELIZA M. LAUGHLIN

Wednesday afternoon there was a very large attendance of friends at the funeral of Mrs. Eliza Morden Laughlin which took place from her late residence, 23 College street, to the Tabernacle United Church, where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. T. R. Naylor, the pastor of the church. Interment was made in the Belleville Cemetery, the service at the graveside being conducted by the Rev. Mr. Naylor.

The bearers were — Messrs. Thomas Bell, G. S. Sharpe, R. B. Bell, G. Frost, George Barlow and Harold Dedrick.

MRS. VICTORIEN BRUNELLE

Campbellford— This community and vicinity was deeply shocked on Friday, May 3rd to receive the news of the death of Helen Shannon, beloved wife of Victorien Brunelle, which occurred very suddenly and unexpectedly. Deceased was the youngest daughter of Mrs. Shannon, Second Calhoun and prior to marriage, a very well known and popular teacher in the local public school. She was a bright young woman of notable disposition and will be sadly missed in the home of her family and by a host of friends.

Surviving are her sorrowing husband, one son, Victorien, her mother, and five sisters, Mrs. Fred Lee of Bellefonte, Mrs. Ella Brunelle of Campbellford, Mrs. Harold of home, Miss Jessie Cook of Brighton, and Mrs. Patrick Butler, of Percy and six brothers, Patrick of here, Father Cecil Shannon, C.S.B., of Comwall, Alta., Father James Shannon, C.S.B., of St. Louis, Mo., and Denis, Frank, Edward and Joseph Shannon, Mass. The funeral was held on Wednesday morning from the late residence which was sung by Rev. Father Grant, also in the sanctuary were Rev. Father Cooper of Warkworth, Rev. Father Fougere of Warkworth and Rev. Father Cashin of Grafton, who in a brief sermon, paid a glowing tribute to the life and character of the deceased. Interment was made in the Campbellford cemetery, the following taught school for some years in his native parish of Dessaulles, Percy' spiritual and funeral solemn requiem of the high school in which Mrs. Brunelle was held.

Yankees Hit Stride on Return To Home Field as McCarthy Takes Over Reins After Illness

In Virtual Tie With White Sox After Win Wednesday

RED SOX UP

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

Since the beginning of the season sundry baseball experts have pointed out that New York Yankees as a team to watch this year and if they keep going at their present rate it will prove that all the other clubs will have to look upwards to watch them.

After an almost disastrous western trip, the Yankees hit their stride when they returned home May 16 and Manager Joe McCarthy, who had been ill, took the reins again. Since then they have bowled over the invading western clubs nine times in thirteen starts and continued their spurt at Washington by taking a six-inning slugfest from the Senators 7-6.

That triumph, which was halted in mid-career by a rain storm, put the Yanks into a virtual tie with the idle Chicago White Sox for the league lead. New York, having won two more games than the hose and lost two more, remained somewhat behind in the percentage column.

The lack of hitting which frequently has troubled the Yankees this year was nowhere in evidence as they hammered Bob Burke out in four innings with eight blows, including a homer by Pitcher Red Ruffing and Lou Gehrig's fifth circuit swat of the year, each good with one on base. They also battered Harry Coppoc for four runs in the seventh and Washington got one back on Jake Powell's homer but the whole business was wiped out when the rain interfered before the inning could be completed.

Holiday Games.

With many of the clubs traveling to the scene of today's holiday bills only three other big league games were played. Boston Red Sox took a running broad jump to a 10-8 victory over the Athletics and a half interest in third place in the American League while the Braves outlasted the Phillies in a National League batting match, 8-6. The Cardinals ended Cincinnati's cherished six-game winning streak with a 9-1 victory and the Cubs-Pirates game was rained out.

The Red Sox put in six innings gathering speed against Bill Dietrich, then hopped off to an eight-run rally in the seventh that brought three Philadelphia pitchers into action and decided the game. The hose collected five hits and three passes in that one inning and got the benefit of two errors. The Braves worked it the other way scoring seven times in the final two frames, then standing off a series of Philly rallies when Bob Smith relieved Ed Brandt and pitched no-hit ball for the last five innings.

The Cardinals got even with Gene Schott, Cincinnati rookie hurler, for a five-hit defeat earlier in the season by smacking him for four runs in the second. The Reds threatened in the seventh but Bill Dean, relieving Bill Walker, got a lucky break when Lonny Frey hopefully batted his struck Cable Slade on the base path for the third out.

PETROFF FACES A TOUGH BOUT

Meets "Badman" Dunlop In Main Go of Wrestling Card

Dan Petroff, the Russian Lion, faces the toughest bout of his varied career when he tangles with Dunlop, the Cleveland badman, at the Belleville Arena on Friday night in the main bout of the Kiwanis Club's all-star charity wrestling show. Dunlop has met and defeated all practicable opponents for the past few weeks, but in Petroff he faces a master in the art of scientific wrestling. Petroff is known for his gentlemanly actions in the ring and can be depended upon to retaliate for any roughness introduced by Dunlop. The Kiwanis promoters have the best all around program yet presented in the city, bringing together "Bulldog" Findlay versus Jack Pearl of Toronto in the semi-final bout with Johnnie Dallas of Daly meeting Emil Daly of Nebraska in the opening bout. Two referees will be used, Jack Forbes, Canada's premier wrestling athlete officiating in the main bout with Bert Wells of Belleville assisting in the preliminaries. The usual popular prices are in vogue.

Tied With Bisons as Result of Win Over Orioles

(By The Associated Press)

A sustained drive that has netted 11 victories in 15 games played since May 12, today had carried Buffalo Bisons, International League pacemakers, within one game of the top in the International League pennant race.

Needing a victory to hold to their runner-up position, the Bisons yesterday took the pace-setting Toronto Maple Leafs into camp 6-2 for their third triumph in five games played with the league leaders this year. Newark Bears, however, vaulted into a virtual tie with the Bisons by whipping Baltimore Orioles 9-5. The defeat dropped the Orioles to fourth place while Montreal Royals fell to fifth as they dropped an 8-3 decision to Rochester Red Wings.

In beating the Leafs, Bill Harris, former Major Leaguer, shut out the Canadians with three hits until the ninth inning while Ollie Carnegie drove out two home runs and increased his total for the year to 11 and drove five of the Bisons' runs across the plate. Harris let up in the ninth, however, and the Leafs connected with three successive singles, which occupied with a force out, gave all of their runs.

The Newark-Baltimore game was a slugging contest, which ended in the eighth when a heavy rain forced cessation of hostilities. After the Orioles had scored one run in each of the first three innings, the Bears put on a three-run rally in the third to drive Harry Gumbert from the mound and take the lead. They counted three more times in the sixth and twice in the eighth off Guy Moore while Ed Brandt was going to the rescue of Jack Lavoca. The former entered the game in the sixth and pitched shutout ball the last two frames.

STRATFORD NATS SCORE 22-0 WIN

Biddle Hurls Two Hit Game and Contributes Only Error

The big bats of Stratford Nationals, Inter-County League and Ontario senior champions for 1934, have started to explode again in the western Ontario loop and the league pacesetters entertain any doubt about the ability of the Nationals to slug their way to the top—again.

They went into Preston yesterday and batted out a 22-0 decision. Perhaps the inter-county won't see another such lop-sided affair all season. It may not see any better pitching than that of Ken Biddle or any more decisive belting than his mates provided in recording nineteen hits.

Biddle pitched a two-hit game. Only five Preston batters reached first base. Biddle himself contributed the only Stratford hit. His catcher, Maximmons bit safely six times in seven attempts. Only he was a triple, another a double. The Nats got enough hits to win two ball games and were helped along by the Preston errors.

Gall, Kitchener and Aylmer were other Inter-County winners in the mid-week program. The Terriers eked out a 7-6 decision over Brantford in 11 innings. After Richter, a pinch-hitter, drove out a home run in the first of the eleventh, the Terriers won the game on successive singles by Shenk and Buck.

Kitchener's 7-5 win over Guelph Maple Leafs was the first of the season. An infielder, Howard Miller, went to the mound for the first time in his life and struck out 13 Guelph batters, allowing 10 scattered hits.

Pitcher Lampman won his own game for Aylmer in a 5-3 affair with a single scoring Manager Brick Crowley for a 5-4 victory over St. Thomas Tom Cats. Lampman had a 13-hit assault on Gray and Weeks, St. Thomas pitchers.

In the Niagara District Senior League, Merritton upset Port Colborne 11-4. Jack Nestor wobbled a bit on the mound for Merritton but he led the attack with two home runs and a single.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

All academic activities at the B.C.I.V.S. are at a standstill today as the eyes of the student body are turned on their annual field day. The events open this morning, weather permitting, at the Exhibition Park, and continue this afternoon with the final track events and field competitions, only a few field events being on the program for the morning appearance. Due to examinations and strenuous studying on the part of the students, the annual spring training period has been limited to practically the minimum amount of time. As pointed out by Miss Allison, girls' athletic coach, and Mr. Laughlin, boys' physical instructor, the holding of the school's annual field day at a time when examinations are looming on the hidden is far from satisfactory from either point of view. Both coaches favor the return of the autumn field day, as was the case for many years in the past at the B.C.I. Why the annual field day at the B.C.I. was changed from the fall to the spring cannot be accounted for, but with examinations at hand at this time of the year, it would naturally seem that the most opportune time for a field day or track meet would be the fall of the autumn, when such activities would not interfere with the academic activities of the school.

Judging from the general street talk Dan Petroff will have three opponents in the wrestling card on Friday night than he has enjoyed for many months in any ring. Petroff has been chosen by the local Kiwanis "wrestling promoters to meet Bulldog Findlay who has injected a reign of terror into the local grappling circles with his rough and unorthodox tactics. Despite the fact that fans admire Dunlop's pugnacious attitude, their very first wish and desire is to see the Cleveland terror given one sound thrashing. Petroff is a wrestler of the old school methodically rohs about his ring chores in the most orthodox manner, although he did show a flash now and of his ability to rough it when he found Calgary Farrell last week. St. Catharines football player who cannot understand why Dan Petroff retaliated prontc with the result that he soundly beat Farnell. In signing Petroff to meet Dunlop the Kiwanis promoters felt that Petroff could duplicate this feat against Dunlop and once his ire was aroused, he could be depended upon to give the "raging stomached" Cleveland battler a real beating. So as far as the semi-final bout is concerned, the fans are well acquainted with Bulldog Findlay and his opponent, Jack Pearl, the latter naturally being the local favorite. The certain raiser sees the return to a local ring of that scrappy little Italian, Johnnie Dallas, who meets Emil Daly of Nebraska. With Jack Forbes being elected to referee the main bout perhaps Dunlop will not get away with so much dirty wrestling this week versus Petroff.

Way clouds have rolled away in the local district home after pitching league and everything is hunky dory. Six teams are included in the South Hastings set-up now while another league including the communities farther north are operating. The new local set-up includes two clubs from Belleville, a "B" and "S", the same number from the Trenton Airport along with the Lake and Rail-ing. The league was successfully opened on Monday while the remainder of the schedule was framed up by President Addison Lloyd today. Doubtlessly the winner of the Thanksgiving-Foxboro, etc., league will meet the winner of the local district loop in a post-season playoff series.

When Knotty Lee's Peterborough Terror Diamond passed through the city enroute to Kingston yesterday afternoon they were minus one the fact that other senior O.B.A.A. had procured residence transfers for their players while the Petes had been deprived of the services of Sig Kuntz. "You can rest assured we will get Sig through all right," stated Knotty in one of his usual fiery orations. For Knotty's information we might say that the whole league is in sympathy with Konnedy as to why in the world the Petes ever applied for Kuntz's transfer, after his playing in the Lifflock City last season, we and others cannot understand. On the surface it looks like one big error on the part of the executive of the Sea Horses.

Included in the souvenir baseball program published and presented yeah by the Stewart Warner baseball club are a number of questions, most of which are what is known to baseball as knotty problems. One especially has caused no end of controversy among local fans and we have repeatedly been asked to explain the same. The question is: "Can a run be scored after three men are out?" The answer is "Yes". Now, this question naturally will cause the layman fan to doubt the veracity of the answer given. As stated before this is a knotty problem, but the above mentioned play did actually happen in Miami, Ga., some years ago when a run did count after three hands had been retired. The situation was as follows: "There were three men on bases and there was not a ball on the count so the batter was two strikes and three balls. With the next pitch the base runners started to advance with the batter on the pitcher's arm. The pitch was a ball, walking the batter and naturally forcing in a run, but the runner on second base was a speed merchant and arrived at third base before the runner from third was even near the plate. The catcher threw the ball to third base as the runner from second scratchingly happened to step off that bag towards home plate, the third base-

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

At soon as he felt the air growing chill with the coming change, Tafas got up, and two minutes later we were swinging forward again. An hour after and it grew bright, as we climbed a low neck of lava crowned nearly to the top with thorn sand. This joined a small flow near the above to the main Rejat lava-field, whose western edge ran up upon our right hand, and caused the coast road to lie where it did. The neck was stony, but brief; on each side the blue lava humped itself into low shoulders, from which, so Tafas said, it was possible to see ships sailing on the sea. Pilgrims had built cairns here by the road. Sometimes they were individual piles, or just three stones set up one above the other; sometimes they were common heaps, to which any disposed passer-by might add his stone—not a reasonably nor with known motive, but because others did, and perhaps they knew.

Beyond the ridge the path descended into a broad open place, the Masturah, or plain by which Wadi Fura flowed into the sea. Seaward its surface with innumerable interwoven channels of loose stone, a few inches deep, were the beds of the flood water, on bigger rare occasions when there was rain in the Taref and the courses raged like rivers of the sea. Landward there was about six miles wide. Down some part of it water flowed for an hour or two, or even for a day or two, every so many years. Underground there was plenty of moisture, protected by the overlying sand from the sun-heat; and thorn trees and loose scrub profited by it and flourished. Some of the trunks were a foot thorough: their bright might be twenty feet. The trees and bushes stood somewhat apart, in clusters, their lower branches cropped by the hungry camels. So they looked carried for, and had a premeditated air, which fell strange in the wilderness; more especially as the Tihama hills' arts had been a sober barrenss.

In the early sunlight we lifted our camels to a steady trot across the broad going of these shingle-beds among the trees, making for Masturah well, the first stage out from Rabegh on the pilgrim road. There we would water and halt a little. My camel was a delight to me, for I had not been on such an animal before. There were no good camels in Egypt; and those of the Sinai Desert, while hardy and strong, were not taught to pace fair and softly and swiftly, like those rich mounts of the Arabian princes.

Yet her accomplishments were today largely wasted, since they were restored for riders who had the knack and asked for them, and not for me, who expected to be carried, and had no sense of how to ride. It was easy to sit on a camel's back without falling off, but very difficult to understand and get the best out of her so as to do long journeys without fatiguing either rider or beast. Tafas gave me hints as we went; indeed, it was one of the few subjects on which he would speak. His orders to preserve me from contact with the world seemed to have closed even his mouth. A pity, for his dialect interested me.

Quite close to the north bank of the Masturah, we found the well. Beside it were some decayed stone walls which had been a hut, and opposite it some little shelters of branches and palm-leaves, under which a few Bedouin were sitting. We did not greet them. Instead, Tafas turned across to the ruinous walls, and dismounted; and I sat in their shade while he and Abdulla watered the animals, and drew a drink for themselves and for me. The well was old, and broad, with great stone steps leading, and a strong coping round the top. It was about twenty feet deep; and for the convenience of travellers without ropes, like ourselves, a square chimney had been contrived in the masonry, with food and hand holds in the corners, so that a man might descend to the water, and fill his water-skin.

Idle hands had flung so many stones down the shaft, that half the bottom of the well was choked, and the water not abundant. Abdulla tied his flowing sleeves about his shoulders; tucked his gown under his cartridge belt; and clambered nimbly down and up, bringing each little four or five gallons which he poured for our camels into a stone trough beside the well. They drank about five gallons each, for they had been watered at Rabegh a few hours before. Then we let them moon about a little, while we sat in peace, breathing the light wind coming off the sea. Abdulla smoked a cigarette as reward for his exertions.

Some Harb came driving a large herd of brood camels, and began to water them, having sent one man down the well to fill their large leather bucket, which the others drew up hand over hand with a loud staccato chant.

We watched them two riders, trotting light and fast on thoroughbred camels, drew towards us from the north. Both were young. One was dressed in rich Cashmere robes and heavy silk embroidered headcloth. The other was plainer, in white cotton, with a striped woolen head-dress. They halted beside the wells, and the more splendid one slipped gracefully to the ground without kneeling his camel, and threw his halter to his companion, saying, carelessly, "Water them while I go over there and rest." Then he strolled across and sat down under our wall, after glancing at us with affected unconcern. He offered a cigarette, just rolled and licked, saying, "Your presence is well refreshed." I parried politely, suggesting that he was from Mecca, to which he likewise made no direct reply. We spoke a little of the fair weather and the badness of the Hajj she-camels.

Meanwhile the other rider stood by, vacantly holding the halters, waiting perhaps for the Harb to finish watering their herd before taking his turn. The young lord cried, "What is it, Mustafa? Water them at once." The servant came up to say dismally, "They will not be ma'. God's mercy!" I shouted his master furiously, as he scrambled to his feet and hit the unfortunate Mustafa three or four sharp blows about the head and shoulders with his riding-stick. "Go and ask them." Mustafa looked hurt, astonished, and angry as though he would hit back, but thought better for it, and ran to the well.

The Harb, shocked in pity made a place for him, and let his two camels drink from their water-trough. They whispered, "Who is he?" and Mustafa said, "Our Lord's cousin from Mecca". At once they ran and untied a bundle from one of their saddles, and spread from it before the two riding camels footfor of the green leaves and buds of the thorn trees. They were used to gather this by striking the low bushes with a heavy staff, till the broken tips of the branches rained on a cloth stretched over the ground beneath.

The young Sherif watched these contentedly. When his camel had fed, he climbed slowly and without apparent effort up its neck into the saddle, where he settled himself leisurely, and took an unctuous farewell of us, asking God to requite the Arabs bountifully. They wished him a good journey, and he started southward, while Abdulla brought our camels, and we went off northward. Ten minutes later I heard a chuckle from old Tafas, and saw wrinkles of delight between his grizzled beard and moustache.

"What is upon you, Tafas," said I.

"My Lord, you saw those two riders at the well?"

"The Sherif and his servant?"

"Yes; but they were Sherif Ali ibn al Hussein of Modina, and his cousin, Sherif Mohsin, lords of the Harith, who are blood enemies of the Masruh. They feared they would be delayed or driven off the water if the Arabs knew them, so they pretended to be master and servant from Mecca. Did you see how Mohsin raged when Ali beat him? Ali is a devil. While only eleven years old he escaped from his father's house to his uncle, a robber of pilgrims by trade, and with him he lived by his hands for many month, till his father caught him. He was with our lord Feisal from the first day's battle in Medina, and led the Ateiba in the plains round Aar and Bir Derwish. It was all camel-fighting and All would have no man with him who could not, do as he did, run beside his camel, and leap with one hand into the saddle, carrying his rifle. The children of Harith are children of battle." For the first time the old man's mouth was full of words.

While he spoke we scoured along the dazzling plain, now nearly bare of trees, and turning slowly softer under foot. At first it had been grey shingle, packed like gravel. Then the sand increased and the stones grew rarer, till he could distinguish the colours of the separate flakes, porphyry, green schist, basalt. At last it was pearly pure white sand, under which lay a harder stratum. Such going was like a pile-carpets for our camels running. The particles of sand were clean and polished, and caught the blaze of sun like little diamonds in a reflection so fierce, that after a while I could not endure it. I lowered hard, and pulled the head-cloth forward in a peak over my eye, and beneath them, too, I made a bewer, trying to shut out the heat which rose in glassy waves off the ground, and beat up against my face. Eighty miles in front of us the huge peak of Rudhwa behind Yenbo was looming and fading in the dazzle of vapour which hid its foot. Quite near in the plain little shapeless hills seemed to block the way. To our right the steep ridge of Beni Ayub, toothed and narrow like a saw-blade, fell away on the north into a blue series of smaller hills, soft in character, behind which lofty range after range in a jagged stairway, red now the sun grew low, climbed up to the towering central mass of Jebel Subh with its fantastic granite spires.

A little later we turned to the right, off the pilgrim road, and took a short cut across gradually rising ground of flat basalt ridges, buried in sand till only their topmost piles showed above the surface.

Along this we held our way till sunset, when we came into sight of the hamlet of Bir al Sherkh. In the first dark as the supper fires were lighted we rode down its wide open street and halted. Tafas went into one of the twenty miserable huts, and in a few whispered words and a long silence bought flour, of which with water he kneaded a dough cake two inches think and eight inches across. This he buried in the ashes of a brushwood fire, provided for him by a Subh woman, who he seemed to know. When the cake was warmed he drew it out of the fire, and clapped it to shake off the dust then we shared it together, while Abdulla went awy to buy himself tobacco.

They told me the place had two stone-lined wells at the bottom of the southward slope, but I felt declined to go and look at them, for the long ride that day had tired my unaccustomed muscles, and the heat of the plain had been painful. My skin was blistered by it, and my eyes ached with the glare of light striking up at a sharp angle from the silver sand, and from the shining pebbles. The last two years I had spent in Cairo, at a desk all day or thinking hard in a little overcrowded office full of distracting noises, with a hundred rushing things to say, but no bodily need except to come and go each day between office and hotel. In consequence the novelty of this change was severe, since time had not been given me gradually to accustom myself to the peaceful healing of the Arabian sun, and the long monotony of camel pacing. There was to be another stage to-night, and a long day to-morrow before Feisal's camp would be reached.

SERIOUS FIRE IS AVERTED AT CHEESE FACTORY

Neighbors Save Central Factory From Flames

Rawdon—At noon on Monday the people of Mount Pleasant and the east end of Rawdon called to Central Cheese Factory to fight what might of been a very serious fire and over one hundred persons gathered in a short space of time. After working heroically the fire was extinguished, the buildings saved and the only loss was about a cord of wood.

The fire was caused by a spark from a burning chimney on the house occupied by Mr. Morris Rose, cheesemaker. The fire was unnoticed and a spark lit in the woodpile, igniting same and when the flames had reached considerable proportions, due to the strong westerly winds, the fire was first seen by Mrs. George Weaver.

She at once sounded stirring centrial and the hello girl placed the various subscribers on the line for assistance as it was thought at that time that the house was on fire. Immediately after this Mr. Weaver went up to the factory and found the fire to be in the large wood pile where it was burning undetected by Mr. and Mrs. Rose. The strong wind was blowing the blaze and soon the property of the Central Cheese Company as well as other barns and residences would have been endangered by the spark.

However a large number of folk soon gathered on the scene and the bucket brigade organized, while others set to work tearing away the wood and in a short time the fire was quenched and what might have been a heavy loss was averted.

Again it has been demonstrated the value of the telephone in times of serious fire and the value of the motor car in reaching the scene in quick order. With the wind blowing at such a gale it would have been very hard to quench the fire had it succeeded in getting to larger proportions before it was noticed.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Mash and Raymond of Port Hope visited Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Sine on Sunday.

Miss Nora Mallen visited Miss Mida McMullen on Friday, the 24th.

Miss Marguerite White, Convenor of Social and Recreation Department presided and opened the program with "Showers of Blessing" and Mr. Clifford Chambers read the Bible lesson.

Mrs. John Holmes outlined a splendid topic on "Reading for personality", she said "Reading is one of the most important factors in the development of personality. Books are classed in three divisions, enlightening, educational and degrading. Good literature will clean our character as well as clean thinking thoughts. Reading should be balanced the same as a good diet. Editorials, nature and science current events are of interest to the culture of the mind as well as fiction. Books of fiction should be followed by lighter material. In nine cases out of ten persons who are not fond of reading never enjoy or realize the beauties of nature. The speaker left in a helpful discussion and Miss Anna Sharp sang "Give my love to Nellie Jack".

Miss Emeret MacMillan read a poem entitled "The perfect housekeeper". Miss Andrews contributed a musical selection, guitar and harmonica. Mrs. Arthur Pallister read the Prose Prayer. The service closed with one of Charles Wesley's hymns and a Victorious.

Among those from Mount Pleasant who attended the 50th celebration at Foxboro were Mr. and Mrs. Don Campbell and Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes and Kenneth, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver and Lois, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Johnson and family, Mr. Norman McConnell, Misses Olive McConnell, Francis McKeown, Isobel Turner and Muriel Milligan. In the afternoon two games of ball were staged and also a tug of war between the Conservatives and Liberals and a slight nose-bleed. Any young mother knows with what horror she sees these things happen what a comfort to have had the Home Nursing course to know just what to do, and to have the Red Cross manual right to hand as further guidance.

The father may start the car in a hurry in the morning and not notice that the door of the garage has been shut, and he is inhaling the poisonous gas until he gets too drowsy to care. How often we hear of this accident nowadays. What a blessing if someone in the house knows enough to get him outside and start artificial respiration before a life might be saved. What a splendid thing to know at any summer resort.

Then there are all the minor illnesses that should be taken care of at the time to prevent them growing into something more serious. For instance, if a mother notices her child is not eating and is losing weight, and has been taught to take his temperature and to report all temperatures to a doctor, she may be able to stop a serious illness; or even less than that, a constant pain in time may stop a cold.

There are twelve of these lessons in the course—eight of which are practical demonstrations by a graduate nurse followed by practise by the students. Three are given by doctors, and one by a dietitian. All this service is given voluntarily by professional people who are interested in the good of their community.

Such courses have been given with splendid results in the city and it is such classes as the Red Cross Society which citizens will be furthering by responding generously to the appeal for funds next week.

Home Nursing Classes Of Red Cross Benefit All

All may benefit by a course in Red Cross Home Nursing. It is the simple things that are taught. The emergencies that may happen in any home any day. The baby may swallow a pin, get a button in his nose or ear, have a convulsion or a nose-bleed. Any young mother knows with what horror she sees these things happen what a comfort to have had the Home Nursing course to know just what to do, and to have the Red Cross manual right to hand as further guidance.

Letters to the Editor

RAILWAY SITUATION

Belleville, Ont., May 29, 1935.

To the Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:

I think it is time some one should try and defend Sir Henry Thornton and what he did to keep the C.N.R. out of Mr. Beatty's control. Dr. Manion in a recent speech saw fit to call Sir Henry a shark and said that it was a mistake in bringing him out here. Well he was able to show Mr. Beatty that he could run the C.N.R. out of business. Sir Henry spent a lot of money but he had to and Mr. Beatty had lots to spend and did. Lets seem to have been to go to it and put the C.N.R. out of business as soon as possible. He went to it hard for 18 long years and last summer he gave up and acknowledged that there was $75,000,000, a year being wasted and that it was high time that the two roads got together. Any man he thinks Sir Thornton deserves a lot of credit. It doesn't seem to me that Dr. Manion realizes what Sir Henry was up against. We had a lot of bankrupt roads all in bad shape and as Sir Henry had proved that he was a thorough railway man, it was decided that he was the man to tackle the job. Well he started in and about the first thing he did was to educate the employees that they were working for themselves and it did not cost half as much to run a caboose as before. The employees commenced to try and take an interest in the business instead of not caring whether there was any business or not and it is a mystery to me now they have a report 10 years later for the interests of the company when any of the government are ready to help the C.P.R. instead of the C.N.R.

Sir Henry may have made some mistakes but which one of us has not made a mistake. I think if Sir Henry Thornton had been given a free hand, we would have been a long way out of the hole by now. To my mind we would not have been as far in debt as we are if it had not been for Mr. Metty.

Mr. Thornton had to keep up with him in order to keep the C.N.R. in a position to compete with the C.P.R. It seems to me that if the taxpayers realize that when they use any other mode of transportation except their own that they are losing money and working against their own interests. If they would fall in line and try and settle this unemployment and this would do it, "just ship and travel C.N."

I am waiting for someone to show me why my olan won't work.

RE CANADIAN RED CROSS

Belleville, May 28, 1935.

The Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:

I have received from the National Commissioner of The Canadian Red Cross Society a letter of the material parts of which the following is a copy:—

"My dear Colonel Ponton:

Recognition of His Majesty's Silver Jubilee and the award of the Jubilee medal to those who have rendered conspicuous voluntary service during his reign, of course you were one, suggested to some of the members of the committee that it would be extremely appropriate if they would persuade some of the founder members of the Red Cross in Canada to give us have for our records their stories of the early days of the Red Cross in this province before often most interesting facts go unrecorded and consequently become forgotten. If we could persuade you to set down the story of the early days of the Red Cross as this is known to you and to very few others we would be forever in your debt."

I am gathering up my "collections and memories" on this purpose and would be very much obliged if any of my friends would contribute any information which would be interesting and helpful.

Yours truly,
W. N. Ponton.

NILES' CORNERS WEEKLY NOTES

Niles Corners, May 30.—Miss Carolyn Mallory who has been spending the past year in Montreal visited her cousin, Mrs. R. Tummon, Wednesday. Also the Misses Mallory with friends of Trenton spent Wednesday evening at Mallory's home.

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Clapp and Mrs. H. Dafoe were at Belleville Wednesday afternoon last week.

Mr. R. Dafoe spent the week-end at his home here.

Rev. H. H. Hobbs of Wellington and family of friends called at A. N. Dafoe's on Wednesday evening last.

Mr. Ross Burley of Wellington has been teaching at Niles Corners school for a fe w days during the Illness of Mrs. G. McFall.

Mrs. Will Ellis and Mr. H. L. Channell have been on the sick list for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Dafoe were in Wellington on Wednesday evening last.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Dafoe and children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Dafoe and family.

MOIRA W. A.

The monthly meeting of the Women's Association was held at the home of Mrs. President Mrs. Ben Morton. A dinner to which twenty-five members and guests sat down, was served in the dining room.

Two quilts were quilted for members of the Association.

Mrs. David Thompson was in charge of the devotional part of the meeting which began at 2.30 o'clock. The Scripture lesson and hymns were chosen in keeping with Mothers' Day. Mrs. Henry Emerson gave a beautiful reading and all took along the same lines which was much appreciated. Mrs. Mirriam led in prayer. Miss Lily Ketchenson acted as pianist. The treasurer's report revealed the fact that there were twenty-five paid members in the society and new ones are being added at each meeting.

This is very encouraging as the society is in a flourishing state in the community.

Funds have been set aside to purchase 100 cups for use in connection with the activities of the church and $25 were voted toward the ministers' salary and a small balance is still in the treasury.

The meeting was closed by repeating the benediction in unison.

QUINTE BRANCH W.I.

The Quinte Branch W.I. were entertained at the beautiful home of Mrs. Shelly Anderson Anderson, Front of Thurlow on Tuesday afternoon when there was a large attendance.

The President, Mrs. Jas. Garbutt had charge of the meeting which opened with the singing of "O Canada" repeating the Lord's prayer in unison. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Roll being the end of the Institute year was taken by the secretary-treasurer and the Secretary, Mrs. N. Brown, read the yearly report and a satisfactory balance was on hand. Mrs. Garbutt graciously thanked the members for the splendid co-operation during the year, and asked that a new president be elected, but upon the election of officers, Mrs. Garbutt was unanimously chosen to continue the work.

1st Vice President: Mrs. A. Keene.
2nd. Vice President: Mrs. A. Mitchell.
Secretary Treasurer: Mrs. N. Brown.
Pianist: Mrs. H. Sine, Mrs. Geo. Connors and Mrs. F. Parrot.
District Director: Mrs. A. Mitchell.
Press Reporter: Mrs. T. Brown.
Flower Committee: Mrs. A. Greatrix, Mrs. D. Atkins, Miss Helen Brown.

The roll call; the paying of fees, was well responded to, and a goodly number paid fees for the ensuing year. There was also an exchange of plants and bulbs which proved most interesting.

The branch anticipate carrying on the good work in Shannonville cemetery again this summer, and hope to have a decoration day early in June.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem, and Grace. Mrs. Anderson and her conveners served a delicious lunch.

FOUND DEAD IN ROOM

TAKES OVER ROYAL BANK AT PICTON

Canadian Bank of Commerce Branch to Occupy New Quarters

Picton—Mr. Edward Rathwell is spending some time with his son Harold in Chatham. He is convalescing from injuries sustained from a fall, that he sustained while carrying out his work at the C.I.D.S.

The Girl Guides realized a splendid sum from their rummage sale, held in front of the armouries on Saturday morning.

On Friday May 31st the Canadian Bank of Commerce takes over the Picton branch of the Royal Bank, while the Royal Bank at Napanee takes over the branch of the Bank of Commerce in that town. The Canadian Bank of Commerce will move into the quarters in the Odd-Fellows' Building that have been occupied by the Royal Bank, after having done business for sixty-seven years in Picton in the Holden building, as first the Standard Bank, and later the Bank of Commerce.

Thousands of cars poured into Wellington on Friday evening. Only one car seemed to be leaving the place. It was gaily decorated with white ribbons, old shoes, etc. and carried the happy couple—Allan Graham of the Wellington Bakery and his bride, nee Miss Della Phillips of Allisonville who had been married in Wellington that afternoon.

A very realistic "Zulu from Borneo" with naked brown body, straw skirt and anklets and of course a spear was chained to the big drum containing the ticket stubs to guard these.

A committee of seven men from outside the county were on the platform to see that the drawing of tickets was done in a fair way.

Marshall Palmer climbed perilously along the rafters of the big Arena to reach the "Eagle's Nest" from which he operated the stage spot lights; Toronto photographers took pictures of all the big events of the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Adams, Misses Madeline and Louella Jarvis of Picton and Mr. and Mrs. Will Burford of Toronto spent the week end in Wellington.

The energetic members of Post 160 Canadian Legion of Wellington spent approximately $1800.00 in labor and equipment before they had one cent of return on their money. However the show went over in a big way and was most enjoyable.

CANUCK WINS MAJOR U.S. ROWING AWARD

John F. Coulon, promising sculling star of Toronto Argonaut Rowing Club, showed his class in the American Henley, rowed on the Schuylkill river, Philadelphia, when he scored an impressive victory in the first division singles competition. Coulon, lone Canadian contender in the regatta, far outclassed his opposition to win the major single award.

TRENTON POLICE ARREST PAIR FOR CHEQUE PASSING

Taken at Brighton After Passing Two Cheques in Trenton

CHANGED CLOTHES

Montreal Men Had Nearly $100 When Arrests Made

Trenton, May 29.—(Special)—Again the Trenton police showed their ability, that has given the name of one of the finest forces in the province, when they nabbed two cheque artist yesterday afternoon. It is likely that surrounding districts will be looking for the pair today but they are safely lodged in the Belleville jail on remand.

A man giving his name as James Baker went to the Allore Motor Co., office yesterday afternoon, and stated, that he was moving to town and had some repairing to do to a house. He ordered $9.00 worth of lumber to be delivered the next morning. He offered to pay the bill and produced money but then asked if the firm would cash a cheque. The cheque was for James Baker and signed by Jacob Mitcaker, a farmer living near town. The cheque amounted to $25 and the lumber bill was deducted and the balance handed out to the stranger. Feeling suspicious later Mr. Allore called the Bank of Toronto and had the issuer did not have an account there. He at once notified the police. Sgnt. Mr. Smith, manager of the Trenton Coal and Lumber Co., appeared on the scene with a story the same as Mr. Allore's. . Warrants were issued and the hunt began but did not last long. It was learned, that two men had left for Brighton with a local taxi man. Brighton police were notified and soon the pair were nabbed. With Mr. Allore and Mr. Smith accompanying the police, they went to Brighton and arrested the two in a boarding house. They had changed their clothes and carried three club bags with a fine array of haberdashery. Nearly one hundred dollars was found on their person and in the bags. Last evening they appeared before Col. A. E. Bywater J.P., and were remanded in custody. They gave their names as James Baker, aged 33, and Charles Mayer M, both Montreal. Several more cheques on banks in Belleville and Lindsay were also among their belongings.

MARKETING ACT IS DEFENDED

the president called upon James F. Hill, M.P.P., for East Hastings, who remarked "it looked well for the Conservative party to see so many out and so much enthusiasm displayed. The election at last Fund declared the speaker, was made the most stupid leader in the coming election. Mr. Hill discussed the controversy between the Provincial and Federal Governments and declared, that at the present time, the Province was receiving $200,000 per month for road work and other related projects and that Hon. Mr. Hepburn had said during his regime that not one five cent piece would be given for relief to any Province, that had a Conservative Premier." Mr. Hill also spoke of the deficit in the railways, stating that the same was caused by the poor management during the regime of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and Hon. Mr. King. In closing, the speaker urged upon his listeners to organize their riding and to pay particular attention to the younger element of the party. T. P. Lancaster, M.P.P., for Peterboro County, called upon the association to hold a meeting annually in order to give members of the party a chance to meet to discuss the problems and keep posted on the current issues of the day. The speaker admitted that he would have liked to have seen more of the conventions as a candidate but the party felt he would serve better in his present field and he was the willing to abide by the decision. Mr. Lancaster believed the whole crux of the situation was organization and that the Ontario election surely convinced the skeptics. He urged that the younger people be given a place in the councils of the party and for 1934,000 would be casting their first vote in this campaign.

Tribute to Retiring Speaker

W. E. Thurston M.P. for South Hastings, congratulated the convention on their choice for candidate but declared that any of the men, who offered themselves would have been a worthy representative of the riding and would have carried the election as Dr. A. T. Embury will when the votes are counted. "Mr. Embury is the choice of the convention," declared Mr. Thurston "and everyone should whole heartedly get behind their candidate and help him in the winning fight." Mr. Thurston was given the honor of introducing the guest speaker of the afternoon, declaring the Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture was a native of Ontario, having been born in Huron County and a grandnephew to the district of Marmora, where he spent some years with Methodist of the Methodist ministry trades' his career to Western Canada, thence overseas and then back to the west, where he operated a farm on a large scale. From this farm he was chosen as a candidate for the Dominion House and on his election was selected for the portfolio of Minister of Agriculture, although as Mr. Weir had often stated, he knew nothing about politics" to which Premier Bennett replied, "I want a Minister of Agriculture." Before the guest speaker started his address, former pupils of the school in which he taught at Marmora read an address of welcome, hoping that his short visit would be one of pleasure and that at a future time he might be able to come back and spend a week among his friends with the cares of state laid aside.

Hon. Robert Weir was given a hearty welcome and in opening his address thanked all for their thoughtfulness, remarking that his most pleasant days were spent in the Marmora school. He spoke of the beauty spots in and about Marmora that he often visited and that he always had a warm spot in his heart for the people as he was a young man when he first came to Marmora and all were so kind. He congratulated the candidate on his success at the convention and also pledged those who made the contest possible, believing that stem should come forward to help in these strenuous times. He traced his political career stating that he had no desire to enter the political arena but was convinced, that the Conservative party had the right policy for a growing country like Canada. "Finally I listened to the solicitation of friends and became a candidate although I had only attended one political meeting since my return from overseas in 1919 until 1930," said Mr. Weir, "We came out of the war realized our own humility and we were backward in coming forward but the war certainly did give us a broader outlook and a different vision." The speaker told of the location of his farm in the west, it being situated in a Scandanavian settlement.

Story of a Job

The speaker compared his leaving the farm to taking his place in Parliament as a home coming for he declared, the System was exactly the same only on a larger scale. "I was given a staff of 2,500 to control," said Hon. Mr. Weir "and after looking over the situation I concluded the principle was the same in running that staff as running a farm. After considering the whole question from a farmer's viewpoint I decided that farmers should supply the best quality at the least cost and, then it was a job for the government and my department to find a market for that produce. The second problem was to give more benefits to the primary producer and thirdly to devise a means to keep young farmers on the land. I was said aim of the same opinion that the young people are the greatest problem we have to face in this Dominion and with this in mind, I started to form a Canadian wide junior boys' and girls' club, the members to grow up with a National viewpoint. The younger movement is a living thing and gives the younger citizen a farmer's outlook on things generally."

"I saw" continued the speaker, "that we were producing more than we were selling and my first job was to set about finding a market for the surplus produce and I tried to look at every side of the question from the consumer's point of view for I believed only true democracy could ever be giving satisfaction to the primary producer. In it true the government has been criticized and the chief criticism has been that the government has restricted markets by a high tariff and secondly a personal attack has been carried on against the President of this Institution, Hon. R. B. Bennett. As for the second criticism, I can truthfully say, that the attack has been most unwarranted and that the Premier has carried on, when he was physically ill, and that he worked long beyond the time, that he should have. I have always fought for the truth, without regards to party affiliations and propaganda based on falsehood is most misleading and should be checked at every opportunity. "Turning to the first problem of his new job, the Minister of Agriculture quoted figures to show, that trade had been restricted more in the regime of Hon. Mr. King, than in that of Premier Bennett's. He cited cattle, wheat and dairy products as an example declaring that tariffs had been raised to shut out Canadian products in different countries. He told of Canada shipping annually 250,000 head of cattle to the United States from 1926 to 1930 but that in 1930, the tariff was so restricting, that this quantity of cattle was thrown back into Canada with what was already here and consequently the price of beef was driven down.

Principle Worked On

"I worked on the principle" said the Hon. Mr. Weir "of Canadian for the Canadian people and I say that tariffs were raised deliberately against agricultural products coming in but in the past twelve months the government has overcome a great deal and I am looking forward to better times. In looking around, for a market the government sends down the British Markets and the conferences were the result and as much as has been said to the contrary, I believe the first conference was a success and the 1932 conference at Ottawa the benefits of the effort was bent towards securing a market for our farmers. The government wrote to Canadian manufacturers to supply ammunition and although the British delegates were not willing to recommend reduced tariffs yet they were willing to give us a preference market with particular attention to bacon hogs. It was then up to the farmers to have some control after the production period. The speaker showed how the price of hogs was raised by the agreements and I challenge anyone to name any other force that ever put this price excepting those agreements.

The speaker showed the vote registered by the opposition stated that they voted for the dollar being hitched to the pound, then against providing for the dollar being hitched to the pound and then against the dollar being hitched to the pound. Hon. Mr. Weir described briefly the results of the labors of the government with respect to agreements with other countries, declaring they were all working for the best interests of the Dominion. He also described briefly due to the late hour, the pronouncements of the Hon. Mr. King on his Western tour in 1933 showing the divergment in his addresses in different parts of the western provinces. Turning to the Natural Products Marketing Act, he stated the legislation gave some control of produce after it leaves the farm and that it was for parliament to the primary producer and that it was simple enough to be effective and yet sound in principle. "On the primary producer" said Hon. Mr. Weir "depends the prosperity of this Dominion. At the close of the meeting Mr. T. P. Lancaster M.P.P. moved a vote of thanks to the speaker and expressed the confidence of the convention in the leadership of the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett. The convention closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

SUNDAY TRUCKING TO BE RESTRICTED

Attorney-General Looks Over Report of Check-up

Toronto, May 30 (CP)—Vigorous action to restrict Sunday trucking on Ontario's highways was promised yesterday by Attorney-General Arthur W. Roebuck as he considered a report submitted to him covered on a recent Sunday less than 150 trucks on the highways carried "perishable" goods.

"This condition must be brought to an end," Mr. Roebuck declared. "A trucking company has no more right to operate more than any other industry. I am taking this matter up with the Highway Department and unless a drastic change takes place at once in this regard vigorous action will be looked for."

The report prepared under the direction of Inspector J. A. Grant, was the result of a check made Sunday, May 19, when tests were made at several points in the Province showed of some 1,700 trucks examined, only 143 were carrying goods, which might be considered perishable and therefore would have to be moved speedily.

Of the 143 trucks which the police considered were on the highway unnecessarily, 108 carried milk and 35 others, other perishable goods.

Dionnes Visited By Hon. Mr. Croll

Callander, Ont., May 30 (CP)—Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare, paid a visit to the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne after the broadcast ceremonies in connection with the quintuplets' first birthday, it was revealed Wednesday.

The Minister, under whose department the babies are special wards of the King remained with the parents half an hour.

He had nothing to say about the interview but appeared pleased. It was understood a definite proposition was made seeking a better understanding between the Ontario government and the parents, who have objected to the legislation governing their famous children, and that Oliva Dionne wished to consult Leo Kegrin and Leon Dionne his managers. Kervin was in the house during the interview but took no part in it.

Refreshing Frankness Covered His Record

Hamilton, May 30 (CP)—John May, of Toronto, whose "refreshing frankness" so engaged Magistrate H. A. Burbidge in Police Court a week ago, hit the dust in court today. The Toronto Austrian who assumed the name Hall had never been in trouble before with the exception of being jailed in Austria for refusing to do the goose step, was found to have a record. He was given three months definite and two months indefinite in the Ontario Reformatory on a charge of receiving stolen goods.

FACTS ABOUT PROPER CARE OF THE MOUTH

The Mouth is a Prolific Breeding Place of Germs

(By Louis H. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.) Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Although the idea may shock you, it is nevertheless, an inconvincible fact that the mouth is probably the body's most prolific breeding place of virulent and dangerous germs. It is astonishing to note its number and variety to be found in this area.

Small wonder then that when resistance is lowered, we so readily develop disease. The tonsils may be the breedign of germs.

Many people have tonsils which are like a sieve, continually pass poisonous products into the system. Although not all tonsils need be removed, enlarged, inflamed and diseased tonsils should invariably be taken out. Tonsils do us no good, are merely sources of trouble.

Then there are the teeth. Particles of food become lodged between the teeth, decay and produce poisons. Often the toothbrush does not clean well in the teeth spaces. Dental floss should be employed by all persons whose teeth are separated.

People whose teeth accumulate tartar rapidly should have their teeth scraped and cleaned by a dentist as often as once every three months. No one should use anything but six months without dental care.

We have as another germ source the bluegrass. We must not heedlessly pull out every tooth that has formed a pus pocket at the end. There was a time when everything was blamed on these abscesses, and teeth were yanked out on every possible occasion. Often such disease pockets can be treated and cured, saving the tooth. But, in any case, occasional X-ray pictures of all the teeth should be made and the dentist consulted as to the best course of procedure.

The gums are also very important in the preservation of the maximum health of the mouth cavity. You all know how common pyorrhea is and how studiously it may resist treatment. This is usually because the body has not been built up sufficiently. You must make the gums healthy by sending rich, red blood into them. Local treatment cannot therefore, always "stop the desired results.

Coated tongue is another bugbear of the mouth. Scrub it well every day when you do your teeth, but watch your diet and bowels, trying to clean the tongue without attention to food intake and elimination is wasting time on the wrong end. If your stomach and intestines are working as they should, the tongue will take care of itself.

Smoking often produces bad breath. There is also the danger from smoking, especially the pipe, that the burning stream of heat on a certain place in the mouth may cause a degree of irritation that later may develop into cancer. Smokers should also guard against "gum boils" or other sore places on the inside of the cheeks or tongue, and for the same reason. And everybody should get rid of jagged tooth edges and should have rough teeth polished smooth.

Mouth washes and antiseptics help to keep the mouth sweet and clean, but don't get the idea that a gargle or two a day will kill all the germs. Everything considered, the mouth probably needs more constant attention than any other part of the body.

DR. BISCH'S DAILY DIET HINT

It has been claimed that if every individual stressed calcium and phosphorus in the diet, he would be healthier and live longer. Calcium is obtained from milk iron is found in cereals, spinach and oatmeal, while phosphorus is to be found in the whole grain of cereal, in lean meat and in eggs.

PATIENT JUMPS OUT OF WINDOW

Kingston General Hospital Scene of Fatal Jump

Kingston, Ont., May 30 (CP) — Alvin Patrick, 50, fractured his skull from a room in Kingston General Hospital to the ground, and died shortly afterwards.

Patrick was brought to the hospital with a badly cut throat Friday. The wound was said to have been self-inflicted.

William Hornbeck, Portsmouth who occupied the same room attempted to save Patrick but could not hold him.

Hornbeck said Patrick waited until the nurse was out of the room then jumped from the bed and climbed a badly cut throat Friday.

It was not known whether an inquest would be held.

Daily Short Story

UN-CIVIL WAR

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Up until a few years ago there was a place in these United States where the War Between the States was not yet over although nearly seventy years had passed since the last shot of that war was fired.

But let us get back to the beginning.

Captain Walter Beard and Lieutenant Robert Sley of His Majesty's Dragoons were wounded during the Revolution. They married and moved westward into what is now Tennessee. The two families settled where a river forked and the town that grew up around them took on their combined names — Beardsley.

In 1860 Cadets Robert Beard and Walter Sley were at West Point, friends, as their forebears had been for generations. It was a girl that started their war—a girl which ladies of their own old, old most. She had come up to the Point to visit her brother. They both fell in love with her and she chose Beard.

When the news of Fort Sumter came to the Point, Beard, like many another Northerner, resigned.

Sley stayed to be called to the colors. The parting between the one-time friends was bitter.

The fortunes of war threw them together but once when they loomed out of the smoke at Antietam, and looked each other in the eye. Although both were armed, neither fired.

They came home to carry on the war. The town of Beardsley was torn wide open. Some of the town supporting Major Beard and the rest backing Sley. In the rest backing Sley. In the recruits the feud became political and with political it became bloody. Each had sons who married and lived far from home but who vicariously carried on the feud, even teaching their children hatred of the family foe.

You know how it is at those parties. You are introduced in a hurried mumble and the introducer goes off leaving you to make your own conversation. Well, Bob and Helen made plenty of conversation and he had taken her home and had been invited to call when they checked up on each other's names.

"You know, Helen," he said, "I never did catch your last name when you introduced me."

She laughed.

"It's Winkers," she said.

"Winkers?"

"Yes, Winkers, B-e-a-r-d, Winkers."

"That's funny," he said unmindful.

"What's funny?"

"Doesn't my name mean anything to you?" he asked.

"I'm afraid I don't get your either," she said.

"My name is Sley."

They looked at each other, all the laughter gone from their eyes. Then, impulsively, she ended the war as far as they were concerned then and there.

She laughed. He laughed. They laughed so hard they found themselves in each other's arms, and suddenly they weren't laughing, they were kissing, and her kisses were salty for the tears. His eyes were misty, too.

"Darling," she said, "we'll have to do something to end this feud."

He nodded. "But what?"

"I know this," she said. "Even if we get your dad and mine to bury the hatchet and persuade your grandfather and mine to forget about the war, we'd have a hard time getting the country to live peacefully again. Oh," she sighed, "it's a terrible problem."

Bob leaned back thoughtfully. Suddenly he whooped with glee. He leaned over and whispered in her ear.

She listened and her laugh rang out to join his.

"O. K. enemy," she said.

No one in Beardsley was surprised when young Bob Sley came home and announced he would be a candidate for mayor. But everybody was shocked when Helen Beard arrived a few days later and withering ly stated that no Sley was going to be mayor of Beardsley if a Beard could stop him. She, too, she announced, was a candidate.

Well, Beardsley and all the neighboring towns are still talking about that election. The folks will all tell you that not a dollar was spent in bribery and no one got so much as a dirty look. It was a party and a picnic, and when it was over in a blaze of glory, Bob was elected by seven votes.

Old Mayor Robert Beard flew into a rage when his granddaughter told him she had been invited to Sley's inaugural and planned to attend.

"I'm going to show him that a Beard can take a licking," she said. "And if you aren't afraid of being laughed at, you'd go with me."

When the old major entered the hall with Helen the mayor-elect rose.

"Ladies and gentlemen," she heard him say, "now that the election is over, I have a confession to make. I told you out."

"Old Colonel Sley rose to his feet and shouted:

"Don't believe it folks, no Sley ever sold anyone out."

"But I did, grandfather, I did," said Bob. He walked to where Helen and her grandfather stood He took her by the hand and led her to the front.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said. "Meet the boss of the mayor of Beardsley. You elected me mayor, but she elected to be my wife.

"Well, Bob," said the Colonel as they drank their first fulep together in seventy years. "I'm glad you didn't take that shot at me that day at Antietam."

"I am too, Walter," said the other. "I wouldn't have missed this for a shot at any dam yankee."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma and Pods Simkins was sitting on Mary Watkins front porch last night talking about subjects and Pods took his new slingshot out of one pocket and a pebble out of another pocket and aimed at a little hunk of paper on the pavment and hit it and made it jump.

Being a good lucky shot and making Mary Watkins think he was grate, and I said, I bet you cant do it again.

Sure I can but I'm not going to try, I dont want anybody to think I'm showing off, Pods said.

Just being a sxnuse, and Mary Watkins said, My, you're modest, Pods, you're certainly modest.

O, that's nothing, Pods, said try-ing to sound even modester, and I said, Speaking of modest, once I fired shooting a real revolver without even taking a lesson, and my very first shot I hooted a pesenger in a match without touching the match, cuy I never tell anybody because I'm too modest.

Just making it up for fun, and Mary Watkins said, My, just imag-ine.

Well while we're on the subject now about the time a burgler was trying to brake in a house half ways up the block, and I leaned out my window with this very slingshot and yeller Bang and hit him rite in the back of the neck and he thawt he was shot for real and ran to bet the hands, cuy I never even mention it on account of all modesty, Pods said.

Being a big lie, and Mary Watkins said, Marcy, he must of been scared, and I said, Humbly crick-ita I bet that was the same burgler that almost burned into me while I was coming home late about 2 o'clock one morning, and I stood out one leg and tripped and then tied his hands with my handker-chief and his feet with my necktie and then ran and got a peleceman cuy I'm too modest I never admit it, in fact I deny it.

Well just then Mary Watkins had to go in for supper, being a good thing for our imaginations.

SPANISH COIN FOUND

Leamington, Ont., May 29 (CP)—A silver coin, believed to be of Spanish origin and bearing a 1774 date was dug up by W. Richards while he was gardening at his home here. The coin is slightly thinner and larger than a 25-cent piece.

TARZAN THE UNTAMED—

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Zu-tag saw the Negroes carry the prostrate man into the hut. He recognized the brown-skinned Tarmangani as the stranger while ago who had danced the Dum-Dum with his tribe.

It was he who, by mastering their leader, had won the savage respect and admiration of this fierce young bull. Zu-tag rose to his full hight, raised his face skyward and was about to scream out a savage protest and a challenge.

His ferocity being tempered with native cunning and caution, he decided to act instead of scream. He thought he would like to save this wonderful white ape from the common enemy. At first he was for entering the village alone.

But seeing how numerous were the warriors about the entrance to the prisoner's lair, it occurred to him that this was work for many rather than for one. So silently, Zu-tag slipped away through the foliage

TANGLED LIVES

By ANN FORESTER

A strange letter . . . A few brief sentences cut short forever what made me very happy . . . realized at the time or our marriage, what a risk we were both taking and how slight the margin for success . . .

It has been strongly beyond my widest hopes . . . " It went on to state the terms of his will, and instructed her to get in touch with Lloyd Weaver, his attorney, in Riverton. She read and re-read the letter, provided her with all of his fortune with one exception and upon one condition. She must return to Riverton for a period of five years and live in the old brick house in company with Mrs. Cameron and Estelle. . . . The exception was a smaller sum which went to Cora Cameron so long as she, too, complied with this curious condition.

There was one sentence which leaped at the startled girl's eyes . . . perhaps an echo of that scene in the home of the ship which the old man had secretly witnessed. Lynne must not marry for the same period of time or she would forfeit the money.

A chuckle from the grave . . . for the old man knew that it would irk Lynne and Stanley to Estelle and her mother to have Joyce in the same home with her own beautiful, travelled, wealthy, but for all that, the one time waitress in the Imperial Commercial House,

Joyce's hands were shaking as she gathered up the loose pages of the letter and she was wounded to the heart. She raised indignant eyes to Kitty,

"Why would he do this to me, Kitty? Why . . . ? Why?"

Kitty's troubled gaze went over the letter—the girl handed to her. Kitty shook her greyfing head slowly. "I don't know . . . He loved you, Joy. . . . Something behind this. . . . Perhaps he didn't want you going aimlessly around the world like this when he wasn't here to give a measure of protection."

"I won't do it! I can't! Five years. . . . I'm 25 now. I won't!"

Joyce's voice broke, and Kitty talked on the tired and bewildered girl in the days which followed, wearing down her resistance.

Through sheer exhaustion Joyce finally gave in. After all she was tired of travelling. More tired than she had realized, weary to the soul. Maybe Roger had been right—that this was his way of protecting her from adventures and the birds of prey always ready to take advantage of a pretty and inexperienced young widow.

Perhaps, thought Joyce wearily, feeling her hotel suite which had cost her over the flashing smith waker, even the placid mervenille-ness of Riverton was better than the eternal wandering over the face of the earth. Five years . . . five years without striking roots . . . Roger had left a great deal to her heart than she could have imagined possible.

Perhaps the old brick house on The Cross would be a haven . . . better than the eternal shifting. Strange people flashing into her life . . . Kitty, Auburn Head . . . and flashing . . . leaving a heartache . . .

Sudden loneliness swooping over her. She leaned against the window, but instead of the blue Adriatic she was seeing the vision of a ship slipping away into the sunset.

GOING HOME

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

The circle was closing. Once again the maidservant was falling into the old pattern. Colored glass . . . crumbling . . . shifting . . .

The fade and gilt and ultramarines of the Orient turning slowly to the neutral tints of Riverton . . . At Bordeaux they took a steamer for Marseilles . . . Kitty and Roger's death Joyce and Kitty had had a serious little talk. It was shortly after when Joyce discovered that Kitty was making plans for entering some hospital when they arrived in the States.

"Kitty—you aren't thinking of leaving me!"

"But there's no further need of me now, Joy. It was different when you were ill . . . I was on the job. But now —well, you just don't need me."

"Kitty, needed you? How can I do now, Kitty—" Joyce's voice broke. "You're my only friend."

"I'll always be that, Joyce—a friend. But I have to feel I'm earning my own way."

"But everything will be the same. There's no one to spend money anything you want, Kitty—Roger would want it that way."

"You can't pay a person for just being a friend—" Kitty's sturdy independence would not be downed.

"Oh, Kitty, Kitty—don't leave me . . ." Joyce's voice broke and cried, "I feel so alone . . ."

A moment the girl stood, looking at the slender shaking figure. Joyce was in a dress of dull mauve and grays. She had refused to consider mourning. Roger loved her in those very color tones in memory now . . . Kitty noticed how thin she had grown. There was an ethereal quality to her beauty, a fragile of wistfulness.

Finally, after an inner struggle I'll tell you, Joy, I'll go if you'll let me get a position. It's got to feel that I'm earning my way . . .

The girl made a little helpless gesture. Her own independence, Kitty. You can be that to the world. To me you're the one true friend I've ever known . . .

They were known as that on the steamer which took them to America. Young Mrs. Cameron and her companion. Miss Dawson. And one pair of eyes saw it on the list of passengers and came beaming to renew old acquaintance— Joyce was both surprised and dismayed to find herself confronted with the stocky figure and sandy mustache of Mr. McManus.

"Mrs Cameron—what a delightful surprise to find you sailing with us!" He flashed his glasses at her in a way which she remembered as characteristic. "So sorry to learn about Mr. Cameron . . . foreone condition though, of course . . . marvel he kept going so long . . . Ah, well—and Miss Dawson! a real lady . . .

The doctor's beam at Kitty was a bit artificial, and he clashed several times on their last acquaintance . . .

"Now . . . and—and Captain Meyers, where did he—"

"Captain retired. He'd been moaning to do that for a couple of years, you know. He's living with his married daughter in Yokohama" "Ah! Mr. Smith—" said Kitty bluntly, asking the question that she knew was faltering in Joyce's throat. "Frank Smith and him?"

A stiffness in the doctor's pudgy body. "Mr. Smith became one of his old enemy, "Mr. Keith left the line several months before it was sold . . . Something about getting into stock raising—or raising thoroughbred horses or some such thing—there was a friend of his—beefy old fellow—a stock broker—I did not listen. Personally, I believe the fellow's a bit touched in the head . . . —not that I'd want that to go any further or be quoted, you know . . . but it wouldn't surprise me if it wasn't why he quit. A fool and his money . . ."

"Now the Lord give me strength —" said Kitty piously after the doctor had left, setting his lobby shadow down the white scoured deck. "So keep from sleeping on that little shrimp! If there's anything I can't stand it's a beefy-eyed!"

"You asked him!" said Joyce, her voice giving no sign of the way her heart was pounding at the sound of Jim Keith's name . . .

"I asked him for his news!" said Kitty wrathfully, "not for his nasal impressions!" She snorted and fluttered the pages of a magazine violently, still loyal to her friendship for Jim.

He had gone . . . disappeared into the world . . . thought Joyce, as the doctor-colonies in her steamer chair and pretended to be asleep. Would she ever see him again . . . ? It was that the end—that erect dark figure sailing away into the sunset . . .

Empty sky and empty blue ocean. And empty heart . . . She turned her head and surreptitiously smudged a tear off her lashes.

Strange to be in America . . . to hear English spoken all about her again. She was home . . . She wondered why she did . . . not feel happier . . . .

It was the middle of summer and people were a white and wilted look . . .

Weariness overspread Joyce's heart. She was mortally tired . . . She dreaded the train journey to Riverton. Above all dreaded the trip alone. Hated to arrive in the old Cameron House without the comforting support of Kitty. But Kitty was spending a week's vacation with her married sister whom she had not seen for years.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"Gold Diggers of 1935" Musical Spectacle in Season's Smash Hit.

A thoroughly pleased audience at the Belle Theatre last night unanimously declaring "Gold Diggers of 1935" not only the last word in musical spectacles, but so replete with novel innovations as to be a distinct "first" — said ridiculous situations that even without the gorgeous scenes and dazzling dancing girls and the catchy music, this newest Warner Bros. musical could have been accounted as a farce comedy and furnished an evening of fine entertainment.

Several things were demonstrated at the local theatre yesterday for the first time. Busby Berkely is as great a production director as he is a producer of dance numbers; second, that Dick Powell is improving with each performance and is now a finished actor as well as singer; third, that the spectacles are the type of spectacular show that the three feature songs are destined to be instantaneous hits.

While "Gold Diggers of 1935" is funny, there is a serious romance running through the plot, with Powell and Gloria Stuart portraying the leads. Frank McHugh and Dorothy Dare also have a serious love affair. Grace Bradley, Glenda Farrell, the only "Lady Gold Digger" in the story, takes Hugh Herbert over new ground in the choice of character.

Powell, a medical student who starts as a clerk in a fashionable bucks county resort for the summer hotel, is engaged by Alice Brady, paternal head of Riverside, to escort her daughter, Gloria Brady, on a round of festivities during the summer, as a reward for Gloria's promise to marry Hubert Herbert, an eccentric millionaire who writes articles about snuff, in the fall.

Alice's son, Frank McHugh, has been clipped by a number of wives for $400,000, and when he fails for Dorothy Dare, the fun hooks. Alice is a bit annoyed. She is more annoyed, however, when she discovers that Adolphe Menjou and Joseph Cawthorn, respectively a theatrical producer and a secretary bribed to let her in for a $40,000 deficit on a Milk Fund show she sponsored, and when she discovers that Herbert has been secretly in love with Glenda Farrell, she feels worse, and is reconciled to the wedding of Hubert and Gloria when she thinks that, with all the shocks, it will be cheaper to have a doctor in the family.

Winifred Shaw, former musical comedy star, sings the new featured song "Lullaby of Broadway," and captured the audience with her remarkable rendition of this unusual number.

"Gold Diggers of 1935" will be repeated again tonight and Friday, matinee and night, with 3 other attractions and should not be missed.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Death Flies East" Mystery Rides the Clouds in This Flaming Romance

The shroud of mystery that cloaks a murder in a speeding transcontinental plane provides the basic dramatic themes of the new mystery drama, "Death Flies East" which opened today at the Capitol.

The story, suggesting a young Chicago nurse, played by Ann Sothern, facing charges, who rushes east by plane to obtain a confession from a Sing Sing convict, doomed to die the following day, which is certain to clear her. At Tucson two strange men join the motley passenger group. Arriving in Dallas, one of the passengers collapses and is rushed to have been poisoned. He is sent to a local hospital and the plane continues without him. During a few hours in the air, however, a detective on an unknown mission, is found dead—poisoned. The plane returns to Dallas and the young nurse is held, suspected because of her record and because she had violated the California parole by leaving the state.

Conrad Nagel, featured as a young professor en route to Washington with secret documents, investigates in the young girl's predicament. By a clever ruse, he is able to clear her and trick the murderer into a confession.

Lovely Florence Rice, daughter of sports writer Grantland Rice, is featured as the paroled girl. She was recently seen in "Carnival" and "The Best Man Wins". Others in the cast are Raymond Walburn, Irene Franklin, Reginald Pratt, Geneva Mitchell, Robert Allen, Oscar Apfel and Reid Kelley.

"SWELL-HEAD"

The companion feature on this programme is the comedy-romance "Swell-head". Featuring Wallace Ford, Barbara Kent and Dickie Moore, the story of the spectacular baseball player who suddenly finds the road a surprisingly hard one, is drawing enthusiastic audiences.

Ford is seen as Terry McCall, screwball busher who takes credit for everything but the discovery of baseball in America. He tries to take Mary Malone (Barbara Kent) also, but she shoos him off with the admonition that he stop being a boastful, swaggering bully. The girl really loves Terry, even though she looks distastefully on some of his mannerisms.

When Terry goes blind from a head injury suffered accidentally at the hands of a rival suitor for Mary's hand, he is no longer attracted to play with his team. The blow to his self-esteem is staggering, and Terry disappears from his old haunts. When Mary's kid brother (Dickie Moore) goes searching for his idol, the dropped-egg-tan of swat, he is caught in a rainstorm and is put to bed severely ill. In his delirium he keeps calling for Terry . . .

With an intermingling of romance, comedy and drama the story winds up with the famous ball player arriving at the child's bedside in time to help him through the crisis, and finally regaining his eyesight and berth on the team, besides becoming reinstated in favor for life.

Capitol News Reel is shown at each performance preceding the feature presentation.

Complete shows 2:30; 7:05; 9:15.

man tagging him out before the runner from third had yet reached the plate, thus making the third out, but naturally as there was a forced run, the base runner coming in from third base was allowed to score, after the third out had been made on the careless base runner who had over-run third base." Quite simple after all. In the near future the regulation of "two double plays to be made in one inning, both to count?"

The proprietors of the National Billiard Parlors, Jim and George, have donated 50c cigarettes to the team winning the Belleville Senior Softball League, announced Softball League, today. Incidentally player St. Denis of the Aajmaa Club has been suspended for two games following alleged misconduct during a league game played at Redcross ville last week. President Edgecombe and Secretary Tedworth stated today they intended standing on all such actions that might tend to lower the dignity of the league and insured a warning to all players that a more severe punishment would be meted out in future offences. Incidentally the softball executive also wish it to be known that each club must provide a ball suitable for championship play in the future. The action of Secretary Tedworth in cases is commendable as the success of the league depends upon the manner in which the games are conducted and umpires must be respected as well as the fans who take objection to disorderly conduct on the field.

Knotty Lee's Petes ran into a snag at Kingston last evening and dropped out of the collar position in the O.S.H.L. following a 9 to 4 defeat at the hands of the Pontiac. Incidentally the Pontiac broke out on a batting rampage and hit when hits counted runs. Although they only collected nine safeties, they managed to roll the spheroid at the most opportune time. Then again Mickey Gompeau returned to the wars to strengthen the Petes line defensively while the luckless Petes are still riddled with injuries and absentees, even catcher Cy Wright being pressed into service, though injured, and played third base. As we stated a week ago, this lad Bud Clancy will make it tough for many a club before the season ended. Efforts yesterday substantiating that statement. Clancy is a right smart hurler, and Knotty Lee can't say he wasn't warned of this fact prior to the latter leaving Belleville.

The Picton intermediates made it two straight in the Bay of Quinte League when they defeated the Belleville nine by the score of 17 to 6 in Picton Carvell diamond yesterday. "Letty" Bishop pitched himself out of a bad hole, but still had enough stuff left in the initial frame. Bob Greer hit for the circuit.

The thirty lucky numbers to receive free tickets to Friday night's charity wrestling show, under the sponsorship of the local Kiwanis Club were announced today. Those numbers will correspond with the numbers appearing on the souvenir programs given out to the public this week. The holders of these lucky numbers are requested to pre-

EARTHQUAKE KILLS 20,000 IN QUETTA, INDIA

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

New York, May 31 (CP)—Syd Ray Hayner's acting in the sport "Cavalerie Rusticana" was a little too realistic for Hazel Pandiso in a performance at the Hippodrome last night.

Hayner, as Turiddu, lover of Lola, was supposed to kill the villain Pandiso, who plays Alfio. Hayner rushed forward to carry out this bit of business in the traditional bloodless manner but the prop man omitted and Hayner's tooth landed squarely on Pandiso's cheek.

Despite the fact that the tooth left a wound plainly visible from the front of the house, Pandiso carried on and later sang Tosti "Taglioni."

Philadelphia, May 31 (CP)—Nathan Kaplan was arraigned on charges he concocts cocktails and his budget to realize in a brilliant manner. "I would make it cheaper if water has it and kid myself," he told U. S. Commissioner Edwin S. Wecker, denying a Federal charge he sold raisin wine for three cents a glass.

The Commissioner believed him.

Memphis, Texas, May 31 (CP)—Science today had saved the lives of five newly born kittens. Raised together in a "diamond" chain. A veterinarian performed the operation.

Calgary, May 31 (CP)—When the Irish sweepstakes named of MacDonald and Scotsman are were to the name of Callaghan confusion reigned. Two Irishmen were astonished to learn Hugh Callaghan of Calgary's second fund now touring Canada, was born in Scotland and not Ireland as the name "Irish" the Carrick was Duncan MacDonald.

St. John, Que., May 31 (CP)—Charles Brouillette, fishing in the waters of the Richelieu River for over 25 years, "hooked" the biggest and heaviest bull-pout ever captured in this district. The fish weighed 19 pounds and 10 ounces. A bull-pout weighing 2 pounds is considered a good catch.

Stratford, Ont., May 31 (CP)—Add to the list of freak plants, a large potato. A. W. Youngfelt reaped the harvest. He "hilled" it and started to sprout. The sprout turned and went into the potato again near the surface, coming out at the other end for about two inches.

Washington, May 31 (CP)—Five men and three women want to play Santa Claus and get paid for it—$1,800 a year.

They have applied in the United States Civil Service Commission for the position of Santa Claus, Ind., a post made famous by the late James Martin.

23 PERSONS DIE AS RAGING FLOODS THUNDER DOWN

Night of Terror Spent by Colorado Hill-Dwellers

HOMES SWEPT

Thousands Are Homeless in Worst Flood in Years

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 31. —(AP)—Twenty-three persons were reported dead and missing today as flood burdened mountain streams loosed their thundering menace of death and destruction.

Hundreds of persons were homeless and the property damage in Colorado Springs, Pueblo, and two small villages north of here was estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Emerging from a night of terror and its most disastrous flood in 18 years the harassed farm stock by daylight and saw its eastern bridges gone and communication, power and transportation paralyzed.

Pueblo, scene of the 1920 flood disaster, escaped with some property damage but no deaths. Denver's fears turbulent Cherry Creek would rampage this morning were alleviated as the crest of a black torrent roared into the South Platte River without flooding the city.

Greatest concern today was centred on the still isolated community of Elkons and its neighbor, Monument, where Fountain creek and two high torrents originating in a mountainous region met and overflowed.

Twelve persons, 10 of them unidentified, were on the death list here. The known dead are, Mrs. Ralph Bradley, 30, and Lee Cimino, 35, of Ivywood a suburb.

Five other deaths were charged to floods which swept northeastern Colorado earlier in the week.

Six persons were reported missing here.

They were Mr. and Mrs. Herman M. West and their two daughters, Esther Dursley, and Mrs. Oscar White, 30.

CHARGE MANAGER WITH SHORTAGE

Miss Benson, of Niagara Falls Held For Theft of $31,000

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 31 (CP)—Miss Isabelle Benson, 22 years manager of the Niagara Falls Building Saving and Loan Association, appeared before Magistrate John R. Kuhn this morning charged with obtaining $31,000 from the association during the year 1934 and 1935. Without being asked to plead, she was remanded until June 28.

They were during afternoon she was in the cells until one o'clock this morning when sureties for $10,000 were posted. Today cash bail was set at $10,000, not yet raised, several bondsmen who arranged bail refusing to continue securities.

Special audit of the association is being continued.

Statement issued by the directors states there is "apparent shortage of $110,000.15."

Warrant for Miss Benson's arrest was sworn out by W. S. Byers, acting president, on the advice of the attorney-general. She was arrested by provincial police of the Criminal Investigation Department on a downtown street on the same day as President Wilfrid Mahy, president of the company, died.

Ottawa, May 31 (CP)—The London, Ont., branch of the League of Nations Society in Canada at the annual convention of the society today submitted a resolution calling upon the Dominion government "to take the initiative toward a concert of Pacific nations".

TUDHOPE KIDNAP FEARS UNFOUNDED

Fisherville, Ont., May 31 (CP)—The reported kidnap of two small boys of W. O. Tudhope collapsed today when the father announced he learned the children were safe with their mother.

Tudhope, manager for the United Gas Company in this southern Ontario district near Cayuga, said he became alarmed when the boys disappeared on their way to school this morning. He was told a large auto-mobile stopped, the children and they were hustled into the car.

MOTORCYCLE RACING HIS SPECIALTY

GEORGE PEPPER

Only Canadian ever to place in the United States 300-mile motorcycle race at Jacksonville, Florida, George Pepper 21, of Belleville, Ont., is shown here with his racing machine, a one-cylinder English Newton. He finished third in this gruelling road race. Pepper holds the world mark for Class "C" motorcycles at 93 m.p.h. made over the Daytona Beach course and using the same timing device which Sir Malcolm Campbell used for his record-breaking motor-car trials. Pepper's world mark was made under rules of the Motorcycle Association of United States.

Capt. W.E. Schuster Dies Victim of Heart Seizure

City Shocked by Sudden Demise of Well-Known Citizen

HIS CAREER

Universal regret prevails in Belleville at the sudden passing of William E. Schuster which occurred Thursday evening about eight o'clock in the grocery store of Mr. D. S. LaRue at the corner of Coleman and Church streets. Mr. Schuster had just entered the store and had not spoken when he was seized with a heart attack and fell to the floor expiring almost instantly. Medical aid had been summoned and Dr. Kenneth Bird, Dr. R. W. Tennant and Dr. C. G. Cronk responded quickly, but before their arrival Mr. Schuster had passed away. Death was pronounced as being due to heart failure.

Suddenly Stricken

The seizure which resulted in the death of Mr. Schuster was apparently brief and painless according to statements made at Mr. LaRue's store this Friday morning. Miss LaRue, who was in the store at the time, in speaking of the occurrence, said:—

"Mr. Schuster came in or before eight o'clock last evening. Mr. Schuster entered the store and approached the counter at which his nephew was serving. He generally came into the store each evening at about that time, and usually his request was for cigarettes.

No Word Said

"Last evening he had a dollar in his hand and he entered as usual and approached the counter and laid it down. He said nothing, but after putting the dollar down on the counter he dropped back a pace or two and immediately collapsed.

"My father at first believed he had fainted, and called for help. We immediately went around the counter to where Mr. Schuster was lying on the floor, but sensing something more serious than illness after the first glance, he immediately called the police station for the city ambulance and a doctor. Mr. Schuster was a regular customer and was well known to my father. Generally they chatted informally for a few moments each evening he came in."

Only one other customer, a girl from the neighborhood, called a few purchases was in the store at the time, it was stated.

Mr. D. S. LaRue, questioned later this morning, described the suddenness of the attack was almost startling. "I was totally unprepared for it. After he handed over the dollar and had stepped back a step or two he fell. I hastened to his side, and found that he was scarcely breathing. Mr. Schuster had intended to give me a letter that evening and I thought

DR. BRITTNELL FOUND DRUGGED

Cobourg, Ont., May 31.—(CP)—Dr. F. B. Brittnell of Campbellford, today was found unconscious in a drugged condition in his jail cell, where he was placed last night on a serious charge.

Dr. Brittnell was discovered by Inspector R. C. Burnett and Provincial Constable W. J. Carey when they went to take him to court where he was to appear on a charge of administering a drug or other instrument with the intent to procure an abortion of a Campbellford woman.

He was rushed to Cobourg hospital where he regained consciousness and doctors said he would recover.

Police found three letters beside Brittnell which were said to be addressed to his family and the police. Their contents were not divulged.

Staff Sergeant Coburg, arrested with Dr. Brittnell last night, appeared before Justice of the Peace Leslie Wilson today on a charge of attempting to procure an abortion and was remanded until next Thursday.

C.N.R. BRAKEMAN HURT AT TRENTON

Fred Elliott, Bowled Over by Car While Switching in Yard

Trenton, May 31 (Special)—Fred J. Elliott, 46, of Peterboro, brakeman on the C.N.R. and working on the present time in Trenton yard was seriously injured shortly after eleven o'clock today and rushed to Belleville General Hospital being attended at the scene and instituting by Dr. Jack Farley. No report on his condition could be obtained from the hospital last night afternoon, as he was still in the X-ray room but it is understood that he is suffering from internal injuries.

Mr. Elliott was switching in the Trenton yard and in some unaccountable manner was bowled over by the flanges of a snow plow, that was being placed near the C.N.R. shops. Other members of the train crew, summoned aid and soon the injured workman was removed to Belleville in the McVair and Northey ambulance with Dr. Farley accompanying.

FIVE CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH NEAR TORONTO

Scott Family Asleep at The Time of The Tragedy

INFANT THROWN

Mother Jumps After Rescuing Child From Blaze

Toronto, May 31 (CP)—Five children of Harry Scott lost their lives today when fire swept their two-storey frame dwelling in suburban Alderwood, near Long Branch, a few miles west of Toronto city limits.

Those burned to death or suffocated were Victor, 10; Vera, 12; Bobby, 8; Dorothy, 4; and Sadie, 3 months.

Scott and his wife, Frances, escaped with their three-year-old son Douglas.

One report said it was believed the fire started from an exploding oil stove but this could not be confirmed.

Scott, milk truck driver, arrived home about 4.30. An hour or so later he was awakened by the fire. Hurriedly he lifted his wife, with Douglas in her arms, to the veranda roof. Then he dropped to the ground and caught the boy, tossed to him from the roof. He also caught his wife who leaped safely.

Father Is Held Back.

Scott tried frantically to re-enter the building that was burning fiercely. Firemen held back the crazed father knowing any effort to enter would be hopeless.

Smoke and flames leaped from the frame house as Scott rushed around in front crying, "My poor kids; my poor kids."

Mrs. Scott was taken to a neighbor's home and given medical attention for her nervous condition.

"We were all in bed," Scott related tonight, "I guess it was about 5.30 when my wife woke me up. The fire seemed to have started in the middle room upstairs. I don't know how. I carried my wife out of the window on the veranda roof and took Douglas who was sleeping with me.

Only Time To Get One Child.

"I couldn't get them all in the house for the flames. I ran out without dressing. Douglas was the only one child. It was too hot to get in the house. I tried and tried but they couldn't do anything."

Mrs. George Loftus, a neighbor, said she was awakened by the screaming of the children and when she looked saw flames leaping skyward from all windows of the Scott home.

Firemen found the body of little Bobby behind the piano. He had apparently run from room to downstairs.

Mrs. Loftus said she could see the oldest girl, Vera, trying to fight her way through the flames with the baby.

Beaten By Smoke

Jack McFadden, one of the first to reach the fire, said he tried to enter the upstairs room of the house but dense smoke drove him back. Later he found the body of Victor Scott, his friend.

Firemen were pushing out of every window when I arrived," said McFadden. He told of attempts to enter the building and how the body of Victor's body was found, a physician working unsuccessfully to revive the suffocated youth.

Deputy Fire Chief Ernie Weir said the cause of the fire could not be determined. "If there was a rule of the drastic Lindbergh law, which carries life imprisonment or death. The children's bodies were not expected ready and waiting in wellfurnished Regency rooms of $5, $10 and $20 denominations as demanded by the kidnappers in the ransom notes delivered by the family last Friday.

Tacoma, Wash., May 31.— A $25,000 reward may be offered within a few days for information leading to exchange nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser for a $200,000 ransom, a trustworthy source reported today.

This angle was injected into the case as the Federal Agents prepared to question Harold Lee Thornbergh Law which provides after 24 hours a kidnap victim is presumed to have been slain or taken across a State line.

STONER GUILTY WOMAN IS FREED IN MURDER CASE

Verdict Ends Most Sensational Trials in Old Bailey

BOY STRUCK BLOW

No Evidence to Show Stoner Insane at Commission

London, May 31—(CPO)— George Percy Stoner today was found guilty of the Bournemouth triangle murder case and sentenced to death. His co-defendant, Mrs. Alma Rattenbury, was acquitted.

Sensational Trial

The verdict ended one of the most sensational murder trials the Old Bailey has ever witnessed. The couple—the boy and 18, and the woman aged 38—were tried for the murder of the woman's elderly husband, Francis Mawson Rattenbury. The Rattenbury's lived for several years on Canada's Pacific coast with Mrs. Rattenbury spent her childhood in Kamloops.

The jury of 10 men and two women were given by the trial judge Justice Humphreys that even if they were convinced that Stoner struck the blow with a mallet, that inflicted fatal injury to Rattenbury but thereupon completes the youth was insane with drugs and jealousy of his wife, Mr. Justice Humphreys had instructed them there was no evidence to show Stoner—if he was guilty—was insane at the time.

The jury was instructed by Mr. Justice Humphreys there was no evidence on which they could come to the conclusion, if Stoner was guilty, he was insane at the time.

Mrs. Scott was taken to a neighbor's home and given medical attention for her nervous condition.

"We were all in bed," Scott related tonight, "I guess it was about 5.30 when my wife woke me up. The fire seemed to have started in the middle room upstairs. I don't know how. I carried my wife out of the window on the veranda roof and took Douglas who was sleeping with me.

KIDNAPPED BOY SOON TO RETURN

Police Issue Terse Statement For First Time Since Snatch

Tacoma, Wash., May 31 (AP) — Hope that nine-year old George Weyerhaeuser would be returned alive was given official weight today as the boy was reported to be released by kidnappers a week ago.

Even as the United States government was being served by the police with the stringent Lindbergh law in a search for the abductors of the little lumber heir, the first hint was dropped unofficially that the parents would get him safely back again.

Chief William Cole of the Washington state patrol declared tersely this morning:

"The Weyerhaeuser boy will be returned to his parents alive."

It was the first time the first authoritative statement was given out since officially connected with the $200,000 ransom kidnapping case by Governor Clarence D. Martin.

Cole declined to say anything further.

Northeast India Jarred, Garrison is Badly Hit, Troops Preserve Order

Garrisons in Other Centres Escape Lightly

EARLY REPORTS

Complete Estimate Puts Loss of Life at Huge Total

Karachi, India, May 31 (AP)—An estimate that 20,000 persons were killed early today in Quetta, along by the earthquake which jarred Northeast India, was contained tonight in a wireless message from the Quetta wireless station.

The message was one of the first complete estimates to reach here since the earth shock wrecked all communication lines throughout the district.

Before the message arrived, unofficial and unconfirmed estimates had placed the death toll as high as 30,000.

Quetta reported the number of injured was thus far estimated only as "in the hundreds."

Earlier reports had told of the Royal Air Force machines being badly hit with the death of 44 men. This last message said most of the other garrisons had escaped serious damage and various troops had rendered fine service digging through the debris of the city and extricating the injured.

Shook at 3 a.m.

The earthquake hit around 3 a.m., when the three worst shocks, devastating the countryside around Quetta, the northern frontier.

Although the offices of the Civil Surgeon, Colonel Hall, and the Military Accountant-General escaped serious damage, most of the buildings in the town, including the thickly populated native districts were destroyed by the shocks.

Among those reported killed were Meredith Gunn of the Political Department, and his wife and her mother, Mrs. Bradford, an irrigation engineer named Francis and also his wife.

The aviators reported killed included Flying Officer Charles Fletcher.

Previous reports railways suffered little damage and were believed in incorrect as it was said relief supplies and workers were able to penetrate the difficult sections.

Relief Work is Started

Relief work was started at Quetta with hospitals and camps set up on a race course on the grounds of the residence. Supplies were said to be sufficient for the present.

Norman Armstrong, acting chief secretary to the Governor-General sent through a wireless message from Simla, the summer capital, that the extent of the earthquake and made an urgent request physicians and nurses be rushed.

The quake wrecked its havoc in the early morning.

Quetta, India, May 31 (AP)— Forty-four officers of the military airdrome here, including one pilot, were killed in an earthquake which shook the district early this morning.

The entire British railway station and civil government offices were destroyed in a series of three shocks which struck at first was felt at 2.44 a.m. (4.44 p.m. Eastern Standard time).

Four of Five Killed

Four out of five of the population in Quetta, population 24,000, 100 miles to the south, were reported to have been killed.

Every building in the area was either destroyed or seriously damaged.

The shocks were felt severely in the upper districts of British Province.

The populace of Larkana, Shikarpur, the Kutadero spent the remainder of the night in the open, many praying to their Hindu gods.

The quakes were so strong, that even birds were thrown from their nests.

Communication Severed

All communication with the stricken area was severed. Among the reported casualties were members of the railway staff stationed in the village.

The first shocks were said to have spread devastation over a wide area.

Quetta is the capital of British Baluchistan and the southernmost point in the line of communication and strategic railway on the northwest frontier of India. It is situated 526 miles north of Karachi.

The same also is applied to the district in which the city is located, an area of 5,127 square miles.

LETTERS SHOW COMMISSIONERS AS GIVEN BACK

Toronto, May 31 (CP)—Correspondence was produced today to show Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, had voluntarily returned commissioning collected for sale of stock from the defunct Manufacturers Finance Corporation.

Norman Sommerville, K.C., counsel for Mr. Stevens at the inquiry by Ontario Securities Commissioner J. M. Godfrey, K.C., into collapse of the company seven years ago, read correspondence between Mr. Stevens and J. T. Clarkson, receiver for the company, expressing money paid the former Minister be not asked back to Vancouver.

Counsel read a letter, dated Nov. 5, 1929, expressing an offer by Mr. Stevens' return had been received as commissions as British Columbia agent for the company.

"Following the unfortunate collapse of the company," Mr. Stevens' letter said, he thought it "would not be fair" to retain the commissions and offered to return the money if Mr. Clarkson would advise they were not owed even received by him. "This offer was the letter concluded, "without prejudice to my commissions, if any."

Kindly Take to Be

Mr. Clarkson's answer mentioned Mr. Stevens he was not obliged to return the money but suggested it "kindly take to be."

Counsel also read minutes of a directors' meeting, July 16, 1928, deciding Mr. Stevens should "be given commissions to 20 per cent. 18 percent of which Mr. Sommerville contended was paid to Robert Stevens, salesman. He read records to show Mr. Stevens received $2,000 two per cent. for other expenses "and even this was returned when the company collapsed."

Counsel argued against a suggestion, by S. L. Springsteen, commission counsel, there had been any "secret agreement" regarding the commission paid to Mr. Stevens, one of the company directors.

SIXTY YEARS OF WEDDED BLISS IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Garrison Vividly Recall Wedding Day

BOTH HALE, HEARTY

Neither Has Recipe For Long Life But Clean Living

Sixty years ago small boys of that period, on May 30th, "The Queen's Birthday," were in the habit of lighting and tossing fire-crackers under the feet of skittish horses just for the fun of seeing the animals take the bit in their teeth and the buckboard buggy on a rattling runaway down some dusty village street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frederick Garrison, well known, William Street residents just west of the city's boundary line, remember this quite clearly, for on May 30th, just sixty years ago they were married at Thomasburg and on the way home from church after the ceremony their horse became frightened at the noise of the last few firecrackers and took the buggy and occupants on a rattling ride through the main street of the village. Residents applauded the well known young couple as the fine steed clattered past, but the proverbially blushing bride and groom were too busy holding on to respond.

There are many incidents connected with that memorable day of over sixty years ago are recalled by the happy and elderly couple, still active and healthy far beyond their years, with a clarity of exceptional remembrance.

A twinkle of merriment illumines the eyes of both Mr. and Mrs. Garrison as the incident of the fast bogey ride was related, but one other remembrance stands out.

"It was unmercifully warm that day," recalled Mrs. Garrison, "but we all recollect the heat wave we had, and it appeared especially bad because it came after a period of considerable coolness. Some crops were ruined by the continued heat, that started that day."

The wedding ceremony itself, which was performed in the parsonage by the late Rev. Asa Anderson, was a simple one, according to Mrs. Garrison. "It had to be simple because the men were all busy and there just wasn't time to make much of a honeymoon, however, since then we've made out all right."

No Recipe For Long Life

Mr. Garrison, a picture of vigorous well kept age, who reads fine print without glasses at the age of nearly eighty-five, and who had never required the services of a doctor until he was somewhere about the age of fifty-nine, when he "caught a cold," has no recipe for longevity. "I have never smoked nor drank, and had lived a fairly simple and regular life. Perhaps that might have something to do with it," he says. But there is added that tolerance of others for a way wish to indulge in habits he does not.

Mr. Garrison, still bright-eyed and active carries on the manual household tasks without the assistance of anyone. A good cook, she has always prided herself on this accomplishment and can boast that the present time that she had a large quantity of home made fat that she might cook up a batch of homemade bread now and then. "Yes, I still know how to make homemade bread, and if there were any more around here to eat it I'd keep on making it; I like it better than the store bought ads. Real cooking is an art that is rapidly being lost in these days, intimated Mrs. Garrison.

Both can claim descendancy directly from two of the oldest families in this district. Mr. Garrison was born on the 2nd Concession of Huntingdon near Lake's Corners. His father was William Garrison and was among the first to clear the land in that section, and his grandfather, Garrett Garrison entered Canada from the United States, rolled up the river to Thurlow Township and settled with the almost virgin growth of timber and uncleared area then in that district. Mr. Garrison's mother was born Emma Badgely also in the district of Huntingdon. Bill Hyne are other brothers of Mr. Garrison. An older brother was by claim to a healthy and advanced age, Garrett Garrison, resides in Bay City, Michigan. Also residing in Bay City is John Garrison. James resides at present on Dundas Street Avenue in this city. Two sisters of the family still survive, Mrs. Miles Reid living at West Huntingdon and Mrs. Geo. Schryver residing in Murray Township. A third sister Mary, died at an early age.

Formerly Miss Fiskle

Mrs. Garrison was born Miss Delia Fiskle and first saw the light of day in Hungerford Township. She was a daughter of Henry Fiskle and Clarissa Gilbert, both of whom were numbered among the United Empire Loyalists of Sidney Township.

Three children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Garrison, a daughter, Mrs. Herbert Thompson lives at present in their 5th concession of Thurlow and a son, Harold Garrison carries on farming in the 3rd concession of Sidney. A third child, Henry Garrison died at the age of twelve.

All his life, except for a brief period, when he worked with the lumbering industry in this district, Mr. Garrison has carried on the occupation of farming. His first farm was compiled by him in West Huntingdon, later moving of the Turner Settlement, near Halloway in the year 1884. For a time also he resided on the Trent Road near Trenton, but retired from active work in 1908 when his son took over the farm and enabled him to retire to a home on William Street in this city.

On Friday last, surrounded by near relatives and a few friends from throughout the section, Mr. and Mrs. Garrison observed the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage, but the little party was all unintentionas one in keeping with the wishes of both. Good will messages were received by the happy couple from many points throughout this district, many happy years of continued happiness and good health.

LATE RONALD A. BLUE

Mr. Gordon Blue was called to North Bay, this week, on account of the death of his nephew, Ronald Alexander Blue, which occurred in St. Joseph's General Hospital, that city, after an illness of only eight days. Ronald Blue was seventeen years of age, born in Vancouver, Alberta, and located in North Bay about four years ago, when the family moved from Belleville to his parents, being Mr. and Mrs. Harry Blue. He is survived by his parents three sisters, Gertrude, Muriel and Hazel of North Bay, and one brother, Gordon, also of North Bay.

Funeral services were conducted at the home Thursday afternoon by Rev. G. Stanley Peckham of Trinity United Church, interment being made in Terrace Lawn Cemetery, North Bay.

MRS REBECCA ROBINSON, (Calgary)

Miss Rebecca Robinson, a former resident of Ameliasburg district, passed away in Calgary, Alberta, after an illness of several months' duration, on Thursday, May 30th.

The late Miss Robinson was born in Thomasburg, 87 years ago, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Robinson. Many years ago she went to Western Ontario and for the past twenty-five years she had been a teacher in the public schools in Calgary.

Many old friends will hear Miss Robinson in this district of her recent death of her advanced years.

Surviving her are five sisters, Mrs. Albert Bentley, Trenton; Mrs. Lawson, Orillia; Mrs. Edward Way, Thomasburg; Mrs. James Way, Ameliasburg; Mrs. Jerry Westover, Wallbridge; three brothers, Mr. Lawyer Robinson, Mr. Walter A. Robinson, Mr. William Robinson, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Mrs. John Robinson, Frankford, Ont. A sister Mrs. A. English passed away two years ago.

The late Mr. Robinson and Miss Robinson are both related to Mr. John Robinson, Sidney Street, Belleville.

MRS. THOMAS WOOD

The death occurred in Belleville General Hospital last evening of Mrs. Thomas Wood, Pinion. Mrs. Wood who was forty-seven years of age was ill about a week in hospital for only one day. The funeral will take place in Pinion where the body was received this morning.

EXCELLENT FISHING IN BAY WATERS RECALLED

At the regular weekly meeting of the directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce on Thursday, Mr. W. N. Ponton and Mr. J. W. Haggerty, county treasurer, were guests and both made brief appearances, acknowledging the welcome extended to them by President J. E. Boyce.

Col. Ponton in his remarks referred to the days when the Bay of Quinte was the scene of excellent fishing and he told of many large catches made in the waters of the bay. Compared with former days fishing in the bay was not so good and he expressed himself as being in favor of stopping all commercial fishing for a few years in the spring and re-stocking the waters. At the end of that time, he felt sure, fishing in the Bay of Quinte would again be first class and tourists would remain in the city instead of moving on elsewhere.

Mr. J. W. Haggerty referred briefly to the financial position of the county and stated that affairs were improving steadily.

The following were present at the meeting: President J. E. Boyce, H. Bernstein, W. H. Morton, H. E. Fairfield, W. C. Sprague, Mackenzie Robertson and Secretary-Manager J. O. Herity.

POLICE COURT

The largest motor traffic court to be presented before His Worship Magistrate H. J. Butler, K.C., since the inception of this court, was in evidence Thursday in Belleville, when cases in all were disposed of.

The most interesting case was a charge of the negligent operation of a motor vehicle laid against Mrs. Catherine Forsyth of Shannonville, following an accident, that occurred on the Holloway Road on the night of May 11th last, when eleven persons were injured during a head-on collision. At the request of the defence counsel the case was enlarged.

Charges of operating a motorcar without a driver's permit and operating a driver's permit so to do, cost three motorists fifty dollars each, without while four others paid ten dollars and costs for operating, or allowing to be operated, a motor vehicle without the proper brakes. Aggregate fines to the amount of nearly $50.00 and costs were collected during the progress of the court, the costs being, for in access to the fines.

Thomas Quatrocchi, Perth, was convicted of reckless driving. The charge arose out of an accident, that occurred one mile north of Derryville on May 11th last, when Quatrocchi was alleged to have crowded an Austin car, driven by Gerald Roag of Frankford, from the highway as the latter attempted to pass the truck which Quatrocchi was driving. A fine of $10.00 and costs was assessed, the costs amounting to $25.20.

Following the court the traffic driving motor vehicles with glaring officers issued warnings that was headlights.

Thos. Graves and Samuel Way Held in Custody For Wounding

With his revolver drawn and firing shots into the air to halt alleged burglars, P. C. Evans apprehended Thomas Graves, 17, of 26 Ormiston Road, as he endeavored to escape the police following their breaking and entering of the Foy and Irwin bottling company building on Pinnacle, at 11.30 p.m. last night. Later P. C. Arnott and P. C. Hughes effected the arrest with Constable Arnott later arresting Samuel Way, 18 years of age, 74 Station St., when he found Way hidden in the coal bin of the building. Way and Graves appeared in the local police court before Magistrate J. Butler, K.C., charged with breaking and entering with the intent to rob. Both youths were remanded in custody for one week.

Shortly after 11.00 p.m. last night local police received information that two men had been seen entering the Foy and Irwin bottling works on Pinnacle St. Immediate investigation by P. C. Evans disclosed that such was the truth, but as he endeavored to enter the building, one of the men came down out the Pinnacle St. door and ran west behind Graham's cold storage building. Constable Evans drew his revolver and fired twice into the air, later catching up with his quarry in a rear shed. Constables Arnold and Taylor joined the chase and hurried to the scene of the trouble. Upon entering the building P. C. Arnott searched the place thoroughly and subsequently found the second escape robber hidden in the coal bin. Mr. Bruce Bolton, proprietor of the business was notified and subsequently released to the police investigate with Sergeant Harman. Nothing, however is reported missing.

Upon their arrival at the police station Way and Graves admitted gaining entrance to the building through the garage door at the rear of the building. In a signed statement Graves told how they said Graves admitted several other local robberies, that have baffled the police for some months past. The arrest of these two youths terminates a lengthy pursuit by the local authorities of local burglaries, it is believed.

SHOULD PROTECT THE BLACK BEAR

Jack Miner Believes it Would be Great Tourist Attraction

Kingsville, Ont., May 29 (CP)—If this Province would cater to the black bear's present weakness for garbage piles, Ontario's tourist trade would benefit in the opinion of Jack Miner, noted naturalist and founder of the bird sanctuary here bearing his name.

"Our innocent black bear, in Ontario has hardly ever had any consideration as a tourist attraction," said Mr. Miner in an interview today. "If given a chance he would be the most photographed animal we have in this province."

Garbage could be placed as bait to attract Mr. Brudn into the open where he could be photographed and Mr. Miner pointed out thousands of persons visited Yellowstone National Park in the United States for the purpose of getting pictures of bears.

WEYERHAUESERS REACH TACOMA

Tacoma, May 29 (AP)—Two wealthy members of the Weyerhaeuser family arrived here today from Minnesota a few hours before the deadline for payment of the $200,000 ransom demanded in the kidnapping of the nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser.

The arrivals were Frederick and Rudolph Weyerhaeuser, uncles of J. P. Weyerhaeuser, Jr., father of the curly-haired boy abducted from a Tacoma school Friday.

Frederick Weyerhaeuser, who came here from St. Paul, is general head of all the Weyerhaeuser business interests. His associate, Rudolph, is from Cloquet, Minn.

The deadline set by the kidnapers for payment of the money for safe return of the child is 6.35 o'clock tonight P.S.T.

INCREASED SALES ARE CREDITED TO PUBLICITY POLICY

The following letter from the Salada Tea Co. is self explanatory. Evidently tea drinking is growing in favor, and of course, tea advertisers in the Ontario Intelligencer reap the benefit. Salada Tea is known to thousands through its persistent newspaper advertising and the firm being firm believers in the adage that "to sell it one must tell it" and by years of period, consistent advertising in the newspapers has proved the wisdom of their publicity policy. Here's the letter:

Toronto, May 15th, 1935.
The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.
Dear Sirs:

You may recall that in January we wrote you to the effect that "SALADA" Tea sales in Belleville for 1934 showed an increase over 1933. Undoubtedly, you will be interested to learn that this increase is continuing and that our sales in Belleville for the first four months of this year show a considerable increase over the corresponding period of 1934. This is very gratifying and we attribute it to the unvarying fine quality of our product and to the use of the "Ontario Intelligencer" as an advertising medium to bring "SALADA" to the attention of the consuming public.

Please accept our thanks for the excellent support you are giving us.

With kind regards, we are,
Yours truly,
SALADA TEA COMPANY
OF CANADA, LIMITED.

Chemistry Of The Garden

Tell How Legumes Thrive And What To Do

Peas and beans belong to a family of plants known botanically as legumes. They have the unusual attribute of taking nitrogen from the air and secreting it in the roots in little lumps easily seen when the plant is pulled up. These are usually referred to as nodules. A special form of bacteria performs the work for the legumes of taking the nitrogen from the air. In some soils these bacteria are absent or deficient and it is necessary to inoculate it with a culture containing it. To accomplish this the seed is treated before sowing.

To gain the maximum yield from peas and beans, particularly in large plantings, the seed may be inoculated with nitrogen culture now commercially available and sold by all seed houses. the cans come in taining complete direction for its use. The various legumes require different cultures, clovers and alfalfa being legumes as well as peas and beans. It would be an interesting experiment for the home gardener to plant a row of inoculated peas and beans and another row which has not had the nitrogen inoculation and note the difference in the vigor and growth of the two rows and the difference in the crops harvested from the treated and untreated rows.

While the nitrogen inoculation is not necessary for the production of good crops, if the soil is fertile and well worked, it is a guarantee of good crops. If peas and beans have been grown in the soil in years past it is already inoculated with the bacteria, and the inoculation is less needed. In soil in which these crops have not been previously grown, it is an excellent idea to try it. A can of the culture costs only a few cents and the operation is simple, requiring no technical knowledge, so you may prove chemically anything peas and beans if you wish.

It is an excellent plan to spade the soil for the beans in advance of planting, working in a good supply of fertilizer and then a light working when it is time to sow the seed. Beans are a warm weather crop and there is seldom much gained by trying to beat the season by early planting.

Man Can Talk With God, Says Noted Psychologist

A new and revolutionary religious teaching based entirely on the misunderstood sayings of the Galilean Carpenter, and designed to show how we may find, understand and use the same identical power which Jesus used in performing His so-called Miracles, is attracting world wide attention

In his booklet
Dr. Frank B. Robinson, noted psychologist, author and lecturer.

"Psychiana," this new psychological religion, believes and teaches that Dr. Frank B. Robinson

it is today possible for every normal human being, understanding spiritual law as Christ understood it, to duplicate every work that the Carpenter of Galilee ever did—it believes and teaches that when He said, "the things that I do shall ye do also." He meant what He said and meant it literally to all mankind, through all the ages.

Dr. Robinson has prepared a 6000 word treatise on "Psychiana", in which he tells about his long search for the Truth, how he finally came to the full realization of an Unseen Power or force or dynamic in Itself that all other powers and forces flow into Insignificance beside it—how he learned to commune directly with the Living God, using this mighty, never-failing power to demonstrate health, happiness and financial success, and how any normal being may find and use it as Jesus did. He is now offering this treasure to every reader of this paper who writes him.

If you want to read this highly interesting, revolutionary and fascinating story, the discovery of a great Truth, just send your name and address to Dr. Frank B. Robinson, Dept. 1933, Moscow, Idaho. It will be sent free and post-paid without any obligation. Write the Doctor today.—Copyright 1933, by Dr. Frank B. Robinson.—Advertisement.

Archie Hyatt is Captured While Asleep in Car

London, Ont., May 31 (CP)—Five days of being constantly on the go, eluding police, proved too much for Archie Hyatt, who broke from Provincial County Jail.

He was caught yesterday getting some sleep in a stolen automobile near Lazan, 20 miles from here. Despite the fact he was armed with a shotgun and a .22 calibre rifle he offered no resistance to the officers.

Hyatt's getaway Sunday was successful conclusion the jail-break at the jail, located at Kingsmill last Sunday in which three made good their escape.

Also the other two Bernard Leavey was arrested at Listowel Wednesday and the third Leo Dionne was taken within a few hours of the escape. Dionne had smashed a cell wall, waylaid a turnkey and stolen his keys and climbed the jail wall to freedom.

All day yesterday police combed Southwestern Ontario for Hyatt, at the same time probing armed robberies at Merlin and Windsor in which he now said to be charged against the captured man.

At Lazan a motor car chase and a pleming mill were entered, a service station was held up at Chatham, an attempt at highway hold-up occurred near Mitchell and an abandoned car was found near Sarnia.

Hyatt was freed from a term in Kingston Penitentiary by the King's amnesty on Jubilee Day. He was arrested, however, just before, and placed in Frontenac County jail pending possible extradition to Virginia.

RELIEF WORKERS TREK TO OTTAWA

Mayor McGeer Refuses Aid And Also Tag Day

Vancouver, May 31—(CP)—Voicing his unanimous disapproval of Camp workers, today laid initial plans for their demonstration at Ottawa on July 1 of all Relief Camp workers in Canada.

Word of reports of endorsement of the march on Ottawa proposed has been received from other provinces where relief camps are in operation. The march is planned for Monday.

While 2,000 Relief Camp workers are entertained at their agricultural existing condition in the camps, the secret ballot taken on consideration of the strike showed less than half that number voted. Officials of the union say 623 voted for continuation of the strike with 370 opposed.

Application by Mayor G. G. McGeer for relief aid until the march is over was refused today by the Mayor. A request for a tag day to obtain funds also was rejected by the mayor.

SOFTNESS BAY WATER CORRESPONDINGLY HIGH

Belleville's waterwork's system is listed among the cleanest cities in a new innovation being formed by the Canadian Section of the American Waterwork's Association.

The new exchange has been initialized in the towns of the members comprising all plants in the Dominion and will cost practically service and statistics to any manufacturer who may be interested with the new headquarters in Toronto.

As shown in the statistics completed of all plants in Canada that only ten other cities and towns in Ontario have water "harder" than that of the city of Belleville and only eighteen others have as much iron content. Too great content of iron is one of the objectionable features while the reverse is true of "soft water". The completed test, the degree of softness of Bay of Quinte water is correspondingly high.

ENGLISH AS WORLD TONGUE

In declaring that nations were slowly but surely adopting English as a world language, Dr. Paul Thorwall of Finland explained to the delegates of the Rotary International Association meeting at Margate, England, why no other living language could become international and why no synthetic language could serve that purpose.

It was in reply to Walter Henderson of Australia, who had declared that it was the curse of the Tower of Babel that was preventing international friendship. People wanted a living common language, one with a literature, one in which they could make love and one in which they could swear, a language full of emotion, he said, the best language in the world that did not speak, he added, was the friendly wag of a dog's tail.

Dr. Thorwall said that no artificial language could ever serve as a vehicle for either diplomatic or commercial conversation, for two reasons: It could not be identically pronounced by different nationals, and it had no literature, and hence could not be manipulated to any extent rhetorically. The former objection, he said, might be overcome through teachers of a common ethnic origin teaching the language in the schools of all the nations interested—but that would hardly be possible, and he concluded:

"But no other nation of the world would like another language to be accepted as a world language. They agree, however, that English is not difficult to learn, and I believe the nations of the earth are drifting toward English."

That a living common language for all races will come because of world unification and will lead to international friendships which would rarely, if ever, be broken, may well be the belief of many persons.

English fortunately is of the type like the English people themselves, it is flexible and easy to learn, adjusts itself easily to the admission of foreign words and expressions in a way which seems to give it an infinitely great chance of becoming the world language than such a language as German with its rugged individuality and its preservation of so many intricate forms. Back of the modern English is of course the strong Anglo Saxon of which some 3,000 distinct simple words remain in modern English together with many combinations. This Anglo-Saxon is largely made up of short words, capable of infinite expression and of a directness which the world needs in every phase of life.

That these monosyllabic words are not only useful to those who lack education, being really the only words many persons know and to business, but to art and poetry is shown clearly enough by the use of the tongue in Shakespeare, the playwright and poet of all time. In his verse of ten syllables, known as blank verse, in a great deal of his work seven or eight of the nine words in a line are of one syllable and Anglo-Saxon and yet they are used with the magnificent command in the expression of human emotion which only that poet was able to realize. These Anglo-Saxon simple words will always remain the background of English and perhaps some day of the world tongue.

English is far ahead on account of the fact that more persons speak English than any other tongue and because of the island's expansion as a world commercial power. And English is gaining year by year.

What effect the trend to a universal English would have will ultimately have on the form of the language itself cannot be foretold. That it will create some changes seems evident, but yet with its history all through the development of the Empire, though the language has come into contact with many races, they have not settled down from Anglo-Saxon which remains the basic language of the people and which becomes the language of those other peoples who come in contact with the English.

If a man should register all his opinions upon love, politics, religion, learning, etc., beginning from youth, and so go on to old age, what a bundle of inconsistencies and contradictions would appear at last.—Swift.

There never were in the world two opinions alike, any more than two hairs or two grains. The most universal quality is diversity.—Montaigne.

Woman apparently is doing everything possible to destroy those very qualifications which render her beautiful, namely modesty, purity, and chastity. It is a blindness which can only be explained by the fascination of that vanity of which the Scriptures speak with such severity.—Pope Pius XI.

I like men who are temperate and moderate in everything. An excessive zeal for that which is good, though it may not be offensive to me, at all events raises my wonder and leaves me in a difficulty how I should call it.—Montaigne.

THROUGH GROWTH

Where do they go, I wonder,
The hates we once have known
That fore our hearts asunder,
The loves we have outgrown?

How can they wholly leave us
When once they filled the hours?
How can they cease to grieve us,
Or bring us joy's bright downers?

As on a hill, one standing
Can glimpse the land's far verge,
So, from time's knightly commanding,
We see new realms emerge.

When we grow wiser, better,
We still must cast aside
The hate that was a feller,
The love which strangely died.

And year by year, confessing
The miracle of change,
We find ourselves expressing
Hopes new and visions strange.

MAKING A SPEECH on a street corner in Toronto on the "Corruptibility of the Police Force" would be a test of any man's nerve, yet this was one of the tests applied to Dr. Edmund T. Guest during his student days. Was his face red when a cop stepped up to the soap box around which was gathered the usual curious crowd listening to the young student read a speech prepared for him by those responsible for his appearance, and asked him what the subject of his address was? Dr. Guest delivered an address on education in Belleville Wednesday evening, and this story was told on him by his introducer, Dr. W. A. Paul, of Tweed, a classmate of University days, who stated Eddie Guest was always a glib talker, even back in freshman days and this test was devised to see whether he had as much nerve as "gab". He passed the test with flying colors and lived to become Chairman of Toronto Board of Education as well as a noted doctor of dentistry.

ROOSEVELT'S BLUE EAGLE, listed under the N.R.A., or National Recovery Act, the pet project of President Roosevelt for bringing back prosperity, has been severely flabbergasted by the action of the Supreme Court which has declared the Blue Eagle unconstitutional and thus practically plucked every feather from that gallant bird which has raised its proud head on so many lines of business during the past year or so. With the Blue Eagle out of the race, Huey Long's "Share the Wealth" crusade, Dr. Townsend's retirement from labor at sixty with retiring allowance of $200 a month per person, to be spent every cent during the current month in the United States, and Upton Sinclair's more modest allowance of fifty dollars a month per person, will have a chance to win more followers, as well as all and sundry visionaries who have panaceas to sell, guaranteed not to hurt the patient as much as it will help the panacea seller.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT was given here rein and "God Bless You" by all parties at the beginning of his administration when the economic situation of the United States seemed a hopeless drifting toward the rocks. Even Wall Street which generally throws every fighting quill in battle array when any outsider dares lay alien hands on the financial structure of which Wall Street is the mainspring, balance wheel, and general inside works, has seemed willing to the extent of wishing the President "Godspeed." Now when conditions are on the mend all kind of troubles and obstacles are heaped in the path of the President who right or wrong is brave enough to try new methods and desperate remedies for desperate diseases. As President kilters the United States has an unenviable record. Let's hope for Franklin Delano Roosevelt a more glorious finish.

by

T. E. LAWRENCE

So I was grateful for the cooking and the marketing, which spent one hour, and for the second hour's rest after it which we took by common consent; and sorry when it ended, and we remounted, and rode in pitch darkness up valleys and down valleys, passing in and out of bands of air, which were hot in the confined hollows, but fresh and stirring in the open places. The ground under foot must have been sandy, because the silence of our passage hurt my straining ears, and smooth, for I was always falling asleep in the saddle, to wake a few seconds later suddenly and sickeningly, as I pitched by fashion at the saddle-post to recover my balance which had been thrown, each time by a regular stride of the animal. It was too dark, and the forms of the country were too uncertain, to hold my heavy-lashed, purring eyes. At length we stopped for good, about after midnight; and I was rolled up in my cloak and asleep in a most comfortable little, sand-grave before Tafas had done knee-haltering my camel.

Three hours later we were on the move again, helped now by the last shining of the moon. We marched down Wadi Mared, the night of la dead, hot, silent, and on each side sharp-pointed hills standing up black and white in the exhausted air. There were many trees. Dawn finally came to us as we passed out of the narrows into a broad place, over whose flat floor an uneasy wind span circles, capriciously, in the dust. The day strengthened alarmingly, and now showed Bir Ibn Hassan just to our right. The trim settlement of absurd little houses, brown and white, holding together for security's sake, looked cool-like and more lonely than the desert, in the immense shadow of the dark precipice of Subh, behind. While we watched it, hoping for water at its doors, the sun was rushing up, and the rented cliffs, three thousands of feet above our heads, became outlined in hard retracted shafts of white light against a sky still shallow with the transient dawn.

We rode on across the great valley. A camel-rider, garrulous and fat, came out from the house and jogged over to join us. He named himself Khallan, too friendly this. His exhilaration came after a time in a trite stream of chat; and when it was returned he tried to force us into conversation. However, Tafas judged his company not worth talk about answers. Khallaf persisted, and finally, to improve his footing, went down and burrowed in his saddle pouch till he found a small covered pot of enamelled iron, carefully ing a liberal portion of the staple of travel in the Hejaz. This was the unleavened dough cake of parching, but crumbled between the fingers while still warm, and soaked up with liquid butter till its particles would fill most fastidious capacity. It was then prescribed for eating with ground sugar and scooped up like creamy sawdust in pressings with the fingers.

I ate a little, on this my first attempt, while Tafas and Abdulla played at it vigorously; as for his country Khallaf went half-hungry; deservedly, for it was thought effeminate by the Arabs to carry a provision of food for a little journey, and for the second time we rode fast after it which we took by common consent; and sorry when it ended, and we remounted, and rode in pitch darkness up valleys and down valleys, passing in and out of bands of air, which were hot in the confined hollows, but fresh and stirring in the open places. The ground under foot must have been sandy, because the silence of our passage hurt my straining ears, and smooth, for I was always falling asleep in the saddle, to wake a few seconds later suddenly and sickeningly, as I pitched by fashion at the saddle-post to recover my balance which had been thrown, each time by a regular stride of the animal. Ice Essential to Health

The use of ice and refrigerators in the home is one of the greatest advances of modern times. So much attention is paid by the conservation of foodstuffs, that there is an adage simple and true, to the effect that, "Good ice doesn't cost money." And really there is a bonus for using it, for not only is money saved in the home, but just as important, time, for the health of the family is protected. Medical men are unanimous in stating that the consumption of contaminated food is responsible for much present-day sickness and ill health. So in the interests of both economy and health, this newspaper urges those of its readers who have not commenced the regular use of good ice to do so, for to get in touch with a reliable ice company without further delay.

Of the several companies who serve our city, J. M. Callaghan on George Street, is particularly deserving of editorial comment. For this company can be depended upon to give prompt painstaking service, and the purity of their ice, made by the most modern methods, is beyond reproach. Their drivers are men who have been selected to uphold the reputation for care and courtesy, that has been this firm's keynote of successful business. Every block of ice which leaves their plant is ready for your refrigerator, free from dirt and grime of the invalid or sick-room, or the ice cream of the most critical of guests. It is the belief of many that ice will not keep your refrigerator temperature at a low level. This is not so, good ice will keep the temperature of your refrigerator at an average of 38 degrees. Pure ice is an essential, a reliable company to supply it is an essential too. A telephone call to 2040 or 972 will give you health and comfort for a few cents a day. (Protected 1935.)

Mr. J. Docter, who has been home on a visit will return to New York this evening.

The official opening of the boat house at Bath on July 1st took place when a match was played on the old cricket field between teams representing the Canada Steel Co., and the Belleville Business Men.

Two prizes were played, the Steel Company being the winners of both. The score in the first game was 10 to 3 and in the second 12 to 8. While both teams boast of clever ball players, the work of Dr. Campbell behind the bat was major league calibre. Burgess and Lloyd also did a clean game.

The following composed the teams: Canada Steel Company—L. Burgess, N. L. Lloyd, Hubert Arnott, R. Logan, W. Whalen, H. Whalen, Robinson, R. Lloyd. Belleville Business Men—Dr. Holmes, Hopkins, D. Whalen, Ostrom, Sanford, B. Holoway, Hughes F. Weir, T. Whalen.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bain of St. Louis, Missouri, accompanied by Mrs. Harry Pitchford, Bridge, are making an automobile tour among friends in Belleville and other points in the Bay of Quinte district.

CARRYING PLACE

HIGHWAY ROUTE IS DETERMINED

Will Proceed From Present Highway to Meet Consecon Road

Carrying Place — Culminating months of speculation as to the probable course to be taken by the proposed new scenic highway to begin here at the end of the recently constructed Trenton highway and to end at the Consecon ferry, a government land buyer accompanied by a surveyor made his appearance locally last Friday morning and set to all arguments by purchasing the land required. The new road goes "through the fields", that is in a straight line from the end of the present new highway to meet the Consecon road at a point very near the present home of Mr. Lewis Brown. This is a route opposed by many. They contend that with its ancient legends and its amazingly interesting history, the Carrying Place, first traversed by the Indians and once the proposed capital of Upper Canada, should not now become a bypassed corner as it may if the new highway leaves it sidetracked. However such is the course of progress as history will reveal; and those who object to progress now planning to adjust themselves to the change.

For five hundred yards, from the corner at the post office to the sharp turn at the Dominion Hotel, the present county road follows the course of the old Indian trail from Bay of Quinte to Prince Hay waters. As pointed out by Orrin Gen. Cruikshank in an address here at the unveiling of the memorial cairn last autumn, this is the oldest road in Canada still in continuous use. On this account, if for no other, many claim that the old route should be preserved. However by the proposed change three sharp dangerous turns will be eliminated, one of them the scene of a fatal accident only a few years ago, and all three scenes of minor accidents almost every year. So it seems that "across the fields" the road will go; and if local residents wish to take advantage of whatever trade may be derived from it, they must shift themselves accordingly. One or two buildings at this end of the new section of the road will have to be demolished or moved, one, a shed owned by Mrs. Anne McLaughlin, and the other a barn owned by Mr. J. Westall. Surveyors have been working here during the past week placing stakes and laying plans. No information of the beginning of construction has as yet been given out.

Workmen at Trevive O'Clock Point popular picnic spot of a decade ago, are laboring to remove the decayed and fallen roof of the old merry-go-round, and to get the place in summer condition. Pipe lines have been laid to the bay for the water supply and minor repairs to the buildings have been effected. Already a few of the cottages have been occupied for a time at least.

It is yet a question as to whether the location of the present general store and post office will be changed. If it remains in its present site it will be off the route of all through traffic and will accordingly lose. However since the new road will cross the Westfall property it may be moved to face the west and placed along the line of traffic.

What may be a record for slow navigation of the Murray Canal was hung up early last week when the tug Hector towing a heavy barge with derrick and dredge and facing a strong east-bound current and heavy winds entered the east end of the canal shortly after noon and had not yet cleared the west end at seven o'clock in the evening. The dredge was destined for Brighton Bay where deepening activities are soon to be begun, and the Hector returned much more rapidly the following morning.

A mild epidemic of the prevalent measles is in the community, and several families have cases reported. Consulted regarding the outbreak, Dr. E. A. McCabe of Trenton township M.O.H., stated that there was danger of contagion for an interval of two weeks from the beginning of the term of the disease until the "peeling" stage had passed.

Inspector A. A. Martin, B.A., of Brighton visited the local school on Monday forenoon of this week.

Local softballers made their second appearance at Bayside Park in Trenton on Monday evening when they met the R.C.A.F. nine and emerged on the long end of a 15-10 score. Each of united practice has hampered the local entry in the Trenton league, most of the boys coming from the town and having little chance to get the necessary practice with the local players. The game was not as interesting as it might have been as loose play and errors marred the effectiveness of both teams. Coughlin on the mound for the locals went the route and seemed to have an edge over his opponent, Pafford. Individually the locals outhits almost any other team in the league, and if once they can begin to click they are the boys. A newcomer to the lineup Monday was Bernard "Barney" York, popular defenceman for the Imperials' hockey team. The complete line-up submitted for those who are not able to see the locals play: Al Steenburgh c; Leo Coughlin p; Frank "Fly" Clarence p and 1st base; Percy Smith 1st b; B. York 2b; Vic Willis ss; Ellis (by) Fred "Fat" Hicks rf; Carman Cook cf; and H. Harris lf. The locals next meet Benedict-Proctor at the local field on the morning of June 4th. Fans are urged to attend.

At Wellington last Friday evening one of the surprised and delighted diners of a new electric radio as doorprize was Miss Julia Rowe, seven-age daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Rowe of the Consecon Road. Who are locally brought either of the new cars home, however, as they were won by persons in far distant parts—the Ontario province Motor Show attended the successful celebration.

Mrs. Harry La Touj left on Sunday last for the rock quarry of the Ontario Rock Company near Havelock where her husband is employed for the summer. Mrs. La Touj and family motored up for the day.

Miss Helen MacDougall, after a few days rest at her home here, is feeling much improved and may soon resume her position in Picton.

Phillip Rumpel and Clifford Lee were held in the local school last Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Maud Zimmerman and granddaughter Miss Jacqueline Hazard are in for the summer months of the summer. Miss Jacqueline to attend the local school until autumn when she expects to return to her California home. Mrs. Zimmerman has spent the winter with her son near Los Angeles.

Eager searchers for mushrooms are combing the canal banks almost daily these days. Some tempting delicacies which grow there plentifully. Although termed "mushrooms" by those who pick them, the plants are really morels, a variety of fungus plant, and are perfectly harmless. They may easily be distinguished by their conical shape and honeycombed top and thus leave no chance for inclusion of poisonous varieties. Morels are delicious fried in butter, and though not sold by locals, gatherers are to be found on many local tables.

A million-dollar rain came on Monday evening and returned more fully the following day, bringing relief to farmers who were worrying as to the fate of their newly-planted gardens and their withering meadows. Following it the dandelions particularly sensitive to fairly spring from the ground.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Wannamaker were Sunday callers at the A. A. Wannamaker home.

Service was held in St. John's Church on Sunday evening with the rector in charge.

BELIEVE CAMPAIGN STAGED BY HYATT

Escapes From Kingston Now Sought in Essex And Kent

Chatham, Ont., May 31 (CP)—Chief of police today was in receipt of a telegram from the service station of "Thomas Hooker of Woodside early today by a lone gunman caused a police authorities to inform their station in the Stratford district to Essex and Kent in the belief the robber is Archie Hyatt, escaped convict from the county jail. Since his escape Hyatt is alleged to have staged a campaign of robberies in Western Ontario.

Two hours before at Tupperville a few miles from Chatham, an attempted break in of a garage was reported. James Brown, proprietor, notified police here of the attempt. He said, neighbors were aroused by the noise and the robber left hurriedly.

Hooker, Woodside service station proprietor, related he was aroused shortly after three o'clock this morning by some person pumping gasoline. The thief was working at the light side of the car.

Hooker approached at the left side and attempted to grab the running motor. It was then, he stated, the robber levelled a rifle at him and told him to stand back. He finished filling the gas tank of the car and also a number of gallon cans carried in the rumble.

He estimated the thief took 18 gallons of gasoline before he drove towards Oshawa.

THEY KILLED THE BLUE EAGLE

SCHECTER BROTHERS

It was a test case started by the Schecter brothers, above, live poultry dealers in New York city, which resulted in the United States supreme court decision hailing compulsory enforcement of NRA codes. The decision which virtually demolishes NRA frees members of the firm from one-to-three-month jail sentences and fines of more than $7,000. imposed for selling chickens in defiance of trade practice rules of the poultry code and failing to observe the maximum 40-hour week and the minimum 50-cents per hour wage. In the picture, seated, LEFT TO RIGHT, are Alexander Schecter, Attorney Joseph Heller and Joseph Schecter. Standing, LEFT to RIGHT, Martin and Aaron Schecter. This photo was made following the decision which became the biggest story of the year in the U.S.

Mr. Norman Hitchon and son Carl of Schenectady, N.Y., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hitchon, Donald Street.

Mrs. Wesley Ray of Springbrook, has returned home after spending the past few days visiting friends in the city and vicinity.

Mr. Desmond Bonnycastle, Toronto, formerly of this city was successful in passing his fifth year examinations at the Faculty of Medicine, University of Toronto.

Mrs. R. H. Walkers was hostess at a bridge and shower at her home, Hillcrest Avenue, last evening, in honour of Miss Syra Rose, bride-to-be. A dainty supper was presented with a tea service and after-dinner cups and saucers in Dresden China Rose design. Mrs. and Mrs. J. McIntosh, Sr., presided at the tea table.

Under the auspices of the Young People's Guild of Emmanuel Church a charming Tulip Tea was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Harry Thompson, Catharine street. The guests were received by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Evan Barlow, president of the Guild. The tea table at which Mrs. Curtis presided was bright with multi-colored tulips. Those who assisted during the afternoon were Mrs. Davis, Mrs. G. Bowerman, Mrs. Ernest Thompson, Mrs. G. Marshall, Mrs. M. Bowerman and Miss Ward. Miss Warham was treasurer for the tea.

One of the most delightful events of early summer was the opening tea and bridge of the Ladies' Bowling Club yesterday afternoon. The Club rooms were fragrant with lilacs and colorful with a large basket of tulips. The guests were welcomed by Miss Hilda Wannamaker of the Club, and Miss D. O. Walker, convener of the tea. Miss Mary Robbin poured tea and those assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Meagher, Mrs. Heffernan, and Mrs. Symons. The bridge prizes were won by Mrs. Weal, Mrs. Botsford and Mrs. Clay and were presented by Miss Gray. Six rinks competed for the bowling prize, the winning rink being Mrs. Sandercock, Mrs. Walkin, Mrs. Rutherford and Mrs. Bowerman. Mrs. Bowerman's rink will defend their prize. Many new members were welcomed by the Club.

At the home of Mrs. F. Potter, Charles Street, the Women's Guild of St. Thomas' Church held a delightfully arranged and well patronized afternoon tea yesterday. The guests were received by Mrs. Hinton, president of the Guild, and Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne and were invited to the tea table by Mrs. W. Edwards. The tea table was beautifully decorated with centrepieces of sterling holly, silver candleabra, and candles in pastel shades. Mrs. Hinton presided over the tea and those assisting were Mrs. C. Wright, Mrs. F. B. Brodrick, Mrs. F. J. McKee and Mrs. Hope McGinnis. Mrs. John Walker was treasurer for the afternoon. Mrs. R. Evans and Mrs. A. J. Reid were in charge of the very successful home-cooking table.

STIRLING

SLUM CLEARANCE PLAN DESCRIBED

Mr. A. Nathan Describes Plan in Operation in England

Stirling—On Sunday St. Paul's church was attractively and beautifully decorated with flowers of every variety as the congregation met for their annual floral service on Sunday. Each year there is set apart a Sunday when flowers are used as flower Sunday on which day the members and adherents are invited to bring flowers to the church and anyway they see fit, either as an act of thanksgiving or in memory of some departed loved one and the response is always large. Flowers were brought to the church on Saturday evening when a committee appointed by the ladies met in the building to receive and care for them. Mr. S. Hatton and Mr. Fred Pitcher received them on Saturday evening and early Sunday morning. To the advantage of the congregation under the direction of Mrs. Nina Moore-Jones and Mrs. Ernest Ray carrying out a restful color scheme with the use of bronze and white palms. Each window was adorned with large bouquets and the pulpit had a basket of flowers in the different kinds of plants and cut flowers. The bouquets on the communion table and the baptismal font were also in beautiful garden.

Beautiful memorial baskets were placed on the pulpit. Mr. John Smith place one in memory of her mother, the late Jane Ann Smith. Mrs. Earl Lowry in memory of her father the late R. F. Chandler, and Mr. Thos. Gaines offered also a large Memorial basket in memory of his mother. Besides these there were a large number of large and beautiful bouquets.

The entire service was a fitting one for such an occasion with the hymns and music and numbers rendered by the choir under the direction of Mrs. Nina Moore-Jones appropriate, type. During the intermission Mrs. Ernest Ray sweetly sang in a very commendable fashion the sacred solo (Consider the Lilies). Rev. R. Evans, the pastor, then delivered a very inspiring message from the text found in Luke 12:27. During which he stated "to love nature was to acknowledge the power of God. We long for the Spring time when the flowers will appear that we ever stop to think of the great God who created them for our joy. Are we truly thankful for the bounties we receive from the one who created all things. Can we look upon such a way that no artist no matter how great can reproduce them. We enjoy these things but how few appreciate the Creator through a sad storm or some such thing we are robbed of them.

Rev. Mr. Evans then offered up an unique one and the large congregation joined heartily in singing the hymn by the message given both in word and song.

Belleville Pitching Club Make Schedule for Second League

The Belleville Pitching Club at a meeting of representatives of Horseshoe Pitching Clubs of Belleville, Trenton Stirling and Frankford, Ont., Lake, plans were completed for a league to be formed by the clubs of Belleville and Trenton, and one team from the Frankford and Stirling Clubs. The first two games of the new schedule were played on May the 5th when Belleville went to Trenton the Oak Lake team at Oak Lake and the Belleville Y. M. C. A. met the Trenton A's at the Trenton Airport. The schedule was decided upon for the season.

Lawns Beautified

The attractiveness of the lawns in front of the Stirling High School is a subject of much favorable attention in the last few days and interested amateur gardeners are anxious to know how the final lettering in the lawn was accomplished. Standing out in bold relief letters are the words, STIRLING HIGH SCHOOL in a darker shade of grass than the rest of the lawn. This unusual plan was achieved by Mr. Neville, caretaker of the grounds of the teaching staff and accomplished by applying substance of some kind similar to the part of the lawn which was carefully marked out in the shape of the letters. The result is very effective, when the fertiliser is watered into the soil it changes the color of the grass to a darker green in the form of the letters mentioned. Much interest is being shown in this attraction by the many people who visit the park daily to view it.

Mr. Alex Nathan who recently returned from a visit in England states that great interest is being taken in the gigantic slum clearance plan in operation there, but the process is slow. Great sections of the lower quarters are being replaced by modern apartments with every modern convenience, and large numbers of the poorer people are to be moved from the condemned area in the larger cities to clean and healthy homes where the one, or living is no larger. In Liverpool alone 20,000 houses a year destruction one of the largest of these apartments in the world. Built several months high it is now a huge with a large play ground in the centre for the children, also public swimming pools and everything for the benefit of the people.

But the transferring of these people from the only life and environment they have ever known is a task and will take many years. After living in these apartments the unhealthy surroundings they are often unwilling to make the change, and a carefully planned system of Re-organic education is the only thing that will terminate the existence of the Slums in the crowded cities of the world."

Mr. Nathan visited one of these apartments and saw people transplanted into them, where they everything was available to give the greatest comfort but the whole knowledge of the proper use of these conveniences is appalling. Beautiful white tiled bathrooms and sewer system, the like of which is unknown in this country. In one case he saw a bag of coal kept in the white porcelain bathtub. "The idea is an excellent one" said Mr. Nathan, "but it costs a great deal more than just building the apartment and forcing people into them for

POPE PIUS IS 78 YEARS OLD

Anniversary Does Not Disturb Normal Routine

Vatican City, May 31.—(AP)—Pope Pius reached his 78th birthday today, having served as Pontiff for a longer period than 224 of his predecessors.

The head of the Catholic Church declined to let the anniversary disturb his normal routine.

Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of State, took much more notice of the Pope's birthday than did the Pontiff himself. It was Pacelli's duty to acknowledge the heaps of telegrams of felicitation that arrived from every part of the world, many of them from crowned heads and chiefs of governments.

Prelates who have seen the Pope recently say he is in fine physical condition. He works nearly as hard as when he was elected to the throne of St. Peter thirteen years ago.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Shadow Of The Thin Man"

The Year's Finest Mystery, Packed With Breathless Suspense

If you like chuckles with your chills, grins with your gasps, and smiles with your shudders, don't miss "Death Flies East," a thrilling mystery drama of death in midair, which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

An exciting drama, "Death Flies East" combines mystifying elements with laugh provoking situations. Director Phil Rosen, ably aided by authors Philip Wylie, Albert Demond and Fred Niblo, Jr., has turned out a picture which holds you breathless and tense and never once insults your intelligence.

As the title suggests, the action of the film takes place almost entirely within the confines of a modern air liner eastbound from California to New York. Death strikes one passenger in a mysterious fashion while another barely escapes the lethal grip. The rest of the passengers, recovering from the shock of their fellow's demise, inquest and apprehend the murderer before the plane lands in New York almost everywhere police are waiting to investigate.

Conrad Nagel and Florence Rice in the principal roles perform with finesse and ability.

Swell-Head"

Confidence in one's self is indubitably an asset—but an overdose of it is a handicap.

The proof of this statement is at once comically and dramatically shown in "Swell-head" which is shown as a companion feature. The story deals with Harry Gribble, a home-run king, who has a vocabulary limited to two words—"I" and "me." When it comes to baseball or romance, Terry is—according to himself—unquestionably the greatest. So it is only natural that he is greatly shocked when cronies refuse him wrong to a very large degree!

Rippling the pages of history, one comes upon many important figures who allowed their ego to wreck their lives. Such a one was Brutus, Caesar—they are too numerous to mention. They are many people we meet during the course of our everyday lives, might have continued merrily on their way, if not for a chronic inflation of the cranium.

Few persons are more objectionable than those who spread their insufferable love songs to themselves. Everybody has encountered at least several of these specimens. They ascend to a certain height and then, filled to the brim with brilliance, usually topple off the proverbial ladder at the crucial moment in their lives.

The sages of this world have always been those who are ever willing to learn, as Wallace Ford, the "Terry Kincaid" of the film discloses—which just goes to prove that even a humorous experience.

Mary is married to life by Barbara Kent; and Pickle Moore is seen as her brother.

Capitol News Reel, bringing you glimpses of interesting current events, completes an exceptionally fine program. Complete showing 1.30, 3.30, 5.30, 7.30, 9.30.

Zanuck Heralds Social Upheavals Believes "Les Miserables" Reflects Present-Day Parole Question

Darryl Zanuck is a producer noted for anticipating social upheavals in his screen entertainment. His "The Public Enemy" was the forerunner of the fan which befell Gillingen, and served as the first gun in directing public attention to the manner in which the Parole Enemy No. 1.

His "I am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang" called attention to the conditions in penal institutions and which, when San Quentin prison outbreak, in the course of which four convicts kidnapped the State Parole Board and attempted to use them as shields, was an outgrowth.

"The Parole question is the most vital in the crime suppression," Mr. Zanuck. "That is one of the reasons I chose to make 'Les Miserables' at this time.

"Victor Hugo fictionized the adversities of Jean Valjean in 'Les Miserables', which W. P. Lipscomb and Raymond Bond have done a fine job of screening.

"Jean Valjean, driven to desperation by long sentences for petty crimes, broke parole system then existing in France. Today we are handling it through the other way. Instead of being too drastic and oppressive, we are being too lax. There are two sides of the question to be arrived at. But in our picture we do not intend to argue. Our business is to entertain.

Timely As News Story

"Frederic March, as Jean Valjean, represents the unfortunate humanity while Charles Laughton, as the detective, Javert, symbolizes the force of the law, relentless in its pursuit of the criminal. The lesson is there to be read between the lines—but we take that fight between law and man to the four quiet winds of heaven."

Mr. Zanuck's production which includes such popular and distinguished players as Florence Eldridge who is Mrs. March in private life, Jessie Ralph, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Cecilia Parker and Rochelle Knowlden, who played Madge Evans as a child in "The Last Days of Pompeii," Walt Disney's latest Silly Symphony Cartoon in Technicolor "Robber Kitten", the Belle Latest News Flashes will be exhibited on the same program. Rex, King of Wild Horses and Rin-Tin-Tin, Jr., are appearing in a new chapter of "Law of the Wild" beginning on the Saturday matinee, "Gold Diggers of 1935", the famous musical romance to reach the screen in some time will be shown at the Belle tonight for the last times.

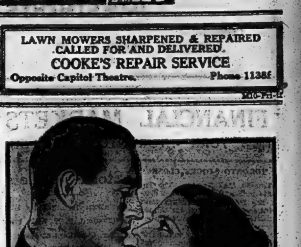
JOHN ST. CHURCH YOUNG WOMEN'S GUILD MEETS



The meeting of the Young Women's Guild was held in the Young Men's Club room, John St. Church, May 27th, Mrs. McIntosh presiding. Mrs. Archibald led the devotional period, especially explaining the spirit of service. It being the last meeting of the year the various reports were read and adopted, Miss Templeton gave a splendid report from the devotional committee of the year's spiritual progress. Mrs. Hackborn in charge of the programs for the year gave an interesting account of the activities during the year, all of which participated. Mrs. Hackborn gave a report on the "Child Study Group" of which she had charge. Mrs. R. Graham gave a report of the activities of the Lookout Committee, which was very much appreciated. Mrs. Thompson gave an excellent report on the Mission Band activities during the "School For Leisure." Mrs. Morley Buck, secretary for the year, read a splendid report of the year's business, also Mrs. Thompson read the financial report of the social committee. The officers for the coming year were balloted for and declared elected as follows:

President—Mrs. Thompson.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Sam Graham.
Secretary—Mrs. Mac Bell.
Treasurer—Miss Marjorie Hill.
Press Representative—Mrs. Nicholls.

Mrs. McNicholl very kindly thanked her officers also those who assisted her during the year.

Miss Marjorie Hill led a discussion based on the last chapter in the Study Group's book entitled "Preface To Peace, a Plain Man's Guide," in which the author summarizes much of the argument of the book in a number of "Short Sentences." Mrs. Bell read objections to an international peace system, most commonly met with ordinary talk. All the members took part in a lively discussion of the points raised, in which a social half hour was enjoyed.

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 31.—(CP)—The Toronto industrial share market closed the month with a firm tone, gains showing in the oil, metal, food construction and miscellaneous groups. Volume was on the small side, nothing mainly in the oils and metals. Trading was again in favor, trading in good volume at a steady price.

Prices pushed up quite smartly from the opening today, led by the oils and metals and on an expansion of volume. Consolidated Smelters sold 3 1-2 higher at 172 1-4 and Nickel returned to the 39 mark while the leaders had gains up to 2-4 of a point by early afternoon.

The New York stock market quickly took a more cheerful outlook over the Thursday holiday, was strong enough to give the Canadian list the buoyant leadership today and nearly all showed additional gains. Papers, Liquor stocks continued slow and brewery issue also were sluggish. Gains predominated in the food, steel and miscellaneous groups.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 31.—(AP)—The Utilities were the best performers in today's stock market, although some of the metal, oil and motor issued specialties were in demand.

Most specialties were content to remain cautiously in view of the crisis confronting the Gold Standard Nations.

Gains of 1 to 3 points were recorded by Columbia Gas Preferred, Commonwealth and Southern Preferred, American Telephone, Public Service, Western Union, U. S. Smelting, Howe Sound, American Can and Consolidated Oil of New Jersey. The late tone was steady to firm. Transfers approximated 1,000,000 shares.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, May 31.—(AP)—While the Stock Market today was still confronted by Foreign and Domestic problems, the majority of brokers and dealers were of a buying than a selling mood.

Aside from fluctuations in Dome and McIntyre, other Canadian shares, including International Nickel and Canadian Pacific, ruled fractionally higher, the curb list also shows more gains than losses, while Hiram Walker was about even. Commercial Investment Trust was slightly higher, Canadian Funds gained 3-32 of a cent at 89.00 cents.

Issues up fractions to around 2 points included U. S. Smelting, Howe Sound, Mclntyre Porcupine Dome, Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, National Distillers American Can Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Westinghouse and American Woolen Preferred.

Inland Steel, Montgomery Ward, Case, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, International Harvester ,pointed downward, Anaconda Copper preferred dropped about five points.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, May 31 (CP)—Buyers came into the mining market today to swell the volume of trading and see a vigorous push upward. An improving metal market and sterling rate were factors in the advance which sent prices and the market's technical strength, the result of several preceding sessions of active selling, to the best figures ever recorded in the base metals, up to 50 cents in the senior golds and up to 30 cents in the secondary golds.

All metal groups advanced strong on the mining section today, stimulated by higher metal prices and a higher sterling rate. Noranda advanced nearly $1 and the cheaper base metals followed suit. The base silvers gains of 2 to 10 cents were boarded for Hudson, Castle, Bear and Premier.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR ATTEND CHURCH ON ASCENSION DAY

Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne Preaches to Members of Preceptory

IDEALS VALUED

Knights Templar of King Baldwin Preceptory No. 6 of Belleville district, sixty-five in number, with Provincial Prior Reid of Kingston, and many past priors attended divine worship at St. Thomas' Anglican Church on Thursday at evening, Ascension Day being a notable day in the history of the knightly order.

Meeting in the parish house, the knights were marshalled by Eminent Preceptor Fred Chapman who with Provincial Prior Reid led the procession from the parish house across Bridge Street, and through the church grounds to the church, where they took seats before the chancel.

Mediaeval Scene Portrayed

The scene with the white robed members bearing crimson crosses emblazoned on the shield over the gowns was one of those unusual events in this workaday, business-like world and threw people back almost a thousand years to the time of the Crusades and the knightly deeds of the Templars against the Saracens. In the thrilling darkness of eight o'clock and against brownish and greenish foliage of the trees and the grass, moved silently these modern exemplars of the devoutest leaders who fought for the Temple of Jerusalem nine hundred years ago. Some were borders of scarlet on their robes, some the maltese cross with the double arm, some the patee cross, the hoods of some were of blood-red and others of white. The ring procession through the planting was unforgettable and made onlookers think of those knights of other days.

The knights are dust
Their good swords are rust
Their souls are with the saints we trust.

In the Church

In the church vestries the choir of St. Thomas' under direction of Mrs. Rose Hunter, was in waiting and as soon as the knights had marched in and taken their seats, the Voice of the minister was heard in prayer opening the service. Behind the crucifix before the open processional cross the choir to the deep accompaniment of the organ with the singing of the Litany of Belief. In the midst of choir the festival Chancel was lowered and the choir moved to the chancel. The white red and white coloring of altar and the bold crimson cross of the rood, the white surplices of the choristers and the knights the purple of the clergy in creating an effect not to leave the mind blank void with color and devotion to create the impression as evensong was solemnly sung by Rector and his Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, vicar of the parish.

Suitable to the day were the words from the 24th Psalm, which was then enunciated—"Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors and the King of Glory shall come in."

"Who is this King of God? The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle."

Exposition of Christ

On these words so fitting to the spirit of the knights templars' chaplaincy, the minister preached after selecting as his text the words of Christ "who have come to the holy temple of God to worship on this day and the date of the feast of the Ascension of Our Lord. The Nativity, Ascension and Resurrection days are duly observed but many do not regard Ascensionide which marks the consummation of Christ's life. Father's Throne making intercession for us. For man, like Moses, must contemplate the ideals and unless he do we miss the mark," said the clergyman. Righteousness and charity and truth are the emblems of our profession, these are the essentials which reveal to us the Christ. The Truth and the Life. To-day we contemplate a coronation.

Depression in Spirit Life

"There is too much depression in our spiritual life, failure to realize the purpose of our Commitment in this world. My brethren, we must let this be banner of the Cross of our Salvation. Draped about this altar is the sacred banner of the church of God Jesus Christ, our George; its white background symbol of purity, surrounded spiritual with the cross of crimson, of old associated with sacrifice."

The preacher benedicted his hearers to "grasp those things which shall open to us the gates of yearning, sing and longing. Heaven is," he declared, "the realization of the eternal purpose of God. So life with its sufferings; its battles and its experience in knightly devotion progress towards the ultimate realization of the purposes of God."

The hymns were sung "O Lord Most High, Eternity King"—"Onward Christian Soldiers," "O Christ Thou Hast Ascended," and "Come Our Hope, Our Heart and Our Crown."

After the service the congregation stood while the members of the preceptory marched out and repaired to the parish house to remove their robes.

Baptist Choir Is Banquetted

In recognition of their faithful and untiring services throughout the year, members of the choir of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church were entertained with a banquet held in the church auditorium last evening.

Miss Furman, the choir leader, presided during the pageant that was presented. Mr. Johnson, a newcomer to the church, acted as song leader, Mr. Parman, and varied programme was presented including:

Cornet solo by Mr. Albert Woodcock; Reading, "Le Vieux Temps" by Mrs. Mildred Lloyd; Solo by Mr. Frank Hicken; Cornet Solo by Mr. Jobson; Piano Solo by Mr. Harold Cornell; Solo by Messrs. Bray, Hitchon, Dickson and Cook and Mrs. Wellbanks, Mrs. Doolittle and Miss Furman; Reading, "A Few Bars in the Key of G" by Miss Furman.

Rev. A. G. Sinclair thanked the choir for their joyful support throughout the year and said that when people thanked him for the inspiration which they received he knew he knew that that inspiration was enhanced by the choir and also anybody taking part in the service. Rev. Mr. Sinclair closed the words that Col. Lindbergh used after he had made a successful conquest of the Atlantic Ocean. He didn't say "I did it" but "We" did it. This brought the fact that greater things cannot be accomplished by one but by the help and co-operation of others.

The enjoyable program closed with the singing of "What a Friend We Have In Jesus."

STREETS AS SPEEDWAYS MAGISTRATE CLAIMS

"Victoria Ave. and Bridge St. are veritable speedways for local motorists. It is an outrage the manner in which cars are driven up and down some of our streets and I advise special police, if necessary, to curb this reckless driving, especially in the school zones", emphatically stated His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. during today's police court proceedings.

The greater part of the proceedings of local streets was also in evidence, when Hilton Hagerman was charged that all infractions of the Highway Traffic Act should be strictly enforced especially on local streets, before serious fatalities occur.

The magistrate's comment was drawn during the hearing of charges of careless driving laid against Robert Gerow and Everett Lickfold, both of this city. The former was found guilty, while the latter entered a plea of not guilty. Both cases were remanded for one week.

Fourteen local dog owners appeared before the magistrate to pay ten payment of their 1935 dog taxes. Numerous excuses were presented, but the penalty of a fine and costs or distance must be upheld and therefore the penalty must be paid or the dog confiscated.

Arthur Mitchell, Bridge, charged Leonard Reid, also of Sidney, of common assault in today's court. The alleged assault arose out of a recent controversy in relationship to certain milk business in the village section of Mitchell. Both parties were bound over to keep the peace for a period of one year. Crown Att. A. Payne K.C. appearing for the defendant and Mr. Hall prosecuting. Interested in the case, as prior to the alleged assault, Mitchell had been ordered to leave the Reid property, but refused to keep the peace.

Following examination front Pte. ton David Green of that town was charged by Detective Izard on the charge of theft. Green is alleged to have stolen $30.00 from Cooker's Theatre, Picton, then later in police custody Green had $17.18 in his possession. He was bound over to the custody of County Constable Jas. Lovelace of Picton.

STRAY ANIMAL IS KILLED BY TRAIN

A stray Bay mare, whose ownership has not yet been determined, was killed on town limits today by struck by the Rutland C.P.R. Express at the Waterworks crossing. The animal was thrown with considerable force from the lawn of the Filtration Plant and shortly afterwards was removed by the city scavenger.

STONER GUILTY

to young Stoner as the person, who caused the injury to Rattenbury and Mrs. Rattenbury was a party to the attack but set the actual assailant, said Mr. Lonsdale in his charge.

If it had been proved to their satisfaction Stoner attacked Rattenbury without justification, and further by committed wounding with intention to cause grievous bodily harm, if not killing, then unless something happened in the case Stoner was guilty of murder, said Mr. Justice Shumbury died four days after he was attacked.

If the jury came to the conclusion it was proved Mrs. Rattenbury was the victim of a brutal and unprovoked attack on the commission of the crime, although Rattenbury might had counselled and procured—that that fact could be regarded as having aggravated to Stoner he should commit the crime, then as an accessory before the fact to murder, said Mr. Justice Shumbury.

The jury shortly declared the verdicts must be separate. There were statements in the course of the trial, which were withdrawn from the person who did not make them, he said.

Woman's Character

His Lordship dealt at length with the character of Mrs. Rattenbury. The jury might say they could not help saying something with her, only dismissed that would not make them any more ready to convict. It took of anything make them less ready to accept the evidence against her if they thought that was proved. Any explanation consistent with her innocence.

"Beware you do not convict her of this crime because she is an adulteress," said the judge to the jurywomen of, you may think, the most unpleasant type.

Stoner was dominated by his mistress, said Mr. Lonsdale and he reminded the jury also they must decide whether the evidence of Irene Edgar, Mrs. Rattenbury's companion was unbiased. She was obviously friendly to Mrs. Rattenbury and had a great deal of interest in the plan in this district and in Wales. On his own initiative he went to England before Mr. Kaye was and as a result there was real evidence of the value of the principle in exchange shipments and crossed the Atlantic. The plan as the Two Way Trade was his and he was the head of the Trade Group organized here.

Came Here When Young

The late William E. Stoner was born in Bath, Ontario, Lennox County, on May 8th., 1873, his parents being the late Rev. Joseph Schuster and Mrs. Schuster. Early in life the family removed to Belleville and for many years his parents were prominent in the life of the city devoting their lives to church and charitable work, the late Mrs. Schuster especially so. The City Mission, the building was erected through their efforts on Church Street, a short over fifty years ago, and of which the late Rev. Mr. McMullen was the pastor.

Education in the public and high school, he entered the Belleville Business College, which at the time was conducted by Arthur Bogle, and upon graduation he went to New York where he occupied a good position for some time. Returning to Belleville he entered the service of the Rathbun Company and was appointed agent at Parkhurst. Later he was transferred to Belleville as agent and remained there for a number of years and Mr. W. H. Rehder purchased the business from the owners, the Rathbun Company. Mr. Stoner in 1908, sold the business partnership to Mr. Rehder and entered the Canada Company. In the year 1924, the Canada Company closed to a joint stock company and he became Belleville Freight Mr. Schuster's interest in the business.

Fraternally Mr. Schuster was a life member of Moira Lodge No. 14, A. F. & A. M. He was one of the charter members and first members of Dept of Quinte Chapter No. 43, Belleville Club, a charter member of the Belleville Rotary Club, and was an enthusiastic yachtsman for when automobiles was popular he took an active interest in that sport. He had a strong desire to become prominent in the business interests of Belleville.

Mr. Schuster was a member of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

During the war on account of his thorough knowledge of the timber and lumber trade, Mr. Stoner was appointed captain in the Forestry Corps and went overseas.

Surviving him and to whom the sympathy of many friends will be extended, are his wife, formerly Miss Cora Alice Madden, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Madden, city of Belleville; two daughters, Miss Dorothy Schuster and Miss Mary Schuster at home; one brother, Mr. Charles Schuster, Pittsburg, Pa.

Obituary

MRS. ROSE ELLA YATEMAN

Mrs. Rose Ella Yateman, wife of the late George Yateman, and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Conquergood of Tyrconnell, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Percy Hawley, Bloomfield on Sunday morning after a period of some weeks. One of the best known residents of the section, she was a member of the Methodist Church, Bloomfield, and up to the time of her illness had been an active worker in social life of the community.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Percy Hawley, Bloomfield and Mrs. Wm. Fisher of Belleville, also by one son who left to mourn her loss, William Yateman of Bloomfield, and by one brother, Mr. Thomas Conquergood of Tyrconnell, also by two sisters, Mrs. Albert of Carlaw and Delbert at Consecon.

The funeral will be held from her late residence on Sunday at 2.00 p.m. to Victoria Cemetery.

when he handed the dollar over that the money was "a bit letter".

In the passing of William E. Schuster, the city of Belleville has lost a worthy citizen; one who contributed the good of his native district and country as a whole at heart. He was popular with many and his acquaintanceship extensive in Canada and abroad.

His interest for several years has been in the development of Two-Way Trade with Wales and Canada, particularly the Bay of Quinte district. A year ago as to have the matter brought before the attention of the British House of Commons recently and created a great deal of interest in the plan in this district and in Wales, on his own initiative he went to England with Mr. Kaye and as a result there was real evidence of the value of the principle in exchange shipments and crossed the Atlantic. ADMITS STONER HIT FATAL BLOW IN JEALOUS FIT

Counsel Makes Closing Plea in Triangle Case

London, May 30 (CP Cable) Emotion his client struck the fatal blow but it was fear of insane jealousy while under the influence of drugs and murder was never intended, was the closing plea of counsel for 18-year-old George Stoner today as the Bournemouth triangle case neared its end. Stoner and Mrs. Alma Ratten-bury are accused of the murder of the woman's elderly husband, Francis Rattenbury, on the night of March 26.

F. D. Cassewell, counsel for Stoner, acknowledged the boy's co-defendants did not strike the blow which caused Rattenbury's death four days later. But he stressed testimony Stoner was addicted to drugs and was under their influence that day, and he was insanely jealous of his mistress' husband. There was no, attempt to escape, he pointed out, and asked the jury to return a verdict of guilty but insane of manslaughter.

Counsel Warned

Mr. Justice Humphreys warned counsel against the suggestion of a verdict of guilty while insane, for either of the accused.

The jury must reach its verdict on the evidence, not on any "quasi-sentimental basis," he declared.

Stoner's father, a bricklayer, told the court his son was born while he himself was in the army. He was the only child. Always backward. He had very little schooling and was physically weak. He believed the lad had fainting fits. But his son was the "best boy anyone could wish," the father added.

Dr. Lionel Weatherby, menial expert, said he had examined Stoner and found he was not mentally deficient but he was backward and sensitive. He had definitely concluded Stoner was a cocaine addict and expressed the opinion it was possible for the drug to almost entirely inhibit the accused's reasoning processes when he was in a condition of great irritability—or jealousy.

J. O'Connor, K.C., for Mrs. Rattenbury, insisted there was no defence against his client if they disregarded the alleged statements snatched from the disordered mind of a woman sodden with drink and hysteria.

Rattenbury was not "in the way" as the prosecution contended, defence counsel said. All were aware of the relations between the accused. The only motive for the crime was to prevent the impending excursion to Budapest, which, he suggested, was entirely insufficient for murder. He described Stoner as "clumsy" pointed out there was no attempt to escape, no chance of suicide, no plea of accident or suicide. It was an act of insane jealousy.

Counsel asked the jury to return a verdict of guilty but insane or a verdict of manslaughter if they felt that understood to a certain extent what he was doing. But he did not from himself to commit a cowardly harm, and certainly not murder, he contended.

Crown Rejects Suggestion

This line of reasoning was rejected by the counsel for the crown, Mr. Croom-Johnson, who contended there was ample motive and both accused had a common object on the night of March 26.

He referred to a report conversation between Mrs. Rattenbury, Stoner and Irene Riggs, Mrs. Rattenbury's companion, when Mrs. Rattenbury was taken to the police station. She had said, "Don't make fools of yourselves," and Stoner replied, "you got yourself into this mess by too much talking."

The Crown declared that was of the greatest significance. He suggested Stoner throughout had been dominated by Mrs. Rattenbury.

Mrs. Rattenbury Stoner had fetched the mallet and Mrs. Rattenbury had aimed a blow at her husband's head but "made a misdi. of it," referring to an alleged statement of Mrs. Rattenbury.

So far as Stoner was concerned, the crown declared the evidence in regard to what he did and what he said indicated a person quite understanding his situation.

ENTIRE DOMINION IS CONTRIBUTING TO CAR BUILDING

Canada's Motor Industry Not Confined to Assembly Plants

Toronto, May 30.—Reason for the wide interest in the Tariff Commission's scheduled enquiry into details of motor car manufacture is not difficult to explain, according to H. J. Aughe, president of the Canadian Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

The fact of the matter is that instead of being confined to a few large plants at Oshawa and the Border Cities, the Canadian car-building industry is really a widespread affair reaching into every province in the Dominion. As one official phrased it, in order to witness all the manufacturing operations that enter into the production of a Canadian automobile, it would be necessary to visit literally hundreds of plants in scores of Canadian centres.

It is understood that on a list recently compiled by the Canadian Automobile Chamber of Commerce there are about 400 names of suppliers, who may be classed as part of the automobile industry in a contributing sense. Those 400 suppliers are located in about 40 cities and towns. These smaller factories make steel, upholstery, lumber, paint, rubber, glass and other commodities which go to make up the Canadian car. The picture of the Canadian motor industry, therefore, as a centralized factory scene, shipping thousands of finished cars to the domestic and the export market, is only a partial one; to be complete it must also include the tributary streams which bring parts and materials from forest, field and mine, and from the relatively small industrial centres scattered from coast to coast.

Since automobiles are being made in the Dominion with higher and higher Canadian content, the economic geography of the industry has altered substantially. This can be appreciated more readily by a glance at the following list, which gives the names of towns and cities in the Dominion which contribute source material or parts to the Dominion's automotive production total:

Ontario—Acton, Belleville, Bowmanville, Brampton, Brantford, Bridgeburg, Brockville, Chatham, Delcon, Dundas, Galt, Gananoque, Guelph, Hamilton, Huntsville, Ingersoll, Kitchener, London, Merritton, Midland, Milton, Morrisburg, Niagara Falls, Orillia, Oshawa, Paisley, Peterboro, Port Colborne, Preston, Renfrew, St. Catharines, Sandwich, Sarnia, Sault Ste. Marie, Smith's Falls, Stratford, Tilbury, Toronto, Walkerville, Wallaceburg, Waterloo, Welland, Windsor, Windsor (East), and Woodstock.

Quebec—Acton Vale, Chambly Canton, Farnham, Montreal, Quebec, Rock Island, St. Hyacinthe, St. John's, Thurso, and Valleyfield.

British Columbia—Fraser Mills and Sinclair Mills.

MISSIONS DECLINE ALARMS CHURCH

Loss of Interest in Missions Feared By H. W. Ackerman

Peterborough, Ont., May 30 (CP) —Delegates to the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church looked today with alarm at the continued decreases in income to the Conference reported by H. W. Ackerman of Belleville of the Missionary and Maintenance Committee. The total of contributions of the Conference last year was $133,-361.31, down $10,562.25 over the previous year, he said.

"We note with humility and regret the serious decline that has been made from $270,961 in 1925 to $133,361 in 1934," he stated. "Most of this is due, we know, to adverse financial conditions throughout Canada and the whole world, but this is not the sole cause. It is the opinion of your committee the decline in revenue is symptomatic of a decline in missionary enthusiasm and in the acceptance of the principles of the Christian gospel."

Rev. Dr. Robert Laird of Toronto, treasurer of the United Church of Canada, addressed further words of warning regarding the seriousness of the financial situation.

On the suggestion of Conference president Rev. Dr. James Semple of Belleville, Rev. R. T. Richards of Napanee was returned to office for the coming year at Conference treasurer.

Rev. Dr. Ralph Sockman of New York warned the ministers against allowing the Protestant Church to serve as the medium for propaganda of any particular sects, parties or groups in these times of controversy.

STOMACH Remedy

Thousands of people who once suffered from indigestion, gastritis, flatulence, dyspepsia, heartburn and even more serious stomach troubles have been restored to health through taking Madsen Brand Stomach Powder. An instance is given by T. F. S. of Lisdoo, England, for whom Macleans sended years of severe gastric pains. He writes: "I was X-rayed at the West London Hospital. When one of the medical board asked what remedy I was taking, I mentioned yours; it may please you to hear he said I could not do better."

Madsen Brand Stomach Powder is the formula developed by the Head Stomach Specialist of a famous London, England, Hospital. It is highly effective in the relief of all sorts of stomach complaints.

When you get Madsen Brand Stomach Powder look for the signature "Alex. C. Madsen" on the bottle. It assures genuineness. At all druggists, 75c. In powder or tablets. Never sold loose.—Distributors: Rigo Agencies, Toronto.

Journal Pays Royalty Tribute

In the May number of the Canadian Geographical Journal a graceful and appropriate tribute is paid to the King and Queen who have won so conspicuous a place in the affections of the British peoples all over the world; and the occasion of the Jubilee is fittingly marked by an article on George V and his wife as Sandringham. The writer spent years on the famous Royal estate, and describes from personal knowledge the simple, unassuming life of the King as a country gentleman, and the Royal couple's keen interest in all that concerns the welfare of their household and tenants.

Mr. R. P. Gorham, in the same number, tells the story of Fredericton, the picturesque little capital of New Brunswick, which not long ago celebrated the 150th anniversary of its foundation.

In another article, by Marion Barbeau, we are transported three thousand miles or so to the Nass River, in northern British Columbia, and given a great deal of information about its Indians and their singular traditions, their famous totem poles, and the volcano that filled their forefathers with terror when it belched molten lava and fire and deadly gases down to the banks of the Nass.

A Canadian who has spent many years in remote parts of China, writes very entertainingly of a journey into eastern Tibet, the character of the country, and the odd manners and customs of its inhabitants. This like all the other articles in the Journal is illustrated with numerous photographs taken on the spot.

The Editor himself contributes an account of a visit to one of the frontier towns of Western Canada, McMurray, at the junction of the Athabaska and Clearwater; the seat of steel and the jumping-off place for Great Bear Lake and the rest of the Far North. From here the steamers of the Hudson's Bay Company carry passengers and freight down the Athabaska and the Slave Rivers to Fitzgerald, where the rapids end navigation, and other boats take them on north from Fort Smith. From McMurray, also, aircraft will take you, with what's short time ago would have seemed incredible speed, into once inaccessible corners of Northern Canada. It is a stirring story, and one that makes us realize the tremendous possibilities of this new frontier in the north.

RANSOM MONEY AWAITS DELIVERY

Tacoma, Wash., May 30.— (AP) —Reports the kidnappers of George Weyerhaeuser had been communicated with and $200,000 ransom was in a secret hiding place awaiting delivery, it was believed today the nine-year-old lumber heir would be released today or tomorrow.

Noticeable relaxation of tension among authorities and a report two contact men had been named by the family last strength to the theory the boy was safe and soon would be returned to his distracted parents.

A friend of the Weyerhaeuser family said the ransom—a 50-pound stack of 20,000 federal reserve notes in $5, $10 and $20 denominations—lay in a secret hiding place ready for the "pay-off".

The Seattle Times said it had positive information the $200,000 ransom was assembled at the Federal Reserve Bank here and sent to the Weyerhaeusers Tuesday morning.

Also adding to the belief the boy would be quickly returned, was the statement of the high railway Tacoma police officer, who expressed the belief today the curly-haired boy had been snatched by "local talent" and was still in the city.

In the FORD V-8 you ride completely surrounded by SAFETY GLASS* and STEEL

*Safety Glass standard equipment all around in all closed models

AGAIN we demonstrate the Ford policy of continuous improvement. The Ford V-8 you order today will have Safety Glass all around without a penny of extra cost. Whether you buy a De Luxe or a Standard model, you are secure in the knowledge that the passengers in your car will have this added protection.

The second standard Ford V-8 safeguard is the all-steel, one-piece welded body. Every panel, rib-brace and bracket is steel — with no seams to open, no part to yield. In laboratory tests, the steel V-8 body has supported a weight of approximately 3500 pounds. This load did not distort the body.

Other safety factors of the V-8 are the bigger brakes, tip-toe clutch and brake operation, finger-tip ease of steering and the larger 30-pound pressure tires with wider tread. The wider transverse springs increase stability—reduce "sway" on fast turns. Have a demonstration soon of Ford V-8 safety. See how it balances V-8 performance, economy and riding comfort.

The extra safety of the Ford V-8 is vital to all . . . It is doubly important when there are children. The Ford has always been a leader in safety. Ford pioneered in the use of the all-steel body and hydraulic brakes in the low-priced field.

CHUCK BARRIAGE OUTHURLS RIDLEY

Behind six hit pitching hurled by Chuck Barriage the St. Paul's A.C. smothered by the addition of four seasoned softball players from Point Anne, broke into the win column in the Belleville Senior Softball League with a clean-cut 6 to 2 victory over Glen Allen's Alemites last night at the Alemite Field. The game provided a pitcher's battle as Barriage, Ridley, hurling for the "Alemites" hooked up in a pitcher's battle with Barriage, the latter receiving slightly the better support.

Not a single run was scored until the fifth inning when the Foster Ward quartet broke out and bagged four runs on three hits, an error and a stolen base. The Alemites came right back to bolster Ridley. The hard hitting right fielder connect for a circuit blow with one aboard, but to make the victory all the sweeter the visiting St. Paul's gang added on the willow for two more hits and two runs in the last inning. The victory elevates the St. Paul's A.C. into a four-way tie for second place in the local softball loop.

The St. Paul's team, headed by Manager Harry Scott, pressed into service four ex-Canada Diamond softball players in the persons of "Peewee" Hutchinson, Phil Lott, Murvyn Green and Bub Caulin, all playing stellar ball for the champions. Hutchinson led the victor's hitting with a double and a single, Green sniffed the pellet for a double and a single, selected two singles. Dickey was the long distance hitter with a homer to the credit of the losers while Lapenotte hit for a triple and a single for the Alemites. The St. Paul's squad outhit the "lubricants" nine to six in their 6 to 2 victory.

St. Paul's A.C.—C. Barriage, p; W. Knott, ss; Lott, 2b; Green, lf; Hutchinson, cf; Rigby and Caddick, rf; Pointer, c; Caulin, 1b; A. Knott, 3b.

Had the local Stewart-Warners won that Overall tie game in Kingston last week, they would be sitting on top of the world with little worries insofar as the O.B.I. softball is concerned. When the Pooles turned on the riddled Petes and trimmed them 9-4 on Wednesday the loss dropped Knotty Lea's crew legs into the ordinary position. Despite its pre-season ballyhoo coming out of the hitting city. Over the week-end the "Radios" face a treacherous task as they journey to Oshawa on Saturday and hop down to Kingston on June 3, Monday. If the local boosters can only win these two tilts, well everything will be fine insofar as the Quinte village is concerned. When the Pooles turned on the riddled Petes and trimmed them 9-4 on Wednesday the loss dropped Knotty Lea's crew legs into the ordinary position. Despite its pre-season ballyhoo coming out of the hitting city. Over the week-end the "Radios" face a treacherous task as they journey to Oshawa on Saturday and hop down to Kingston on June 3, Monday. If the local boosters can only win these two tilts, well everything will be fine insofar as the Quinte village is concerned. Manager Strong and Chuck Mills called off practice for a couple of evenings, but they will be back at it Thursday night and again tomorrow eve. . . Doubtlessly Ernie Smith or Art Calhoun will get the pitching assignment in the motor city, with Jack Williams being saved for relief duties. The right handed that does not get the call on Saturday will be called upon to start the pastime in Kingston on the holiday. . . Incidentally Coach Daly will send Tammy Jamieson right back in the Radios. The league standing now finds the locals atop the pile with one win and no losses. Kingston's victory and a lost as far as Oshawa, while the Petes pull up in the cellar with two losses and a single victory.

Another question to appear in the B.A.R.A. currents baseball program that seems to puzzle local fans is the one that reads, "Runs batted in, how made in one inning, both to count?" Again the answer is "yes". This question is very simple, but just a trifle complicated when read in a hurry. The answer is arrived at due to the fact that each team could score a dozen by the one inning and naturally they would both count. Due to the fact that both contesting clubs would be in the field during an inning makes the play quite feasible and within reason. It must be pointed out that the question stated "in one inning", not a half an inning.

The competition was more than keen during yesterday's annual B. C. I. C. field day. So close were the contestants in the matter of points that only one point separated Bernard "Pie" Wiseo and Holden "Bud" Johnson when the final check-up came. Wiseo raced out Johnson 29 points to Bud's 28. Congratulations are due all the competing athletes as they gave a full day of energy to make the school's field day one of success. Ralph McKay who was the intermediate title, has all the markings of a future track and field star as has Alex Williams, the junior titlist. To Miss Allison and Miss Laughlin much of the credit of the success of the day must be given, as these two physical instructors have labored for one solid year to have their pupils attain the degree of accuracy shown yesterday. In Sylvia Reddick, the new senior girls' champion, Miss Allison has an excellent holds good for Margaret Griffin, the intermediate title-holder for 1935. The junior class proved most thrilling of the girls' classes as Anna Connell and Marjorie Hitchon finished a tie with 18 points each. A 50-yard dash was run off to decide upon the winner and awarded the junior championship, but in defeat Miss Hitchon achieved no little end, she establishing a new junior school record for the running broad jump of 13 feet 7 inches.

The two keenest rivals of the track ne records in the sprints or distance runs were forwards. The track was quite hard and did not afford the sprinters a good foothold for starting purposes. In all, however, the meet proved most satisfactory, but in the absence of Mr. MacLaurin, the genial principal at the B.C.I. V.S., was one of the most regrettable features of the day. Mr. MacLaurin, always a keen follower of athletics, was detained at his school owing to examinations and therefore did not witness the crowning of new school athletic champions for 1935.

Upsets and unexpected reverses were the order of the night last eve. when the first Redcrest game stepped into town and gave the Barriage-Tebeutt-coached Young Canadas a 10 to 4 drubbing, but when Manager Harry Knott's newly-organized St. Paul's A.C. squad clamped the Alemites 6 to 2 the fans sat back in amazement. Chuck Barriage was on the hilltop for the Police Ward gang and had the "Intricanist" well under control all evening. Incidentally the St. Paul's club stole a march on the local softball fans when they went to Point Anne and signed a number of veteran soft-ballers. Harry Knott's gang will not be the set-ups some of the other clubs expected. Skipper Knott has signed Murvyn Green, Phil Lott, "Bubby" Caulin, and "Peewee" Hutchinson, all experienced softballers, to bolster the St. Paul's club to no small degree. Right now things look pretty box in the local softball loop.

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

Indianapolis, May 31 (CP)—Darting 30-year-old Kelly Petillo, who raised his last penny to get in the race, claimed the victor's spoils today for the fastest 500 miles ever turned on the death-ridden bricks of the Indianapolis motor speedway.

The Los Angles Italian-American, celebrating "the first time a car ever stayed together" for him, whipped his powerful little cream-colored speedster across the finish line before a crowd of 155,000 race fans yesterday for a 500-mile grind that took 4 hours, 42 minutes and 50 seconds, 106.240 miles per hour. He will collect a $20,000 cash first prize, $2,000 in lap prizes and thousands more for accessories.

The great speed spectacle was marred by another fatality, the fourth for the 1935 classic and the 21st since the mile oval was first opened to the racing daredevils in 1909.

Clay Weatherly, 25, Cincinnati driver at the wheel of the downed racer that killed Johnny Hannon of Norristown, Pa., in a trial run May 11, rocketed over the north backstretch wall turn at 110 miles an hour on the eighth lap. He was thrown from his pit crew had gone unheeded. He was dead when picked up. His mechanic, Harry Reed-burn, 22, of Indianapolis, remained in critical condition at a hospital today, his back broken.

Petillo is another Los Angles fruit truck driver who turned to racing in the past five years.

The other prize winners and their average: Wilbur Shaw, 105.990;-Bill Cummings, 104.758; Floyd Roberts, Los Angeles, 103.228; Ralph Hepburn, Los Angeles, 103.178; Fred Frame, Chicago, 101.469; Chet Gardner, Los Angeles, 101.129; Deacon Litz, Dubois, Pa., 100.807; Gene Mackenzie, Addington, Pa., 100.599; Chet Miller, Detroit, 100.474.

REDNERSVILLE WINNING TEAM

Defeat Young Canada Club in Senior Softball Tilt 10-4

Taking full advantage of the mistakes of the Young Canada Club the Rednersville team of the Belleville Senior Softball League won their first inter-league game played in Belleville when they downed the Canadas by the score of 10 to 4 on Central Park last night. Signal Wahnamaker, on the hilltop for Rednersville, pitched steady ball throughout and was given air-tight support by his team mates. Wahnamaker limited Gerald Barriage's Young Canadas to six small hits, while the offering of Geo. Cooke-kinson proved no mystery to the "farmers" as they socked out ten lusty hits for an equal amount of runs.

The Rednersville nine forged to the fore in the third frame on hits by Cooke, A. Farley and Wahnamaker, which were never headed, although the Canadas made a determined rally in the fifth to make the score 4 to 3. Loose playing and wildness on the part of Jenkinson in the sixth gave the opportunity to score two runs in the sixth and add three more in the last frame. The homesters made their last stand in the first half of the seventh but a sensational one-handed catch by Cooke in the outfield cut the rally short.

Cooke and J. Farley were the big swatsmiths for Rednersville, getting while Miller and Reid were the best hitters for the losing Young Canada Club. Skeap fielding was good hurling on the part of the visitors gave them a well earned victory and netted them up considerably in the league race. Rednersville's next league game is in Tweed on Saturday.

Young Canada—J. Barriage, 2b; T. Miller, 3b; Cy Barriage, ss; Schrieder, rf; Jenkinson, p; Robinson, c; Brant and Reid, cf; Jenkinson and W. Miller, cf.

TORONTO LEAFS LOSE TWIN BILL TO THE BISONS

BEARS SPLIT

Rochester Divided With Montreal, Due to One Hit Game

The first five clubs in the International League pennant race still are only two games apart but Buffalo Bisons and not Toronto Maple Leafs occupy the top rung today.

The Bisons vaulted into the lead yesterday when they turned back the Leafs in both ends of the holiday double-header, winning the opening contest 8-7 and the nightcap 3-2. After defeat dropped the Canucks to third place, one game back of Buffalo and three percentage points, tp the rear of Newark Bears.

Ollis Carnegie teamed with pitching ace Owen Carroll and Jacobs to dominate the double bill. The veteran southpaw drove in two home runs, one in each game, to run his total for the season to 13. He sent three runs across the plate in the opener while Carroll was holding the Leafs to six hits and drove in two in the second as Jacobs kept Toronto's seven hits well scattered. Marvin Olson got his 4 homer in the nightcap and Wes Schulmerich accounted for three of the Bisons' runs in the same game with a circuit swat.

Newark Bears Split.

After dropping the first game 4-2, the Bears came back to whip Baltimore Orioles 3-0 and get an even break in their bargain bill. Vito Tamulis turned in a three-all pitching duel with Bill Kelly in the first encounter and finally won out in the ninth when Eddie Mayo found Kemp Wicker, third Newark hurler, for a single. The second game was a pitching duel between George Darrow and Ted Heinlman, with the former granting four hits and the latter five, one of the blows off Darrow; however, was a fifth inning single which drove in both of the Bears' runs.

George Scharfold, Baltimore outfielder, walloped his twentieth home run of the year in the first game and in addition cracked out three singles, a double and a triple in the two contests.

Rochester Redwings battered the Montreal Royals to a 12-3 decision in the first game but Pete Appleton hurled one-hit ball in the second to give the Canadians the nightcap. The Wings blasted 15 hits off Ray Prim for a big lead in the first but the Royals came back strong and drove Tony Kaufman from the mound in the eighth when King, Bissonnette and Seeds hit home runs. Jimmy Bowen got the only hit, a single, off Appleton.

Syracuse was the only other team able to win both games, defeating Albany Senators 9-2 and 10-3. The Chiefs drove out five home runs in the two encounters, Hamel hitting one in the first and Moore, Savino, Niemiec and Dallesandro one each in the second. Hayes also connected with a homer for Albany in the nightcap.

Daily Short Story

"BIG HEAD"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

When Biff Martin and Mary Jones became engaged all the neighbors said they always knew they were going to marry. Biff used to carry Mary's books home from school when they were young—and his real name was Bertram, but he was called Biff because that's just what he handed the other kids who taunted him for carrying Mary's books.

Biff drove the Main Street bus and also fought as a heavyweight in the "Y" boxing team. It was after he won the State championship and turned "pro" that he gave Mary a diamond ring.

The greatest prospect since Dempsey's day, they called Biff. And when he won his first twenty professional fights on knockouts it looked as if the sports writers, for once, were right. Then Biff knocked out the heavyweight champ, O'Neill. Mary came to New York to see him fight.

That knockout victory made Biff. He was charged up to fight the champ. Mary, chaperoned by her mother, was at his training camp for two months as he prepared for the title fight. The two women supervised over his diet, and they saw to it that he entered the ring in perfect trim.

It was after Biff Martin knocked out the champ in the ninth round became the wearer of the world's heavyweight crown, and acclaimed idolized. Biff became a celebrity and the more popular he was the less Mary saw of him.

Chorus Girls

When Mary saw Biff's picture in the Sunday paper from New York, sitting at a night club table with her. a down chorus girls draped around him, while two others sat on each of his laps, she decided she was going to do something about it.

Mary went to New York. She called at Biff's hotel. He wasn't in. She waited. She waited until the phone in the evening, when she saw Biff stroll into the lobby with a girl hanging on each arm. Mary went up to him.

Biff, when he saw Mary, hurriedly freed himself from his companions. He advanced towards Mary.

"Hello Baby," he said.

"Don't baby me," stopped Mary. "Yes, I'm glad to see ya," continued Biff, ignoring the bite in her remark.

"Yeah, you must be. That's why I see you so often."

"Aw, I'm a busy man."

"Now listen here Biff Martin," said Mary, "you may be the champ, but you've got a peck to me. And I'm through with you. I don't want to have anything to do with a fellow who becomes drunk with success, who gets a head bigger that a balloon."

In The News

Mary skipped Biff's ring from her finger, handed it to him and hurried out of the hotel lobby. She cried bitterly when she reached her hotel room. She caught a train for home the following day.

Mary didn't see Biff after that, but she read about him frequently because he was good "copy" for the newspapers. She read about his losing in his right clubs and at parties. She read about his engagement to Daisy La Vern. She read about him night-lifing in Florida during the Winter season. And every time she found an item about Biff, she thought of the days when he was just a bus driver and a darn nice fellow.

When Biff did his training for his first fight in defense of his title in the night clubs Mary felt a pain well up inside of her she feared for Biff. On the night of the fight she was in a distant seat of the huge amphitheatre, watching, apprehensively his every movement in the ring before the fight. She closed her eyes sadly when after suffering fearful punishment, Biff was knocked out by George Edwards, in the ninth round.

Biff was still unconscious in the dressing room, ten minutes after his handlers dumped him on a table. They worked over him with ammonia and smelling salts. And finally Biff opened his eyes. He didn't ask for information about what had happened. He knew. He lay back on the table sadly, thinking remorsefully what a fool he had been. His trainer rubbed his body with alcohol. Then he was covered with a blanket and allowed to rest. There were no idolizing crowds there now, such as there were, when he won the title.

Loyalty

There was a commotion at the door, Biff lifted his head. He heard a feminine voice shrieking:

"I'm going in there and you and fifty men can't stop me."

Biff saw Mary Jones forcing her way into the room.

"Let her in," he said, to the uniformed officer who blocked her in an effort to force her out.

Mary came to the dressing table. "Biff, Biff," she said, brokenly, lovingly.

Biff wrapped one of his huge arms around her shoulder.

"It's all right Mary. I'm not hurt. I can lick that guy seven days in the week and I'm going to start training for that fight tomorrow, after we get hitched up by a Judge."

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, I cant acually say definitely that I have a positive pane in my back, but on the other hand I cant truthfully say that I haven't.

It sounds like a quandary, pop said, and ma said, I thawt of dropping in to see Dr. Rower, but everybody says this young Dr. Fix is as good with his modern advanced equipmens and everything, perhaps I'd better see him instead, what do you think, Willyum?

I think medicine has made grate strides since Dr. Rower's day, and if you have a chance to take advantage of a brite young fellow's college you're silly to go to an old mossback that doesn't know a vitamin from a mustard plaster, pop said, and ma said, Yes of course, I think you're quite rite. After all, if you have a chance to be looked through by a modern X-ray machine, why be content to be listened at through an old fashion stethoscope, she said.

Quite, pop said. The duckless glands have always been with us, but until quite recently they were unsuspected exists, and I believe they still are as far as Dock Rower is concerned, he said, and ma said, I agree with you and I'm glad I askrd you. After all, why be carried backwards into the dark ages of the passed when we can keep in step with the future march of progress. I'm so glad I spoke to the matter with you, Willyum. The one dodo in my mind is, how can a young upstart with slicked back hair possibly be as dependable as a man like Dr. Rower with his big serious bald head, even for a problematical case in the back? I think I'll drop in and see Dr. Rower, she said.

I'm very happy to of been of service to you, pop said.

And pop, behind the sporting pags and ma started to do the crossword puzzle with a satisfied expression.
